looke not vpon the synnes of thy people whych serue in the truth. Haue no respecte vnto the wycked studyes of the Heathen, but to the dysyre of those that kepte thy testymonyes wyth sorowes. Thyncke not vpon those that haue walked faynedlye before the, but vpon them, whych wyth wyll haue knowne thy feare.

Let it not be thy wyl to destroy them, which haue had beastly maners, but to looke vpon thē that haue clearly taught thy lawe. Take thou no indygnacyon at them, whych are worse thē beastes: but loue them, þ alway put theyr trust in thy ryghteousnes and glory: for we and oure fathers haue all the same sycknes & disease, but because of our sinnes þ shalt be called mercyful.

For if thou hast mercy vpon vs, thou shalt C be called mercyfull, where as we haue no workes of ryghteousnes: for the ryghteous whych haue layde vp manye good workes together, shall out of theyr dedes receaue rewarde. For what is man, þ thou shuldest take dyspleasure at hym? Or what is þ corruptyble mortal generacion, þ thou shuldest be so rough toward him

* For of a truth there is no man among thē ii.par. bi.c
that be borne, but he hath dealt wyckedly, and i.Iohn.i.b
among the faythfull there is none whych hath not done amysse. For in thys (O Lorde) thy ryghteousnesse and thy goodnesse shalbe prayed and declared, yf thou be mercyfull vnto them, whych are not rych in good workes.

Then aunswered he me, and sayd: Some thynges hast thou spokē a ryght, and accordyng vnto thy wordes it shalbe. For I wyll not verely consyder the workes of them, whych haue synned before the death, before þ iudgement, before destruccyon: but * I wyll reioyse ouer the Gen.xiii.a worcke & thought of the ryghteous. I wyll remembre also þ pilgremage, þ holy makyng and þ reward. Lyke as I haue spoken nowe, so shal it come to passe. For as the husband mā soweth much seed vpon the ground, and planteth many trees, and yet alwaye the thynge that is sowen or planted is not all kept sake, neyther doth it al take roote: Euen so is it of them that are sowen in the world, they shall not all be preserued.

I aunswered then and sayde: Yf I haue founde grace, then let me speake: Lyke as þ husbande manes seede perysheth, yf it receaue not rayne in due season, or yf there comme to much rayne vpon it: Euen so perysheth man also whych is created wyth thy handes, and is lyke vnto thyne owne Image, and to thy selfe, for whose sake thou hast made all thynges, and lykened hym vnto the husbandemans seede. Be not wroth at vs, O Lord: but spare the people and haue mercy vpon thyne owne inheritaunce O be mercyfull vnto thy creature.

Then aunswered he me, and sayde: Thyn- D

thyne owne selfe, that thou arte had in suche honoure amonge the ryghteous. Therfore shall greate wretchednesse and mysery come vpon them ꝑ in the latter tyme shall dwel in ꝑ world, because they haue walked in great pryde.

But vnderstande thou for thy selfe, & seke oute glory for such as be lyke the: for vnto you is paradyse opened: the tree of lyfe is planted, ꝑ tyme to come is prepared, plenteousnesse made readye, a cytie is builded for you, and rest is prepared: yee, perfecte goodnesse and wysedome. The rote of euel is marcked from you, the weakenesse and moth is hyd from you, & into hel flyeth corrupcyon in forgetfulnesse. Sorowes are vanyshed away: & in the ende is shewed the treasur of immortalite. And therfore aske ꝑ nomore questiõs concerning ꝑ multitude of thẽ that perish. For they haue takẽ liberte, despysed ꝑ hiest thought scorne of his law, & forsakẽ his wayes.

Moreouer, they haue troden downe hys psal.xiiii.a ryghteous, & * sayde in theyr herte, that there is no God: yea, and that wyttigly: for they dy. For lyke as the thynge that I haue spoken of, is made readye for you: Euen so is thyrste and payne prepared for thẽ. For it was not hys wyl that men shuld come to naughte: but they wich be created, haue defyled the name of hym that made them, and are vnthanckefull vnto hym, whyche prepared lyfe for them. And therfore is my iudgemente nowe at hande. These thynges haue I not shewed vnto al men, but vnto fewe namelye vnto the and suche as be lyke the.

Then answered I & sayde: Behold, O Lord nowe hast ꝑ shewed me the multytude of the tokens, which thou wylt begyn to do at the laste: but at what tyme & when ꝑ hast not shewed me

The. ix. Chapter.

Eldras hath vysyons shewed vnto hym.

AN Eaunswered me then, and sayde: Mesure thou the tyme dylygently in it selfe, when thou seest that one parte of the tokens come to passe, whyche I haue tolde the before, so shalt thou vnderstande, that it is the very same tyme wherin the hyeste wyll begynne to vyset ꝑ world, whych he made. And whẽ there shalbe sene an erthquake ãd vprore of the people in the world, then shalt ꝑ wel vnderstãd that the most Hyeste spake of those thynges, from the dayes that were before the euen from the beginnyng.

For lyke as all that is made in the worlde hath a begynnyng and ende, and the ende is manifest: Euen so the tymes also of the Hyest haue playne begynnynges in wonders, and sygnes, and the ende in worckynge and in tokens. And euerye one that shalbe saued, and shalbe able to escape by his workes & by fayth: wherin ye haue beleued, shalbe preserued from the sayde peryls and shall se my sauyoure in my lande, and within my borders, for I haue halowed me from the worlde. Then shall they be in carefullnesse, whyche nowe haue abused my waies, and they that haue caste them oute dyspytefullye, shall dwell in paynes.

For suche as in theyr lyfe haue receaued be nefytes, ãd haue not knowne me, and they that haue abhorred my lawe, whyle they had yet fredome, and when they had yet open leysure of amendemente & conuersyon, and vnderstode not but dyspysed it: the same muste knowe it after death in payne. And therfore be thou nomore carefull, howe the vngodly shalbe punyshed, ãd how the ryghteous shalbe saued, and whose the worlde is: and when it is Then answered I: ãd sayde: * I haue talked before, & nowe: I speake & wyl speake also hereafter, that there be many iiii.es.viii.b mo of them whyche perysshe, then shalbe saued, lyke as the floude is greater then the droppes.

And he answered me, sayinge: lyke as the felde is, so is also the seede: as the floures be, so are the coloures also: suche as the worckeman is, suche is the worcke: and as the husbandemã is hym selfe, so is hys husbãdry also, for it was the tyme of the worlde.

And when I prepared for them that are nowe, or euer the worlde was made, wherein they shulde dwell, then was there noman that wythstode me. Nowe when euery one was, ãd the maker also in the worlde which is nowe prepared, and the moneth that ceaseth not, and the lawe whyche is vnserarcheable: theyr maners were corrupte. So I consydered the worlde, & beholde, there was peryl, because of the thoughtes, that were come into it. And I sawe, and spared them greatelye, and haue kepte me a wyneberye of the grapes, & plante from amonge manye generacyons. Let the multytude perysshe then, whych are growen vp in vayne: ãd let my grape and wyneberye be kepte: euen my plante for wyth great laboure haue I made it vp.

Neuertheles, yf thou wylte take vpon the yet seuen daies mo (but ꝑ shalt not fast in them) go thy way then into ꝑ feld of floures, where no house is buylded: and eate only of the floures of the felde, tast no flesh, drinke no wyne, but eate Graye vnto the Hyeste contynually: so wyll I come, and talke wyth the.

So I wente my waye and came into the C felde whyche is called Ardath (lyke as he commaunded me) and there I sat amonge the floures, & dyd eate of the herbes of the felde, and the meate of the same satisfyed me. After seuen dayes I sat vpon the grasse, & my herte was vexed wythin me lyke as afore: & I opened my mouth and began to talke before the hyeste, and sayde

Beholde, I sowe my lawe in you, & it shall bring frute in you, & ye shalbe honoured in it for euer. For oure fathers whych receaued the lawe kepte it not, & obserued not thy ordynaunces & statutes, and the frute of thy law was not declared: for it might not: for why? it was thine sawe a woman, whyche mourned sooze, made greate lamentacyon, and wepte wyth lowde voyce: her clothes were rente in peaces, and she had asshes vpon her heade.

Then let I my thoughtes go, that I was in, and turned me vnto her, and sayde: wherfore wepest thou? Why arte thou so sory and discomforted? And she sayde vnto me: Syr, let me bewayle my selfe, and take yet more sorowe: for I am sore vered in my mynde, and broughte very lowe. And I sayde vnto her: What ayleth the? Or who hath done any thynge to the? tell me: She sayde: I haue bene vnfruytful and baren, and haue had an husbande thyrtye yeares. And these thyrtye yeares I doo nothynge elles daye and nyghte, and all houres: but make my prayer to the hyest. After thyrtye yeares God herde me thy handmayden, and loked vpon my mysery e, consydered my trouble, and gaue me a sonne, and I was glad of hym, so was my husband also and all my neyghbours, and we gaue greate honoure vnto the myghtye. And I nourysshed him wyth greate trauayle. So when he grewe vp and came to the tyme, that he shulde haue a wyfe, I made a feaste.

The.x.Chapter.

¶ Esdras & the woman ꝑ apperethvnto hym, cõmune together

A And it happened, that when my sõne wente into hys chambre, he fell downe, and dyed: then ouerthrewe we all the lyghtes, & all my neyghboures rose vp to comforte me.

Then toke I my reste vntyll the seconde day at nyght: & when they had al rested, ꝑ they mpyght comforte me, I rested & also rose vp by nyghte, & fled, & am come hether into thys felde as ꝑ sest & am purposed not to come in the cyty, but to remayne here & nether to eate nor drynke, but contynualye to mourne and faste, vntyll I dye.

Then let I my medytacions and thoughtes fall that I was in, and spake to her in dysplesure: Thou folysshe woman: seest thou not our heuynesse and mourninge, and what happeneth vnto vs: howe Syon oure mother is all wofull and sory: and how she is cleane brought downe and in misery: seing we be al nowe in heuynesse and make oure mone (for we be all sorowfull.) Ask for the heuines that ꝑ takest: it is but for one sonne. Demaunde the earth and she shal tell the that it is she whyche oughte (by reason) to mourne, for the fal of so many that growe vpõ her. For from the begynnynge all men are borne of her, and other shall come: and beholde they walke almoste all into destruccion, and many of them shalbe rooted oute.

Who shulde then (by reason) make moare mournynge then she, that hath loste so greate a multytude? and not thou whyche arte sory: but for one. But yf thou woldest saye vnto me: Wy mournynge is not lyke the mournynge of the earthe: for I haue loste the frupte of my bodye, whiche I bare wyth heuynesse: but the earthe is accordyng to the maner of the earth, and the presente multytude goeth agayne into her as it is come to passe. Then saye I vnto the: lyke as ꝑ haste borne, wyth trauayle and sorowe, euen so the earth also from the begynnynge geueth her frupte vnto man, for hym that made her. And therfore wytholde thy sorowe and heauynesse by thy selfe, * and loke what happeneth vnto the beare it strongly. For if thou iudgest the marke and ende of God, to be righteous and good, and receaueste hys counsayle in tyme thou shalte be commended therein. Goo thy waye then into the cyrye to thy husbande.

And she sayde vnto me: that wyll I not do: I wyll not go into the cytie: but here wyl I dye

B So I communed more wyth her, and sayde: do not so, but be counsayled, & folowe me, for howe manye falles hath Syon? Be of good comforte because of the sorowe of Jerusalem. For thou seest that oure Sanctuarye is layed waste, oure aulter broken, oure temple destroyed, our playnge of instrumentes and singyng layd downe the thanckesgeuynge put to silence, oure myrth is vanysshed a waye, the lyghte of oure candelstycke is quenched, the Arcke of the couenaunte is taken from vs, all oure holye thynges are defyled, and the name that is called vpon ouer vs, is dyshonoured: oure chyldren are put to shame oure preastes are brente: oure Leuytes are caryed awaye into captyuytye: oure vyrgins are defyled, and oure wyues rauysshed: oure ryghteous men spoyled: and our chyldren destroyed: our yonge men are broughte in bondage, and oure stronge worthyes are become weake: and Syon (whyche seale is the greatest of all) is loosed vp from her worshyppe: for she is delyuered in to the handes of them that hate vs.

And therefore shake of thy greate heauynesse and put awaye the multytude of sorowes: that the myghtye maye be mercyfull vnto the: and that the hyest maye geue the reste from thy laboure and trauayle. And it happened, that when I was talkynge wyth her, her face dyd shyne and glyster, so that I was afrayed of her and mused what it myghte be. And immedyatly she cast out a great voyce, very fearfull, so ꝑ the earthe shoke at the noyse of the woman: & I loked, ād beholde, the woman appered vnto me nomore: but there was a cytie builded, & a place was shewed from the grounde and foundacion.

Then was I afrayed, and cryed, with loude voyce, and sayde: Where is Vryel the Angell * whyche came to me at the fyrst? For he hath caused me to come in many consideracyons & hygh thoughtes, and mine ende is turned into corrupcyon: and my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speakynge these wordes, he came vnto me, and loked vpon me: and I laye as one that had bene dead, and myne vnderstandynge was altered, and he toke me by the ryghte hande, and comforted me, and set me vpon my fete, and sayde vnto me: what ayleth thee? and why is thine vnderstandynge vexed? and the vnderstandynge of thy herte? and wherfore arte thou sorye? And I sayde: Because thou hast forsaken me: and I iiii. Esr. iv. a haue done * accordynge vnto thy wordes, I wente into the felde, and there haue I sene thynges that I am not able to expresse. He sayde vnto me: Stande vp, and be manlye, and I shall geue the exhortacyon.

Then sayde I: speake vnto me my Lorde: forsake me not, lest I dye in vayne: for I haue sene that I knewe not, and hearde that I do not knowe. Or shall my vnderstandynge be dysceaued, and my mynde? But nowe I beseche the, that thou wylte shewe thy seruaunte of thys wondre. He aunswered me then, and sayd heare me, and I shall enfourme the, and tell the wherfore thou arte afrayed, for the hyest hathe opened manye secret thynges vnto the.

He hathe sene that thy wayes are ryghte, and that thou takeste sorowe contynuallye for thy people: and makest greate lamentacyon for Syon: and therefore vnderstande the vysyon, whych thou sawest a litle whyle a go after this maner. Thou sawest a woman mournyng, and thou haste comforted her: Neuerthelesse nowe seest thou the lykenesse of that woman no moare, but thou thoughtest there was a cytye buylded: and lyke as she tolde the of the fall of her sonne: so thys is the aunswere. The woman whome thou sawest is Syon: and where as she tolde the, that she hath bene thyrtye yeares vnfruytefull and barren, those are the thyrtye yeares wherin there was no offeringe made in her.

D But after thyrtye yeares Salomon buylded her and offred, & then bare the barren a sõne And where as she tolde the: that she norysshed hym wyth labour, that was the dwellynge of Jerusalem. But where as she tolde that her sonne died when she came into her chambre, that is the fal of Jerusalem. And ȳ sawest her lykenes howe she mourned for her sõne: & what els happened vnto her, I haue shewed the. And nowe God seeth, that thou art sory in thy mynde, and suffrest frõ thy hert for her, & so hathe he shewed the her clearenesse, & the fayrenesse of her beauty

And therfore I bad the remayne in the felde where no house is buylded. For I knewe that the hyeste wolde shewe thys vnto the: therefore I commaunded the to goo into the felde, where no foundacion nor buylding is. For in the place where the hyest wyll shewe hys cytie, there shal be no mans buyldynge. And therfore feare not, and let not thyne herte be afrayed, but goo thy waye in, and se the gloryous fayre buyldynge and howe greate it is and howe great thou thinckest it, after the measure of thyne eyes, & then shalte thou heare as muche as thyne eares may comprehend. For thou arte blessed aboue many other and art called wyth the hyest as the fewe

But to morowe at nyghte thou shalt remayne here: and so shall the hyghest shewe the vysions of hyghe thynges, whych he wyll do vnto them that dwell vpon earth, in the laste dayes. So I slept the same nyght, lyke as he cõmaunded me

The. xi. Chapter.

In thys chapter and in the two nexte ensuynge he intreateth of certayne visyons, and of the interpretacyons thereof.

THen sawe I a dreame: and beholde A there came vp from the see an Aegle whyche had twelue wynges, and thre heades: And I sawe and behold he spred hys wynges ouer all the earth, and all the wyndes of the ayre blewe in them, and so they were put together agayne.

And I behelde, and oute of hys fethers there grewe out other lytle contrarie fethers, ȳ hedes rested, the heades in the myddeste was greater then the other, yet rested it wyth the residue.

Moreouer I sawe, that the Aegle flewe wyth hys wynges, and raygned vpon earthe and ouer all them that dwelte vpon the earthe: And I sawe that al thynges vnder heauẽ were subiecte vnto hym, and no man spake agaynste hym: no not one creature vpon earth. I sawe also that the Aegle stode vp vpon hys clawes, ãd gaue a sounde wyth hys feathers, and a voyce sayinge after thys maner: watche not all to gether, slepe euery man in his owne place, & watch for a time, but let the heades be preserued at the laste. Neuerthelesse, I sawe, that the voyce wẽt not oute of hys heades, but from the myddeste of hys bodye. And I nombred hys contrarye fethers, and behold, there were. viii. of them. And I looked and beholde vpon theryght syde there arose one fether: and raygned ouer all the earth And it happened, that when it raygned, the end of it came, and the place therof appered nomore So the nexte folowynge stode vp, and raygned and had a greate tyme: and it happened, that when it raygned, the ende of yt came also lyke as the fyrste, so that it appered nomore.

B Then there came a voyce vnto it, and sayde Heare thou that haste kepte in the earth so long thys I saye vnto the: before thou begynneste to appeare nomore. There shall none after the attayne vnto thy tyme. Then arose the thyrde ãd raygned as the other afore, & appeared nomore also. So wente it wyth al the residue one after another, so that euerye one raygned, and then appered nomore. Then I loked, and beholde in processe of tyme the fethers that folowed were set vp vpon the ryghte syde, that they myghte rule also: and some of them ruled, but wythin a whyle they appered nomoare: for some of them were set vp, but ruled not After thys I loked and behold, the twelue fethers appered nomore and the two wynges, and there was nomoare vpon the Aegles body, but two heades that rested, and syxe fethers. Then sawe I also that the syxe fethers were parted in two, and remayned vnder the heade, that was vpon the ryghte syde for the foure contynued in theyr place So I loked, and beholde, they that were vnder the wynges, thoughte to set vp them selues, and to haue the rule. Then was there one set vp, but shortly it appered nomore, and the seconde was soner a waye then the fyrste. And I beheld, and loo, the two thoughte also by them selues to raygne, & whē they so thought, behold, there awaked one of the heades that were at rest: namelye, it that was in the myddest, for that was the greater of the two heades. And then I sawe, that the two heades were fylled wyth hym, & the heade was turned wyth them, & were by him, & did eate vp the two vnder winges that wold haue raigned

C But thys heade put the hole earth in feare and bare rule in yt, ouer all those that dwelt vpon earth wyth muche laboure, and he had the gouernaunce of the worlde, ouer all the foules that haue bene. After thys I loked, and beholde the head ẏ was in the myddest, sodaynely appered nomore, lyke as the wynges then came the two heades, whych ruled vpon earth, and ouer those that dwelte therin. And I behelde, and lo, the heade vpon the ryghte syde deuoured that was vpon the lefte syde. And I hearde a voyce whyche sayde vnto me: loke before the, and consyder the thynge that thou seeste. Then I sawe and beholde, as it were a Lion that roareth, rennynge hastely oute of the woode, and he sente oute a mans voyce vnto the Aegle, and sayde: Heare thou: I wyll talke wyth the, and the hyest shall saye vnto the: Is it not thou that haste the vyctory of the foure beastes, whom I made to raigne vpon earth & in my worlde, & that the ende of theyr tymes myght come thorow them?

D And the fourth came, and ouer ranne al the beastes that were past, and had powre ouer the worlde wyth great fearfulnesse, & ouer the hole compasse of the earth wyth the mooste wycked laboure, and so longe tyme dwelte he vpon the earth wyth dysceate, and the earthe haste thou iudged not wyth truth. For thou hast troubled the meke: thou hast hurte the peacyable and quiet: thou haste loued lyers, & destroyed the dwellynges of them that broughte forth frupte, and haste cast downe the walles of suche as dyd the no harme. Therfore is thy wrongfull dealynge and blasphemye cum vp vnto the hyest: and thy pryde vnto the myghtie. The hyest also hath loked vpon the proude tymes: & beholde they are ended ād theyr abhompnacyons are fulfylled. And therfore appere nomoare thou Aegle, and thy horible winges, & thy wicked fethers, & thy vngracious heades, & thy synful clawes, and al thy vayne body, ẏ the earth may be refreshed, & come agayne to her selfe: when she is delyuered from thy vyolence: & that she maye hope for the iudgemente and mercie of hym that made her.

The.xii. Chapter.

AND it happened when the Lyon spake these wordes vnto the Aegle, I sawe, and beholde, the heade that afore had the vpper hande, appered nomore: nether dyd the foure wynges appeare any more, that came to hym & were set vp to raygne: & theyr kyngdome was small and full of vproure. And I sawe & behold they appered nomore, and the whole bodye of ẏ Aegle was brente, and the earth was in greate feare. Then I awaked oute of the traunce of my mynde, & from greate feare, and sayde vnto my spirite: Loo, this hast thou geuen me in that thou searchest oute the wayes of the hyest: loo, yet am I werye in my mynde, and verye weake in my spyrite, and lytle strengthis there in me, for the greate feare that I receyued thys nyght Therfore nowe I wyl beseche the hyest, that he wyll comforte me vnto the ende: & I sayde Lorde Lorde, yf I haue founde grace before thy syghte, and yf I am iustyfyed wyth the before manye other, and yf my prayer become vp before thy face, comforte me then, and shewe me thy seruaunte the interpretacyon and playne dyfference of thys horyble syghte, that thou mayeste perfectly comforte my soule: for thou haste iudged me worthy, to shewe me the last of tymes.

And he sayde vnto me: thys is the interpretacyon of thys syghte. The Aegle whome thou sawest come vp from the see, is the kyngdome* whyche was sene in the vysyon yf thy brother Daniel, but it was not expounded vnto him, for nowe I declare it vnto the. Beholde, the dayes come, that there shall ryse vp a kyngedome vpon earth, and it shalbe feared aboue all kyngedomes that were before it. In the same kyngedome shall twtlue kynges raygne one after another. For the seconde shall begynne to raygne & shall haue moare tyme then the other twelue: & thys do the twelue wynges sygnyfye, whyche thou sawest. As for the voyce that spake, & that thou sawste goo oute from the heades, but not from the body: it betokeneth, that after the time of the kyngedome there shall aryse greate strouynges, and it shall stande in paryll of fallynge Neuertheless, it shall not yet fall, but shalbe set into hys begynnynge. And the eyghte vnder wynges whyche thou saweste hange vnto the wynges of hym, betoken, that in him there shal aryse eyghte kynges, whose tyme shalbe but small, and theyr yeares swyft, and two of them shal beare. But when the myddeste tyme commeth, there shalbe foure kepte in the tyme, whē hys tyme begynneth to come, that it maye be ended, but two shalbe kepte vnto the ende.

C And where as thou saweste thre heades restynge: thys is the interpretacyon. In hys laste shall the hyest rayse vp thre kyngdomes, & call many agayne into them, and they shal haue the dompnyon of the earth, and of those that dwell therein, wyth moche laboure aboue all those that were before them. Therfore are they called the heades of the Aegle: for it is they that shall bringe forthe hys wyckednesse agayne, & that shall perfourme & fynyshe hys laste. And where as thou sawest, that the greate heade appered nomoare, it sygnyfyeth, that one of them shall dye vpon hys head, and yet wyth payne, for the two ẏ remayne shalbe slaine wt the swerd. For ẏ swerde of the one shal deuour ẏ other but at the last, shal he fall thorowe the swearde hym selfe.

And where as thou sawest two vnderwinges vpon the heade that is they, whome the hyeste hath kepte vnto theyr ende: thys is a small kyngdome, kyngdome & full of trouble. The Lyon whome thou saweste ryspnge vp, oute of the woode, & roarynge and speakynge vnto the Aegle, & rebukynge hym for hys vnrighteousnesse, is the wynde whyche the hyghest hath kepte for them & for theyr wyckednesse vnto the ende: he shall reproue them, & rente them asundre before them For he shall set them lyuynge before the Judgemente, & shall rebuke them: for the respdue of my people shall he delyuer wyth trouble, these that be preserued ouer myne endes: and he shall make them ioyefull, vntyl the commyng of the day of iudgement: wherof I haue spoken vnto ẏ from ẏ beginning. Thys is the dreame ẏ thou sawest: & this is the interpretacyon. Thou only hast bene mete to knowe the secret of the hyest.

Therfore wryte all these thynges that thou haste sene in a booke, and hyde them, and teache them the wyse in the people, whose hertes thou knowest maye comprehende and kepe these secrettes. But wayte thou beare thy selfe yet seuen dayes mo, that it maye be shewed the whatsoeuer yt pleaseth the hyghesse to declare vnto the: & wyth that he wente hys waye.

And when al the people perceaued, that the seuen dayes were past, & I not come agane into the cytye, they gathered them al together, from the leest vnto the moste, & came vnto me, and sayde: what haue we offended the? & what euell haue we done agaynste the, that thou forsakest vs, and sytteste here in thys place? For of all the people, thou onelye arte lefte vs, as a grape of the vyne, & as a candle in a darcke place, & as an hauen & shippe preserued from the tempst. Haue we not elles aduersytye ynough, but thou muste forsake vs? Were it not better for vs, that we had bene brente wyth Sion? For we are not better then they that dyed there: ād they wepte wyth loud voyce. Then aunswered I them, and sayde: Be of good comforte, O Israel, & be not heuy thou house of Jacob: for the hyghest hathe you in remembraunce, & the myghtye hath not forgotten you in temptacion. As for me, I haue not forsaken you, neyther am I departed from you: but am come into thys place to praye, because of the myserye of Israell, that I myghte seke mercy for the lowe estate of youre Sanctuary. And nowe go youre waye home euery man & after these dayes wyll I come vnto you. So the people went theyr waye into the cyty, lyke as I commaunded them: but I remayned styll in the felde seuen dayes, as the Aungel bad me, and dyd eate onelye of the floures of the felde, & had my meate of the herbes in those dayes.

The.xiii.Chapter.

AND it happened after the seuen dayes, ẏ I dreamed a dreame by nyghte And be holde, there arose a wynde from the see, that it moued all the floudes therof. And I loked & beholde, the mā was strong, & increased wyth the cloudes of heauen: & when he turned hys countynaunce to consyder, all the thinges trymbled that were sene vnder hym: and when the voyce went out of hys mouth, all they brent ẏ hearde hym, lyke as the earth when it feleth the fyre.

After these I sawe, and beholde, there was gathered togeather a multytude of men oute of nombre, from the foure wyndes of the heauen, to fyghte agaynste the man that came out from the see. And I loked and beholde, he graued him selfe a great mountayne, and flewe vp vpon it. But I wold haue sene the border or place, wher oute the hyll was grauen, and I coulde not.

I sawe after these, that all they whiche came to fyght agaynste hym, were sore afrayed & yet they durste fyght. Neuertheless, when he sawe the fearcenesse & vyolence of the peole he nether lyfte vp hys hande nor helde a swearde nor any weapon: but onely (as I sawe) he sente oute of hys mouth as it had bene a blaste of fyre & oute of hys lyppes the wynde of the flame: & oute of his tong he caste out sparckes & stormes, & they were all myxte together: the blaste of fyre, the wynde of the flammes, & the greate storme, and fell wyth a rushe vpon the people, whyche was prepared to fyght, & brent them vp euery chone so that of the innumerable multytud there was nothynge sene, but onelye duste and smooke. When I sawe thys, I was afrayed.

Afterwarde sawe I the same man come 25
downe from the mountayne, and callynge vnto hym another peaceable people, & there came muche people vnto hym: some were glad some were sorye, some of thē were bonde, so that they were caryed and broughte forthe.

Then was I sycke thorowe greate feare, & I awaked, and sayde: thou haste shewed thy seruaunte al thy wonders, from the begynning and haste counted me worthy, that thou myghteste receaue my prayer: shewe me nowe yet the interpretacyon of thys dreame. For thus I consyder in my vnderstandynge: wo vnto them that shalbe lefte in those dayes, and much more wo vnto them ẏ are not lefte behynde, for they that were not lefte were in heuynes.

Nowe vnderstande I the thynges that are layed vp in the latter dayes whyche shall happen vnto them, and to those that are not lefte behynde. Therfore are they come into greate parylles and many necessytyes lyke as these dreames declare. Yet is it easyer, that he whyche sufferyth hurte, come in these, then to passe awaye as a cloude oute of the worlde, and nowe to se the thynges that shall happen in the laste. C

Then aunswered he me, and sayde: The interpretacyon of the syghte shall I shewe the, ād I wyll open to the, the thynge that thou haste requyred. For thou haste spoken of them that are lefte behynde, & thys is the interpretacyon. He that taketh awaye the parell in that tyme, hath kepte hym selfe. They that be fallen into harme are suche as haue worckes and fayth vnto the moste myghtye. Knowe thys therefore, that they whyche be lefte behynde are moare blessed then they that be deade. Thys is the meanynge of the vysyon. Where as thou sawest a man cōmyng vp from the depe of the see, the same is he whome God the hyghest hath kepte a great season: whyche by hys owne selfe shall delyuer hys

creature and he shall ordre them that are left behynde. And where as thou sawest, that oute of hys mouth there came a blast of wynd, fyre and storme: and howe that he lyft vp neyther swerd nor weapon, but that the ruschynge in of hym destroyed the hole multytude, that came to fyghte agaynst hym: it signifyeth, that the dayes come when God wyll delyuer them ẏ are vpon earth & in a traunce of mynde shal he come vpon them that dwel in the earth. And one shall vndertake to fyght agaynst another, one cytye agaynst another, one place agaynst an other, * & one people against another one realme against an other. mat.xxiiij.a Whē this cōmeth to passe, then shal ẏ tokens cō ẏ I shewed ẏ before: & then shal my sonne be declared, whome thou sawest clyme vp as a man. And when all the people heare hys voyce, euery man shal in theyr owne land leaue the battayle that they haue, one agaynst an other, and an innumerable multytud shalbe gathered together as they that be wyllyng to come, & to ouercome hym by fyghtynge. But he shal stande vpon the toppe of the mounte Syon. Neuertheless, Syon shall come, and shalbe shewed, beynge prepared and buylded for al men, lyke as thou sawest the hyl grauen forth wythout any handes. But my sonne shall rebuke the people, that are come for theyr wyckednesse, wyth the tempeste: and for theyr euell ymagynacyons: and theyr paynes wherwyth they shalbe punyshed, are lykened vnto the flamme: and wythout any labour shall he destroye them, euen by the lawe, whych is compared vnto the fyre.

And where as thou sawest, that he gathered an other peacyable people vnto hym: those are the ten trybes which were caryed away prey- iiij.regum. xvii.a. soners oute of theyr owne land, * in the tyme of Oseas the king, whom Salmanasar the kyng of Asserya toke preysoner, and caryed them ouer the water, and so came they into an other lāde.

But they gaue them thys counsayle, that they shulde leaue the multytude of the Heathen and to goo forth into a farther countrye, where neuer mankynde dwelte: that they myght there kepe theyr statutes, whych they neuer kepte in theyr owne lande. And so they entred in at the narowe passages of the water of Euphrates, D and so God shewed tokens for them, * and held Exo.xiiij.c. styll the floud tyll they were passed ouer, for Iosu.iij.d thorowe the countrye, there was a great way: namely of a year, and a halfe iourney for the same region is called Asareth. Thē dwelt they there vntyll the latter tyme: & when they come forth agayne, the Heyghest shal hold styl the springs of the streame agayne, that they may go thorowe, therefore sawest thou the multytude wyth peace. And they that be lefte behynd of thy people, are those that be founde wythin my border Nowe whē he destroyeth the multytude ẏ is gathered together, he shal defende hys people ẏ remayne, & then shal he shewe great wonders.

Then sayde I: O Lorde Lorde, shewe me thys, wherfore haue I sene the man commynge vp from the deape of the see? And he sayde vnto me: Lyke as thou cannest neyther seke out nor knowe these thynges that are in the depe of the see, euen so mayst thou not se my sonne, or those that be wyth hym, but in the tyme of the daye Thys is the interpretacyō of the dreame which thou sawest, therfore thou onely arte lightened for thou hast forsaken thyne owne law, and applyed thy dylygence vnto myne, and sought it. * Thy lyke haste thou ordred in wysedome, and iiij.re.iij.a ‡ haste called vnderstandynge thy mother, and Pro.viij.a. therefore haue I shewed the, the treasure of the Hyghest. After thre dayes, I wyl shewe ẏ more and talke wyth ẏ more at large: yea, heuy and wonderous thynges wyll I declare vnto the.

Then wente I forth vnto the feld, geuyng praise and thanckes greatly vnto God, because of thys wonders whych he dyd in tyme, and because he gouerneth the same, and suche as is in tyme, and there I sat thre dayes.

¶ The.xiiij.Chapter.

God appereth to Esdras in ẏ bush, & sheweth hi what he shal do

A VPon the thyrde day I sat vnder an Oke tree, then came there a voyce vnto me out of the bushe and sayd: Esdras Esdras: And I sayde: heare am I Lorde, and stode vp vpon my fete. Then spake he vnto me: * in the bush dyd I appere vn- Exo.iij.a. to Moses, and talked wyth hym when my people serued in Egypte. And I sent hym, and led my people out of Egypt, and brought hym vpon the mount Syon, where I held hym by me a longe season, and tolde hym my wonderous worckes, and shewed hym the secretes of the tymes and the ende, and commaunded him saying These wordes shalt thou declare, and not hyde them: And nowe I saye vnto the: that thou laye vp in thyne herte the dreames ẏ thou hast sene, and the interpretacyons whych I haue shewed the, for thou shalte be receaued of all, thou shalt be turned, and remayne wyth my counsayle, ād wyth such as be lyke the, vntyll the tymes be ended. For the worlde hath lost hys youth, and ẏ tymes begynne to waxe olde. For the tyme is deuided into twelue partes, and ten partes of it are gone all redy, and halfe of the tenth parts yet remayneth there ẏ whyche is after the halfe of the tenthe parte.

Therfore, prepare and ordre thy house, ād B refourme thy people: comfort suche of them as be in trouble: and tell nowe of the destruccyon: let go frome the, mortall thoughtes: caste awaye ẏ burthens of man: put of the weake nature: laye vp in some places the thoughtes ẏ are moost hye vp vnto the, and haste the to flye from these tymes: for such euel and wyckednesse as thou hast sene nowe happen, shall they do muche worse. Mathewe. * For the weaker ẏ the worlde and the tyme is xxiiij.a. the more shal synne and wickednesse increase in i.Ion.ii.c. them ẏ dwell vpon earthe. For ẏ truthe is fled farre away, & lesyng is harde at hand. For now hasteth the vysyon to come, ẏ thou haste sene.

Then aunswered I before the, and sayde: Beholde Lorde, I wyll goo as thou haste commaunded me, and refourme ẏ people whych are present. But they ẏ shall be borne afterwade, who wyll erhorte or rebuke them? Thus the worlde is set in darckenes: and they ꝑ dwel ther in are wythout lyghte, for thy lawe is kyndled because noman knoweth the thynges that are done of the, or ꝑ shalbe done. Yf I haue founde grace before the, sende the holy ghoost into me and I shall wryte all that hath bene done in the worlde syns the begynnynge whych was wrytten in thy lawe, ꝑ men maye fynde the path, & ꝑ they whych wyl lyue in ꝑ later daies, may lyue.

And he aunswered me saying: Go thy way gather the people together, and say vnto them that they seeke the not for fourtye dayes, but loke thou gather many bore trees, and take wt the Sarea, Dabria, Selemia, Ecanus, and Asiell, these fyue, whych are redy to wryte swyftly, and come hether, and I shal lyght a candle of vnderstandynge in thyne hert, whych shall not be put out tyll ꝑ thynges be perfourmed which thou shalt begin to wryte. And then shalt thou declare some thynges openly vnto ꝑ perfect, and some thiges shalt ꝑ shewe secretly vnto ꝑ wyse To morowe this houre shalt ꝑ begyn to wryte

C Then wente I forth (as he commaunded me) and gathered all the people together & sayd Heare these wordes, O Israel: Oure fathers at the begynnynge were straungers in Egypt from whence they were deliuered, and receaued Deu. iiii.d the lawe of lyfe* whych they kepte not, whych ye also haue trãsgressed after them. Then was thys lande, and the land of Spon parted amõg you by lot to possesse. But youre fathers and ye youre selues also haue done vngyghteousnesse, and haue not kept the wayes whych the Hyghest commaunded you. And for somoch as he is a ryghteous Judge, he toke from you in tyme the thynge that he had geuen you. And nowe are ye here and your brethren amonge you. Therfore yf so be that ye wyll subdue your owne vnderstandynge, and reformme youre hert ye shall be kept alyue, and after death shall ye optayne mercy. For after death shal ꝑ iudgement come, when we shal lyue agayne: & then shal ꝑ names of the ryghteous be manyfest, and the workes of ꝑ vngodly shalbe declared. Let no man therfore come nowe vnto me, nor aske any question of me these fortye dayes.

D So I toke the fyue mẽ (as he commaunded me) and we wente into the felde, and remayned there. The nexte daye a voyce called me saying: Ezech.iii.a Eldras* open thy mouth, and dryncke ꝑ I geue Apoca.x.b. the. Then opened I my mouth, and beholde: he reached me a full cuppe whyche was full as it were wyth water, but the colour of it was lyke fyre. And I toke it and dranke. And when I had droncke it, my hert had vnderstandyng and wysdome grewe in my breste: for my spirite was kept in remembraunce, and my mouth was opened and shut nomore. The Hyghest gaue vnderstandynge vnto the fyue men, ꝑ they wrote the hye thynges of the nyghte, whyche they vnderstode not. But in ꝑ nyghte they dyd eate bread as for me I spake in the daye and helde not my tonge by nyghte. In fourtye dayes, they wrote two hundred and foure bookes.

And it happened when the fourtye dayes were fulfylled, ꝑ the Hyghest spake, sayinge: The fyrste ꝑ thou haste wrytten spake openly ꝑ the worthy and vnworthy maye reade it. But kepe the lxx. last, ꝑ thou mayest shewe it onelye to such as be wise among thy people. For in thē is ꝑ spryng of vnderstandyng the fountayne of wysdome, & ꝑ streame of knowleg. And I did so

The.xv. Chapter.

¶ The punyshement that euel people shal haue: whych God commaundeth Eldras to shewe vnto them.

A Beholde, speake thou in the eares of my people the wordes of prophecye, whych I wyll put in thy mouth, sayeth the Lorde: and cause them to be wrytten in a letter, for it is the truth Feare not the ymagynacyons agaynst the. Let not the vnfaythfulnesse of them trouble the, ꝑ spake agaynst the. For all the vnfaythful shall dye in theyr vnfaythfulnesse. Behold, sayth the Lorde I wyll bryng plages vpon the worlde, the swearde, hunger, death, and destruccion, for wyckednesse hath the vpperhande in al ꝑ earth, and theyr shamefull workes are fulfylled.

Therfore sayeth the Lorde: I wyll hold my tonge nomore vnto theyr wyckednesse, whyche they do so vngodly: neyther wyll I suffre them in the thynges, that they deale wythall so wyckedly. Beholde, *the innocent bloud of ꝑ ryghteous complayne contynually: & therfore (sayth ꝑ Lorde) I shyl suerly auenge: and receaue vnto me all the innocent blonde from amonge them. Apoca.vi.b and.xix.a

* Beholde, my people is led as a flocke of shepe to be slayne. I wyll not suffre them nowe to dwell in Egypte but wyll bryng them oute wyth a myghtye hand and a stretched out arme and smyte it wyth plages as afore and wyll destroye all ꝑ lande of it. Egypt shall mourne and ꝑ foundacions of it shalbe smitten wyth ꝑ plage and punyshemente ꝑ God shall bryng vpon it. pla.xliiii.c rom.viii.b i.Cor.xiii

They that tyll the grounde shall mourne for theyr seedes shalbe destroyed thorowe ꝑ blasting and hayle, & an horyble starre. Wo worth ꝑ worlde and them ꝑ dwel therin, for ꝑ swerd & theyr destrucciõ draweth nye, & one people shall stand vp to fyght agaynst an other & sweardes in theyr handes. For men shalbe vnsteadefaste & some shall do vyolence vnto other: they shall not regard theyr kynge and princes, the wayes of theyr doinges and handlynges in their power. A man shall desyre to go in the cytie and shal not be able. For because of theyr pryd the cities shalbe brought in feare, the houses shall shake, & men shalbe afrayde: A man shall haue no pitie vpon hys neyghboure, but one shal prouoke an other vnto battayle to spoyle theyr goodes, because of the honger of breade, and because of the greate trouble.

B Beholde, I gather and call together all the kynges of the earth, whych are from the vprysynge, from the South, from the East, and Lybanus to turne vnto them, and restore the thynges ꝑ they haue geuen them. Like as they do yet thys daye vnto my chosen, so wyll I do also, ād recompense them in their bosome. Thus sayeth the Lord God: My ryghte hand shall not spare

the synners, and my sweard shall not cease ouer them that shed innocent bloud vpon earth. The fyer is gone out from hys wrathe, & hath consumed the foundacyons, of the earth, & the sinners lyke the strawe that is kyndled. Wo wo3th thē ẏ synne, and kepe not my commaundementes, sayth the Lo3d: I wyll not spare them. Go your waye ye chyldren from vyolence, defyle not my Sanctuarye: fo3 the Lo3de knoweth all them ẏ synne agaynst hym, and therfo3e delyuereth he them vnto death and destruccyon: Fo3 nowe are the plages come vpon the wo3ld, and ye shal remayne in them. Fo3 God shal not deliuer you because ye haue synned agaynste hym.

E Behold, an ho3ryble vysyon commeth from the East, where generacyons of Dragons shal come out, & the people of ẏ Arabies wyth many charetes, and the multytude of them shalbe as the wynde vpon the earth that all they whyche heare them ragynge in they3 wrath, maye feare and be afrayde, and as the wylde Boo3es oute of the woode, so shall they goo oute, and wyth greate power shall they come, and stande fyght tynge wyth them: and shall waste the po3cyon of the lande of the Asserians.

And then shall the Dragons haue the vpper hand, and not remembre they3 byrth, & shall turne about swearing together in great power to persecute them. But these shalbe afrayed, ād kepe sylence at they3 power, & shall flee: ād one out of the lande of the Assirians shalbe sege thē & consume one of them, & in they3 hooste shalbe feare and dre3de, & stryke amonge they3 kynges.

F Beholde, cloudes from the Easte, and from the Nor3th, vnto the South, and they are verye ho3ryble to loke vpon, full of wrath and sto3me They shall smyte one vpon another: & they shal smyte at the great starre vpon earthe and they3 starre, & the bloud shalbe from the sweard vnto the belye: and the smoke of man vnto the Camels lytter: And there shalbe great fearfulnes ād trembling vpon erth, & they ẏ se the wrath, shal be afrayde, & a trymblyng shall come vpon thē.

And thē there shall come great raynes from the South, & from the Nor3th, & parte from the Weste, and from the sto3my wynde from the East, and shall shut them vp agayne, & the cloud whych be rayse vp in wrath, and the starre to cause feare towarde the Easte and West wynd shalbe destroyed: and the greate cloudes shalbe lyfte vp, and the myghtye cloudes ful of wrath and the starre ẏ they maye make all the earth afrayed, and them ẏ dwel therin, and ẏ they may poure out ouer all places an ho3yble starre, fyer and hayle, and flyinge sweardes, and many waters: that all feldes maye be full, and all ryuers, and they shall breake downe the cytyes & walles, mountaynes & hylles, all trees, woode, and the grasse of the medowes, & al they3 frute. And they shall go stedfaste vnto Babylon, & make her afrayde, they shall come to her & besege her: ẏ starre & al wrath shal they poure out vpō her.

G Then shall the duste & smooke go vp vnto the Heauen, & all they that be a boute her: shall bewayle her: and they ẏ remaine vnder her shal do serupce vnto them that haue put her in feare And thou Asya, that comfo3teste thy selfe also vpon ẏ hope of Babylon, & arte a wo3shyppe of her personne: Wo be vnto the ẏ wretch, because thou haste made thy selfe lyke vnto her, & haste dect thy daughters in who3dome, ẏ they myght triumph & please thy louers, which haue alway desyred to commyt who3dome wyth the: thou haste folowed the abhompnable cytye in al her wo3ckes and inuencyons.

Therfo3e sayth God: I wyll sende plages vpon the, wedowhod, pouerte, hunger warres and pestylence, to wast thy houses wyth destrucyon & death, and the glo3ye of thy power shalbe dryed vp as a floure, when the heate ryse the that is sente ouer the: Thou shalte be sycke as a poo3e wyfe that is plaged & beaten of wemen: so that the myghtye & louer shall not be able to receaue the. Wolde I hate the sayth the Lo3de: Yf thou haddeste not alwaye flaynemy chosen, exaltynge the stroke of thy handes, & sayde ouer they3 death, when thou wast dro3ncken: set fo3th the bewtye of thy countynaunce.

The rewarde of thy who3dome shalbe re- H compenced the in thy bosome, therefo3e shalte thou receaue rewarde.

Lyke as thou hast done vnto my chosen, (sayeth the Lo3de) euen so shall God do vnto the, ād shall delyuer the into the plage. Thy chyldren shall dye of hunger, and thou shalt fal thro3owe the sweard. Thy cytyes shalbe bro3ken downe & all thynge shall perysche wyth the sweard in the felde. They that be in the mountaynes shall dye of hunger, & eat they3 owne flesh, & dryncke they3 owne bloude fo3 very hunger of breade & thyrst of water. Thou vnhappy shalt come thorowe the see, and receaue plages agayne.

In the passage they shall caste downe the slayne cytye, and shall roote out one part of thy lande, and consume the po3cyon of thy glo3ye. They shall treade the downe lyke stubble, and they shalbe thy fyre, and shall consume the: thy cytyes and thy lande, thy woode and thy fruytful trees shal they burne wyth fyre. Thy chyldren shall they carye awaye captiue, and looke what thou haste, they shall spoyle it, and marre the bewtye of thy face.

The.xvi.Chapter.

WO be vnto the Babylon and Asia, A wo be vnto the Egypte and Syria gyrde youre selues wyth clothes of sacke and heare, and mourne youre chyldren, belo3ye fo3 youre destrucyon is at hande. A sweard is set vpon you, ād who wyll turne it backe? A fyre is kyndled amonge you, & who wyll quench it? Plages are sente vnto you, & what is he that wyl dryue thē awaye? May any man dryue away an hongry Lyon in the woode. Do3 maye anye man quench ẏ fyre in stubble when it hath begunne to burne Maye one turne agayne the arowe, ẏ is shot of a stronge archer: The myghtye Lo3de sendethe the plages, and what is he that wil dryue them awaye? The fyre is kyndled and gone fo3th in hys hys wrathe, and what is he that wyll quenche it? He shall cast lyghtenynges, & who shall not feare? He shall thonder, and who shall not be afrayde: The Lorde shall threaten, and who shal not vtterly be beaten to poulder at hys presence The earth quaketh, and the foundacyons therof: the see aryseth vp with waues from the depe & the floudes of it are vnquyet & the fyshes therof also before the Lorde, and before the glory of hys power. For stronge is hys ryghte hande that holdeth the bowe, hys arowes that he shoteth are sharpe, and shall not mysse, when they

B begynne to be shote into the endes of ỹ worlde.

Beholde, the plages are sent, and shall not turne agayne, tyll they come vpon earth. The fyer is kyndled and shal not be put out, tyll it cõsume the foundacyons of the earth. Lyke as an arowe whyche is shote of a myghtye archar, returneth not backeward: euen so the plages that shalbe sente vpon earth, shall not turne agayne Woo is me, wo is me, who wyll delyuer me in those dayes? The begynnynge of sorowes and greate mournynge: the begynnynge of derth & greate death, the begynnynge of warres, & the powers shall stande in feare: the begynnyng of euels, & they shal tremble euery one. What shal I do in these thynges, when the plages come? Beholde, hunger, & plage, trouble, & anguysche, are sẽt, as scourges for a mẽdement. But for all these thinges they shal not turne frõ their wyckednes, nor be alway mindfull of the scourges.

C Behold vytayles shalbe so good cheape vpon earth, that they shal thincke them selues to be in good case, & euen then shal mischefe growe vpon earth, warres, dearth, & greate dysquyetnes. For many of them that dwell vpon earthe shall perysche of hunger, and the other ỹ escape the hunger, shall the swearde destroye: and the deade shalbe cast out as donge & there shalbe no man to conforte them. For the earth shalbe waked, and the cyties shalbe cast downe: there shal be no man lefte to tyll the earth and to sowe it. The trees shall geue frute, and who shal plucke them of and gather them? The grapes shalbe rype, & who shall treade them? For all places shalbe desolate of men, so that one man shall desyre to se another, or to heare hys voyce. For of one whole cytye there shalbe ten lefte, and two in the felde, whych shall hyde them selues in the thycke bushes, & in the clyffes of stones, lyke as when there remayne thre or foure olyues vpon the olyue tree, or as when a vyneyarde is gathered, there are lefte some grapes of them that dylygently soughte thorowe the vyneyarde.

D Euen so in those dayes there shalbe thre or foure lefte for them ỹ searche theyr houses wyth the swearde. And the earth shalbe lefte waste, & the feldes thereof shall ware olde: and her wayes ỹ all her pathes shall growe full of thornes, because noman shall trauayle there thorowe. The daughters shall mourne, haupnge no bryd gromes: the wemen shall make lamentacyon, haupnge no husbandes, theyr daughters shall mourne haupnge no helpe of theyr brydegrome In the warres shal they be destroyed, and theyr husbandes shall perysche of hunger. Ye seruauntes of the Lorde heare these thynges, and marcke them. Beholde, the worde of the Lorde Dreceaue it: behold the plages drawe nye, and, are not slacke in tarynge. Lyke as a trauelynge woman whych after the nyne moneth bringeth forth a sõne, when the hour of the byrth is come an houre two or thre afore the paynes come vpon her bodye, and when the chylde commeth to the byrth, they tary not the twynckluge of an eye: Euen so shall not the plages be slacke to come vpon earth, and the worlde shall mourne and sorowes shall come vpon it, on euery syde

E Dmy people, heare my worde, make you ready to the battayle: and in all euel be euen as pylgremes vpon earth *He that selleth, let him be as he that flyeth hys waye: and he that byeth as one that wyll lease. *1.Cor.vii.d

Who so occuppeth marchaundyce, as he ỹ wynneth not: & he that buildeth, as he ỹ shal not dwel therĩ, he ỹ soweth, as one ỹ shal not reape, he ỹ twysteth the vineyarde, as he ỹ shall not gather the grapes, they ỹ mary, as they ỹ shal get no childrẽ & they ỹ mary not: as ỹ wyddowes, & therfore *they that laboure, laboure in vayne. For straungers shal reape theyr frutes, & spoile theyr goodes, ouerthorowe theyr houses, take theyr chyldren captiue, for in captiuite & hunger shal they get chyldren. And they ỹ occupy theyr marchaũdyse w̃ robbery, howe long decke they theyr cytyes, theyr houses, theyr possessyons, & persons: the more wyll I punysh them for their synnes, sayeth the Lorde. Lyke as an whore enhate iniquitie, when she decketh her selfe, & shall accuse her to her face: when he commeth that defendeth, whych shall make inquysicyon for all synne vpon earth. And therfore be ye not lyke ther vnto, nor to the worckes therof: for or euer it belonge, iniquitie shalbe taken awaye out of the earth: & righteousnes shal raigne amõg you

F Let not the synner saye, that he hath not sinned: for coles of fyer shall burne vpon hys heade whyche sayeth before the Lorde God and hys glory: I haue not synned. Beholde, the Lorde knoweth all the worckes of men, theyr ymaginacyons, theyr thoughtes, and theyr hertes. *Pf.cxxxiii.a Prou.x.c. Eccle.xi.b.

A Fter those thynges vpon a solempne daye of the Lord, Tobyas made a goode feaste in hys house, and sayde vnto his sonne: Go thy way & bryng hether some of oure trybe, suche as feare God, that they maye make mery wyth vs. And whē he was gone, he came agayne, and tolde hys father, that one of the childzen of Israel lay slayne vpon the strete. And immedyatlye he leapte from hys table lefte the feast, came fastīg to ẏ dead coarse, toke hym & bare hī preuilye into hys house, ẏ when ẏ sunne was downe, hempyghte safely bury hym. wozthy of them, oz elles were they vnmete for me, for thou happly hast kept me to another husbande. For why? thy counsell is not in the power of mā But whosoeuer loueth the and serueth the arpghte, is sure of thys, that yf hys lyfe be tempted and proued, it standeth in the tryinge and yf he endure in pacyence, he shall haue a rewarde and be hyghlye crowned: and yf he be in trouble, that God (no doubte) shall delyuer him and yf hys lyfe be in chastenynge, that he shall haue leaue to come vnto thy mercye.

For thou hast no pleasure in oure dampnacion: & why? after a storme thou makest the wether faier & styll: after wepinge & heuynes thou geuest great iope. Thy name O God of Israell be praysed for euer. At ỹ same tyme were bothe theyr prayers herde in the syght of the maiestye of the hyest God. And Raphael the holy Angel of the Lord was sent to helpe them both, whose prayers came at one tyme together before God

AND when Tobyas thought his prayer to be hearde, ỹ he might dye, he called vnto hym hys sone Tobias ād sayde vnto hym My sonne, beare the wordes of my mouth, & laye them in thine herte as a foundacyon. When God taketh awaye my soule, bury thou my bodye and holde thy mother in honoure al the dayes of her lyfe. For thou oughtest to remember what & howe great parels she suffred for the in her wombe. And whē she hath also fulfilled the tyme of her lyfe, bury her besyde me. Haue God in thy thought all ỹ dayes of thy lyfe, & beware lest at any tyme ỹ consent vnto sinne, & lest thou let slyp the cōmaundemētes of ỹ Lord our God

Geue almes of thy goodes, & turne neuer thy face from the pore: & so shall it come to passe ỹ the face of the Lorde shal not be turned away from ỹ. Be merciful after thy power. Yf ỹ haue
B much, geue plēteously: yf thou haue lytle, do thy dylygence, gladly to geue of ỹ lytle. For so gatherest thou thy selfe a good rewarde in the day of necessyte. For mercy deliuereth frō all synne & from death, & suffereth not the soule to come in darcknes. A greate comforte is mercye before ỹ hyghe God, vnto all them that shewe it.

My sonne, kepe the wel from al whordome and (besyde thy wyfe) se that no faute be knowen of the. Let neuer pryde haue rule in thy mynde nor in thy worde, for in pryde beganne all destruccyon. Whosoeuer worcketh anye thynge for the, immedyatlye geue hym hys hyre, & loke that thy hyred seruauntes wages remayne not by the ouer nyghte. Looke that thou neuer do vnto another man, the thynge that thou woldest not another man shulde do vnto the. Eate thy breade wyth the hongrye and poore, and couer the naked wyth thy clothes. Set thy bread

Be alwaye thanckefull vnto God, and beseche hym that he wyll order thy wayes, & that what soeuer thou deuysest or takest in hande, it maye remayne in hym. I certyfye the also my sonne, that (when thou waste yet but a babe) I delyuered ten talentes of syluer vnto Gabelus, at Rages a cytye of the Medes, and hys hand wrytynge haue I by me. And therefore seeke some meanes, howe thou mayest come by hym, and receaue of hym the sayde weyght of syluer and geue hym hys handewrytynge agayne.

My sonne, be not afrayede: truthe it is, we leade heare a poore lyfe: but greate good shall we haue, yf we feare God, and departe from all synne: and do well.

The. v. Chapter.

¶ The obedience of ponge Tobyas to hys father, whych is sente into Rages. An Aungell accompanyeth wych hym in hys iourney.

THen answered Tobyas hys father A and sayde: father: all that thou hast commaunded me, wyll I do & that dylygentlye. But howe I shall requyre this money I can not tell. Neither doth he knowe me, nor I hym. What token shall I geue hym? And as for the waye thether I neuer knewe it. Then hys father aunswered hym, & sayde: I haue hys handewrytyng by me whych when thou shewest hym immedyatly he shal paye the. But go thy waye nowe, & get the some faythfull man to go wyth the for an hyre, that thou mayeste receaue the monye, whyle I am yet lyuynge. Then went Tobyas out, & vpon the strete he founde a fayre ponge man stādyng, gyrded vp, & as it were one ready to take hys iourney. And he knewe not that it was an Aungell of God, but saluted hym and sayde: From whence arte thou, thou good ponge man He aunswered: Of the chyldren of Israel.

And Tobyas sayde vnto hym: knowest thou ỹ the waye ỹ leadeth vnto the countrie of ỹ Medes? He aunswered I knowe it well, & all those stretes haue I gone oft tymes, and haue lodged B with our brother Gabelus, ỹ dwelleth i Rages a citie of the Medes, whych lyeth vpō ỹ mount Egbathanis: Tobyas sayde vnto hym: I pray the tary for me, tyll I haue told my father these thynges. Then wente Tobyas in and tolde his father all. At the whyche hys father meruayled & prayde, that he wolde come in vnto hym.

Nowe when the Aungell came in, he saluhym, & sayde: Ioye be wyth the for euer moare And olde Tobyas sayde: what ioye can I haue that syt here in darckenesse, & se not the lyght of heauen? The ponge man sayde vnto him: Be of good chere, God shall helpe the shortlye. And C Tobyas sayde vnto hym: Canste thou bryng my sonne to Gabelus, vnto the cytye of Rages in Medea? And when thou commest agayne, I shall paye the thy hyre. And the Aungell sayde vnto hym: I shall leade thy sonne & bryng him to the agayne. Then Tobyas aunswered hym: tell me I pray the, of what house or of what trybe art thou? The Aungell Raphael sayde vnto hym: Askest ỹ after ỹ kinred of an hyrelynge, or seekest ỹ a guyde for thy sonne to go wyth hym? But ỹ I make ỹ not careful, I am Azarias the sōne of gret Hananyas. And Tobias answered ỹ arte come of a great kynred: but I pray the be not displeased, ỹ I desyre to knowe thy kynred. The Angel sayd vnto him: thy sōne shal I leade forth safelye, & bryng hym hole to the agayne.

Then answered Tobyas & sayde: wel go on poure waye, and God be in poure iourney, & hys D
Angel bear you cōpany So when they had prepared al thinges, ỹ they wolde take wyth them in theyr iournye, Tobyas bad hys father and his mother

hys mother farewell, and they wente on theyr waye both together. Nowe when they were gone, hys mother beganne to wepe, and sayde: The staffe of oure age hast thou taken awaye, & sente hym from vs. Wolde God that mony had neuer bene, for the whyche thou hast sente hym awaye. Yf we had bene contente wyth our pouertye, thys had bene greate ryches vnto vs ỹ we sawe oure sonne here. Then saide Tobias vnto her: wepe not, oure sonne shall come to vs agayne safe and sounde, and thyne eyes shall se hym. For I truste, that the good Angel of God shall beare hym companye, and order well all the thynges that he doth: so that he shal come to vs agayne with ioye. At these wordes hys mother lefte of from weppynge, & helde her tonge.

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

¶ Yonge Tobias is delyuered from the fysh by the Angell, The Angel exhorteth Tobias to take Sara to hys wyfe.

A SO Tobias wente on hys waye, ād a dogge folowed hym, ād the fyrste nyghte they abode by the water of Tygrys. Then wente he oute to washe hys feete, and beholde there came forth an horyble fysh to deuoure hym. Of whom Tobyas was afrayde: and cryed wyth a lowde voyce, sayinge: Lorde, he commeth vpon me. And the Aungell sayde vnto hym: Take hym by the gyll, and drawe hym to the. And he dyd so, and drwe hym vpon the lande. And the fysche beganne to leape at hys feete.

B Then sayde ỹ Angell vnto hym: take oute ỹ bowels of thys fysche, & as for the herte, ỹ gaul and the lyuer, kepe them by the. For these thynges are necessary & good for medycyne. Tobias dyd so, & rosted the fysche, & they toke hym wyth them in theyr iourney: ỹ residue they salted, as much as was suffycyente for them, tyll they came to Rages a citie of ỹ Medes. Thē Tobias asked ỹ Angel, & sayde vnto hym: I pray ỹ brother Azarya tell me whereto are these thynges good of the fysche ỹ thou hast bydden me kepe.

The Aungel aunswered hym, & sayde: Yf thou layest a pece of the herte vpon the coales, ỹ smoke therof dryueth awaye all maner of euell spretes, whether it be from man or from womā so that from thencefoorth the same shall come no more vnto them. The gaull is good to annoint or to stryke the eyes wythall, where as there is any blemysh in them, so that they shalbe whole

And Tobyas sayde vnto hym, where wylt C thou ỹ we remayne? The Aungel aunswered & sayde: Here is a nye kynsman of thyne, one Raguel by name, which hath a daughter called Sara, & hath nether sōne nor daughter but her. All thys good belongeth vnto the & thou muste mary her, & therfore desyre her of her father, & he shal geue her the to wyfe. Thē answered Tobyas & sayde: As I vnderstād, she hath bene maryed vnto. vii. husbandes, & they al are dead: and I haue herde say ỹ the deuel slewe thē. I am afrayd therfore, lest suche thīges happen vnto me also: which yf it came to passe (seing I am ỹ only sonne of my father ād my mother) I shulde bryngе them in their age with sorowes to their graues

Then sayde the Angell Raphel vnto hym: D Heare me & I wyll tell the what they be, of whō the deuyl hath power. Namelye, they that receaue marryage of suche a fashyō, ỹ they shute God out frō them, & from theyr hert & geue thē selues to theyr owne lust, euen as it were an horse and mule, whyche haue no vnderstandynge: vpon suche hath the deuyll power. But when thou takest her, & arte come into the chamber, wythholde thy selfe from her thre dayes, and geue thy dylygence vnto nothynge but vnto prayer wt her.

And in the fyrste nyghte, roste the lyuer of ỹ fysche, & the deuyll shalbe dryuen awaye. The seconde nyght shalte thou be receauyd into the cōpany of the holy patryarkes. The thyrd nyght shalte thou optayne the blessyng of God so that whole chyldren shalbe borne of you. After the thyrde nyghte take the mayden in the feare of God: and more for the desyre of children, thē for any fleshly luste: that in the seed of Abraham ỹ mayest optayne the blessynge in chyldren.

The. vii. Chapter.

¶ Yonge Tobias and the Angel come to the house of Raguel. He requireth Ragules daughter to wyfe, and obtayneth her.

A THen went they into Raguel, whych receaued them ioyfully. And whē Raguel loked vpō Tobyas he sayd vnto Anna his wyfe. Howe like is this ponge mā vnto my systers sōne? And when he had spokē this he sayd whence be ye good brethren? They sayde Of ỹ tribe of Nephtaly, oute of the captyuytie of Nineue. Then sayd Raguel vnto them: knowe ye my brother Tobias? They said: yee, we knowe hym wel. And when they had spokē much good of him, ỹ Angel sayde vnto Raguel Tobias of whome thou askest is thys ponge mans father.

Then Raguel: bowed hym selfe downe: and wepte, toke hym aboute ỹ necke, & kyssed hym, & sayde: Gods blessyng haue ỹ my sonne, for thou arte the sonne of a good vertuous man. And Anna hys wyfe, & Sara hys daughter wepte also. Nowe when they had talked together, Raguel B bad kyll a wether, & to make a feast: And when he prayed them to syt downe to dyner, Tobyas sayde: I wyl nether eate nor drinke here this day except ỹ fyrst graunt me my petition, & promysse me to geue me thy daughter Sara. Whē Raguel herde this, he was astonyed: for he knewe, what had happened vnto the other. vii. men, ỹ went in vnto her, & he began to feare, ỹ it shulde chaunce vnto hym also in lyke maner.

And whyle he stode so in doubte, & gaue the ponge man no answere, the Angel sayde vnto hym Feare not to geue hym thy daughter, for vnto thys man ỹ feareth God, belongeth thy daughter to wyfe, therfore might none other haue her

Then sayde Raguel: I doubt not but God hathe accepted my prayers and teares in hys C syghte: and I truste he caused you to come vnto me for the same intente, that thys daughter of myne, myghte be maryed in her owne kynred, accordynge to the lawe of Moses.

And nowe doubte thou not, but I wyll geue her vnto the: Soo he tooke the ryghte hande of hys daughter, and gaue her into the ryghte hande of Tobyas, and sayde.

God of Abraham, the God of Isahac, & the God Jacob, be wyth you, ioyne you together, and fulfyl hys blessynge in you. And they toke a letter and made a wrytynge of the maryage: And then made they merye, and praysed God.

And Raguel, called Anna hys wyfe vnto hym, and bad her prepare another chambre, ād thether be broughte Sara hys daughter, & she wepte. Then sayde he vnto her: Be of good chere my daughter, the Lorde of heauen gene the ioye, for the beauynesse that thou haste suffred.

The. viii. Chapter.

¶ The Aungell bynd eth the deuyll. Tobyas exhortethe hys wyfe to prayer: and they praye thre dayes before they lye together.

A ADwe, after that they had supped, they broughte the ponge man into her. Then thoughte Tobyas vpon the wordes of the Aungell: & tooke oute of hys bagg, a pece of the leuer of the fysche, and layd it vpon the hote coles. So the Aungell Raphael toke holde of the deuyll, & sente hym awaye, & bounde hym in the wyldernesse of the hyer Egypte. Then spake Tobyas vnto the wyfe, & sayde: Up Sara, let vs make oure prayer vnto God to daye, tomorowe, & ouermorowe: for these thre nyghtes wyll we reconsyle oure selues wyth God, and when the thyrde holye nyghte is passe, we shall ioyne together in the dutye of maryage. For we are the chyldren of holye men, and we may not come to
B gether, as the Heathen, that knowe not God.

Then stoode they vp bothe together, and besoughte God earnestlye, that he wolde preserue them. And Tobyas sayde: O Lorde God of oure fathers, praysed be thou of heauen & earth of the see, weles & flodes, and of all thy creatures that be therein. Thou madest Adam of the Gene. ii. a. *moulde of the earth, & gauest hym Eua for an helper. And nowe Lord thou knowest that it is not because of voluptuousnesse that I take thys syster of myne to wyfe but onelye for the loue of chyldren, in whome thy name be blessed for euer And Sara sayde haue mercye vpon vs (O Lorde) haue mercye vpon vs: and let vs bothe come hole and sounde together to a good aege.

And aboute the cocke crowynge it happened, that Raguell called hys seruauntes, & they wente wyth him to make a graue. For he sayde it is chaunsed nowe vnto hym paraduēture, as it did vnto the other seuen men, that went in vnto her. Nowe when they had made the graue,
C Raguel came agayne to hys wyfe, and sayd vnto her: sende one of thy maidens, to loke yf he be deade, that I maye burye hym afore the lyghte daye: So she sente a mayden to se: whych when she came into the chambre, founde them hole ād sounde, sleppynge together. And so the came agayne, and broughte good tidynges. Then Raguel and Anna hys wyfe praysed the Lord, and sayde: Praised be thou, O Lorde God of Israel for it is not happened vnto vs, as we thoughte. For thou haste dealte mercyfully wyth vs, and put awaye from vs the enemye that persecuted vs, & haste shewed mercye vnto ponder two beloued. O Lorde cause them to magnifye yͤ more perfectlye, and offer the sacrifyce of thy prayse, and of theyr health: that al people maye knowe that thou onelye arte God in all the earth.

his seruauntes to fyl the graue yͤ they had made wyth earth afore it was lyghte, & bad his wyfe prepare a feaste, and to make ready all thynges that were necessarye for meate, to such as went by the waye. He caused two fat kyne also, and foure wethers to be slayne and meates to be prepared for all hys neyghbours and frendes. And Raguel charged Tobias to remayne with him two wekes. As for al the good yͤ he had, hegaue Tobyas the halfe of it, & made thys wrytynge, that the halfe whyche remayned, shulde fall vnto Tobias after theyr deathe.

¶ The Aungel goeth to Gabelus at the desyre of Tobyas: which delyuereth the letter, and receaueth the monye

A THen Tobyas called vnto hym the Aungel whome he thoughte to haue bene a man, and sayde vnto hym: Brother Azarias, I praye the herken vnto my wordes: yf I shulde geue my selfe to be thy seruaunte, I shall not deserue thy prouydence. Neuertheless, I beseche the that thou wylte take the beastes and the seruauntes, & go vnto Gabelus in Rages the citie of Meedes, & delyuer hym hys hande wrytynge, & receaue the monye of hym, & praye hym to come to my maryage. For thou knowest thy selfe, yͤ my father doth nombre the dayes: & yf I tarye B one daye to longe, he wyll be sory in hys mynde Nowe seyst thou howe earnestlye Raguel hath requyred me, so that I cannot saye hym naye.

Then toke Raphael foure of Raguels seruauntes, and two camels, and wente vnto Rages the cytye of the Meedes: & when he had founde Gabelus, he gaue hym hys handewrytynge, & receaued all the monye. He tolde hym also of Tobyas the sonne of Toby, howe all thynges had happened, & caused hym to come wyth hym to the maryage. Nowe when he came into C the house of Raguell, he found Tobyas sytting at the table: & he leaped vp, & they kyssed one another, and Gabelus wepte, & praysed God, and sayde: the blessynge of the God of Israell, haue thou for thou arte the sonne of a ryghte vertuous and iuste man, & of one that feareth God, ād geueth greate almes. And blessing haue thy wyfe & youre elders, that ye maye se youre children & youre chylders chyldren, vnto the thyrde and D fourth generacion, & youre seed be blessed of the God of Israell, whyche raygneth worlde without ende. And when they all had sayde Amen: they wente to the feaste, but wyth the feare of the Lorde helde they the feaste of the maryage.

The. x. Chapter.

¶ Tobias and his wyfe are sad for the tarynge of theyr sonne. Raguel sendeth agayne Tobyas wyth hys wyfe.

A ADwe whyle ponge Tobyas made longe tarying by reason of the maryage, hys father was full of care and heauynesse, and thought what shuld be the cause, that my sonne tarryeth so longe?

Or why

Or why shulde he be kepte so longe there? Paraduenture Gabelus is dead, and noman wyll geue hym the monye. Thus beganne he to be very sorowfull, he and Anna hys wyfe wyth hym, and beganne to weepe bothe together, because theyr sonne was not come agayne vnto them at the daye appoynted. As for hys mother, she wepte wyth dyscomfortable teares and sayd: Wo is me my sonne: Oh what ayled vs to sende the awaye into a straunge countrye, thou lyghte of oure eyes, thou staffe of oure age, thou comfort of oure lyfe, thou hope of oure generacyon? Seinge all the thynges that we haue are onlye in ỹ we shulde not haue sente the awaye from vs.

Then Tobyas comforted her, and sayde: holde thy tonge, and be not dyscomforted, oure sonne is hole and sounde: the man that we sente hym wythall is faythfull ynoughe. Neuertheless, she might in no wyse be comforted but dayly went oute, loked aboute, and went aboute all the stretes, whereby she thoughte he shulde come agayne: that (yf it were possyble) she myghte se hym commynge afarre of. But Raguel sayde vnto hys sonne in lawe: O tary heare, & I shal sende a messenger vnto thy father Tobias to tell hym ỹ thou arte in good health. Tobyas sayd vnto him: I am sure, ỹ my father, & my mother count euery day, & ỹ theyr hertes are sorye.

So when Raguell prayed Tobyas wyth manye wordes, and wold in no wyse heare him he delyuered Sara vnto hym, & the halfe parte of all hys good, in seruauntes, and hande maydens, in sheepe, in Camels, and in kine, & muche mony, & so sente hym away from hym wyth peace & ioye, and sayde: The holye Aungell of the Lorde be wyth you in youre iourneye, & bringe you forth safe and sounde, that ye maye finde al thinges in good case wyth youre elders, & that myne eyes maye se youre chyldren afore I dye. So the elders embraced theyr daughter, kyssed her, and let her goo, exhortynge her to honoure her father and mother in lawe, to loue her husbãde, to rule wel her houshold, to kepe her house in good order, and to shewe her selfe sawtlesse.

The. xi. Chapter.

¶ Yonge Tobyas leuynge hys wyfe and houshold in the mydwaye, commeth before with the Angel. The dreame of his mother lokyng after her sonne. He is ioyfully receaued of hys father & mother. Sara commeth seuen dayes after.

AS they were nowe goynge homeward agayne, vpon the. xi. daye, they came to Charra, whych lyeth in the halfe waye towarde Niniue And the Aungell sayde: Brother Tobyas, thou knowest howe thou hast left thy father: therfore yf it please the, we two wyl go before, & let the housholde wyth thy wyfe and ỹ cattell come softe & fayer after vs. And when Tobias was contente ỹ they shulde go before, Raphael sayde vnto him: Take of the gaule of the fyshe wyth the, for it shalbe necessarye. So Tobias toke of ỹ gaule, & they went theyr way But Anna the mother of Tobyas sat dayly by the waye syde vpon the toppe of an hyll, from whence she might se farre about her. And while she was waytynge there, for hys commynge, she loked afarre of and anone she perceaued her sonne commynge, and ranne & told her husband sayinge: Beholde thy sonne commeth. And Raphael sayd vnto Tobias: Assoone as thou commeste into the house, immedyatly worshype the Lorde thy God, and geue thanckes vnto hym: then go to thy father, and kisse him, and stryke hys eyes ouer wyth the gall of the fyshe, ỹ thou hast brought wyth the. For besure, that hys eyes shall streyghte waye be opened, & thy father shall se the lyghte of heauen, and shal reioyce at the syghte of the. Then the dog ỹ had bene with them in theyr iourny, ranne before, & came as a messenger, & wagged hys tayle for gladnesse.

So the blynde father arose, and beganne to runne and stombled wyth hys feete, and gaue a seruaunte hys hande, ranne to mete hys sonne, receaued hym, and kyssed hym, he and hys wyfe and they beganne to wepe for Ioye.

Nowe when they had worshypped & thanked God, they sat downe. Then toke Tobias of the fishes gal, & annointed his fathers eyes: & taryed halfe an houre, & then began ỹ blemysh to go out of his eies, lyke as it had bene the whyte skyn of an egge: whyche Tobias toke, & drewe frõ his eies: & immediatly he receaued his syght

Then they praysed God, he and hys wyfe and all they that knewe hym. And Tobyas sayde: O Lorde God of Israell, I geue the prayse and thanckes, for thou hast chastened me, and made me hole. And loo nowe I do se my sonne Tobyas. After seuen dayes came Sara hys sõnes wyfe also hole & sounde wyth all the housholde & catell, wyth Camels & muche monye of his wynes, & wyth the money that he had receaued of Gabelus, & he tolde hys father & hys mother all the benefytes, whych God had done for hym, by the man that led hym. Achyor also and Nabath, Tobyas syster sonnes came, and were glad, and reioysed wyth hym, by reason of all the good that God had shewed vnto hym. And so for the space of seuen dayes they made merye, and were ryghte ioyfull euerychone.

¶ The. xii. Chapter.

¶ Yonge Tobyas rekened vp vnto hys father the pleasures that the Angell dyd hym. He offred vnto the Aungell halfe the goodes that he brought wyth hym.

THen Tobyas called hys sonne vnto hym and sayde: What maye we geue thys holye man, that went wyth the? Tobyas aunswered hys father and sayde: Father, what rewarde shall we geue hym? Or what thynge can deserue hys benefytes? He hath bene my guyde, and broughte me safe agayne: he receaued the mony from Gabelus, he caused me to get my wyfe, he droue ỹ euel spyryte from her, he hath bene an occacyon of gladnesse to her father & mother: he delyuered me, that I was not deuoured of the fish he hath made the to se the lyght of heauen, yea, we al haue receaued great good of hym. Howe shulde we worthely deserue these thynges vnto hym? But I praye the my father, ỹ thou wylte desire hym, yf haplye he wyl vouchsafe, to take wyth him the halfe of all that we haue brought

So the father and the sonne called hym, toke hym aſyde, and beganne to pray hym, that he wolde be contente to take in good worth the B halfe parte of all that they had brought.

Then ſayde he ſecretely vnto them. Prayſe ye the God of heauen, and geue thankes vnto him before all men lyuynge, for he hath ſhewed hys mercye vnto vs. It is good to hyde the kynges ſecrete, but to ſhewe and prayſe the worckes of God, it is an honourable thyng. Praier is good with faſtynge, and mercye is better then to horde vp treaſures of golde. For mercye deliuereth from death, cleanſeth ſynne, & cauſeth to fynde euerlaſtyng lyfe. But they ẏ do ſinne & vnrygh-teouſneſſe, are the enemyes of theyr owne ſoule.
Wherfore I tell you the truthe, and wyll
C hyde nothynge from you When thou prayedeſt wyth teares, and buryedeſt the dead, and lefteſt thy dyner, and hyddeſt the dead in thy houſe vp ꝑ the daye tyme, that thou mighteſt bury thē in the nyght: I offred thy prayer before the Lorde. And becauſe thou waſt accepte and beloued of God, it was neceſſarye, that temptaciō ſhuld trye the. And nowe hath the Lorde ſente me to heale ẏ and to delyuer Sara thy ſōnes wyfe frō the euell ſprete. For I am Raphael an Aungel, one of the ſeuen that ſtande before God.
When they heard thys, they were ſore a-frayed, and trembled, and fel downe vpon their faces vnto the grounde. Then ſayde the Angell Peace be wyth you, feare not Where as I haue bene wyth you, it is the wyll of God: geue prayſe and thanckes vnto hym.
D
Ge. xviii. a Iudi. viii. c
You thought that I dyd * eate and dryncke wyth you, but I vſe meate that is inuyſyble, & dryncke that cannot be ſene of men. Nowe ther fore is the tyme that I muſte turne agayne vn-to hym, that ſent me: but be ye thanckefull vnto God, and tell oute all hys worderous worckes
And when he had ſpoken thoſe wordes, he was taken awaye oute of theyr ſyghte, ſo that they ſawe hym nomoare. Then fell they downe flat vpō theyr faces, by the ſpace of thre houres, & prayſed God, when they aroſe vp they tolde all hys wonderous worckes.

C The. xiii. Chapter.

C Tobias the elder geueth thanckes vnto God.

A THen olde Tobias opened his mouth and: prayſed the Lorde and ſayde: Greate arte thou O Lorde for euermoare, and thy kyngedome worlde wythout ende: for thou ſcourgeſt ād healeſt, thou leadeſt vnto hell, & bringeſt oute agayne: and there is none that may eſcape thyne hande. O geue thanckes vnto the Lord, ye chyldren of Iſraell, & prayſe hym in the ſyghte of the Heathen. For among ẏ Heathen wheych knowe hym not hath he ſcatered you, to the intente ẏ ye ſhulde ſhewe furthe hys meruelous worckes, and cauſe them for to knowe, that there is none other God Almyghtye but he. He that chaſteneth vs for oure myſdedes, & for hys owne mercye ſake ſhall he ſaue vs.
B Conſyder then, howe he hath dealte wyth you, and prayſe hym wyth feare and drede, and magnyfye the euerlaſtyng kynge in your workes. I wyl prayſe hym euen in the lande of my captyuytye, for he hath ſhewed hys maieſty vn-to a ſynfull people. Turne you therefore O ye ſinners, & do righteouſneſſe before God, & be ſuer, ẏ he wyll ſhewe hys mercy vpon you. As for me, & my ſoule, we wil reioyce in God. O praiſe the Lorde all ye hys choſen, holde the dayes of gladneſſe, & be thanckefull vnto hym, O Jeruſalem ẏ citie of God, the Lorde hathe punyſhed the for the worckes of thyne owne handes. O praiſe the Lord in thy good thynges, & geue thā kes to the euerlaſtynge God, ẏ he maye buylde vp his tabernacle agayne in the, ẏ he maye cal a gayne vnto the, all ſuch as be in captiuytie, and ẏ thou mayeſte haue ioye for euermore. With a fayer lyght ſhalt thou ſhyne, and al the endes of the worlde ſhall honour ẏ. The people ſhal come vnto the from farre, they ſhall bringe gyftes, and worſchyppe the Lorde in the, and thy lande ſhall they haue for a Sanctuarye, for they ſhall call vpon the greate name in the.
C Curſed ſhall they be that dyſppyſe the, and all that blaſpheme the, ſhalbe condempned: but bleſſed ſhall they be that buylde the vp. As for the thou ſhalte reioyce in thy chyldren, for they all ſhalbe bleſſed, and gathered together vnto the Lorde. Bleſſed are they all that lone the and that be glad of thy peace. Prayſe thou the Lorde, O my ſoule, for the Lorde oure God hath de lyuered hys cytye Jeruſalem from all her troubles. I wyll counte my ſelfe happye, yf my ſeed remayne to ſe the clearneſſe of Jeruſalem. The gates of Jeruſalem ſhalbe buylded wyth Saphyre, & Smaragde, and all the compaſſe of her walles wt precious ſtones. Al her ſtretes ſhalbe paued wt whyte marble ſtone, and in al ẏ ſtretes ſhall Allelupa be ſonge. Prayſed be the lorde, whych hath exalted her, ẏ hys kyngdome maye be vpon her for euermore. Amen. And ſo Toby as made an ende of hys talkynge.

C Tobias prophecieth the deſtruccion of Niniue. His ſōne returneth to Raguel after the deceſſe of his father & mother

A AND after ẏ Toby as had gotten his ſight agayne, he liued. xlii. yeares, & ſawe hys chylders childzen. Nowe when he was, C. & .ii. yeare olde, he dyed: & was buried honourablye in Niniue. For whē he was. lvi. yeares of aege he loſt the ſyght of hys eyes, & whē he was. lx. yere olde, he gat hys ſyghte agayne. The reſydue of hys lyfe led he in ioye, & increaſed well in the feare of God, & departed in peace. But in the houre of hys death he called vnto hym hys ſōne
B Tobias, & .vii. ponge ſprygnalde hys ſonnes chyldren, & ſayde vnto them: The deſtruccyon of Niniue is at hande, for the worde of the Lorde cannot fayle: & our brethrē ẏ are ſcatered out of the land of Iſrael, ſhall come thether agayne And ẏ hole lāde of it ẏ hath ben waſt, ſhalbe fyl led: & the houſe of God ẏ was brent in it, ſhalbe buylded agayne: & all ſuch as feare God, ſhal re turne thether: ẏ Heathen alſo ſhal forſake theyr ydolles, and come to Jeruſalem, & dwel there, & all the kynges of the earthe ſhalbe glad of her, and worſchyppe the Lorde God of Iſraell.

And therfore

C And therfore my chyldren, heare youre father: serue the Lorde in the truth, seke after hys wyll, and do the thynge that pleaseth hym. Commaunde youre chyldren that they do right geue almes: be myndeful of God, and euer to be thanckefull vnto hym in truth, & wyth al theyr power: Heare me nowe therefore my chyldren, and abyde not heare: but in what daye soeuer ye haue buryed your mother besyde me, get you from hence. wolde not folowe the goddes of theyr fathers ẏ were in the lande of the Caldees, and so for soke they the custome of theyr fore fathers (whyche had manye goddes) and worshypped one God, that made heauen & earth: whych also commaũded them that they shulde goo from thence, and dwel at Harã. Nowe, when ther came a dearth into the hole land, they wente downe to Egipt
Gene. xb.c Actes. bii.a Exod. xii. f Gala. iq.a. and there they dwelte * foure hundred yeares, in the which they multiplyed greatly, that their hooste myghte not be nombred. And when the kynge of Egypte oppressed them, and subdued them in buyldynge of hys cytyes wyth making of claye and brycke, they cryed vnto God theyr Lorde, whyche punyshed the hole lande of Egypte wyth dyuers plages.

Nowe when the kynge of Egypte let them go theyr waye, and the plage ceassed, and then folowed after them, to take them ãd to brynge them agayne into hys seruyce, while they were flyinge away, the God of heauen opened the see so that the waters stode faste vpon bothe the sydes as a wall, and these wente thorowe the botome of the see dryesshod. In the whyche place when an innumerable people of the Egyppciãs. folowed vpõ them, they were so ouerwhelmed wyth the waters: that there remayned not one to tell them that came after, howe it happened So when thys people was passed thorowe the red see, they came into the wildernesse of mount Sinay, where neuer man myghte dwell afore, and where the sonne of man neuer rested. There were the bytter waters made swete for them, that they myghte drynke, and fortie yeares had they meat from heauen. Whersoeuer they went (wythout bowe and arowe, wythoute buckler or swearde theyr God fought for them, & caused them to haue the victory. Yea, noman was hable to hurte thys people, excepte it were, that
D they departed vnfaythfully from the worshyppyng of the Lord their God. But as oft as they worshypped anye other beside theyr God, he gaue them ouer to be spoyled, to be slayne, and to be put to confusyon. Neuertheless, as oft as they were sorye for theyr departynge from the worshyp of theyr God, the same God of heauen gaue them power and strengthe to wythstande theyr enemyes.

Moreouer, they slue the kyng of the Cananites, Jebusytes, Pheresytes, Hethytes, Euytes, and Amorytes, & all the myghtie in Heslebõ and toke theyr landes and cytyes in possessyon: and so longe as they synned not in the syghte of theyr God, it wente well wyth them, for theyr God hateth vnryghteousnesse. For in tymes paste when they wente onte of the waye which God had geuen them, that they shulde walke in it, they were destroyed in diuers battayles of many nacyons: and many of them were caryed awaye prysoners vnto a straunge countrye. But nowe lately they haue turned them selues. agayne vnto the Lorde theyr God, & are come together agiane out of the countries wher they were scatered abroade: and thus haue they conquered these mountaynes, and dwell therein: & as for Jerusalem wher the Sanctuary is, they haue it agayne in possessyon.

And therfore my Lorde, make dylygent inquysicion, yf thys people haue done wyckednesse in the syghte of theyr God, then let vs goo vp agaynste them, for doubtlesse theyr God shal delyuer them into thy handes, & subdue them vnto thy power: But yf thys people haue not displeased theyr God, we shal not be hable to withstande them, for theyr God shall defende them: and so shall we be a shame to all the worlde.

Nowe when Achior had spoken oute these wordes, all the greate men of Holofernes were wroth, and thought to slaye hym, and saide one to a nother: What is he this, that dare say, that the chyldren of Israell are hable to withstande Nabuchodonosor the kynge, & his hoost: where as they are an vnweapened people, wythoute strengthe, or vnderstandynge of the feates of warre? That Achyor therfore may knowe that he hath dysceaued vs, we wyll go vp to the mountaynes: when the myghtye men of them are taken, he also shalbe stycked wyth the sweard, that all people maye knowe, that Nabuchodonosor is the god of the earthe, and that there is none other wythoute hym.

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

Achior is commytted into the handes of the Jewes by Holofernes. He is tyed to a tre, but is lowsed of ẏ Jewes. The prayer of the people. Achior is comforted of the Jewes.

SO when they had lefte of speakynge Holofernes toke sore indygnacyon, and sayde vnto Achyor: For somuch as thou hast prophecyed vnto vs saynge: that the people of Israell shalbe defended of theyr God, I wyl shewe the, that there is no God but Nabuchodonosor. Yee, when we slaye them all as one man, thou also shalt perysche wyth them thorowe the swearde of the Asserpans, & all Israell shalbe destroyed wyth the, and then thou shalte fele, that Nabuchodonosor is the lorde of the whole earth. Thẽ shall the sweard of my knighthode go thorowe thy sydes, and thou shalte fall downe stycke amouge the wounded of Israel, & shalt not come to thy selfe againe but be vtterly destroied with them. But yf thou thynckest thy prophecy to be trewe, why doeste thou then change thy coloure why arte thou afrayde? Thynckest thou that my wordes are not able to be perfourmed? But ẏ thou mayst knowe that thou shalte fele these thynges wyth them, beholde, from thys houre forth wyll I sende the to yonder people, ẏ when the punyshemente of my swearde (whyche they haue worthily deserued) falleth vpõ them, thou mayest be punyshed wyth them.

So Holofernes commaunded hys seruãuntes to take Achior, & carye hym to Bethulya, & to delyuer hym into the handes of the chyldren of Israel. Then Holofernes seruauntes toke hym, and wente thorowe the playne felde. But when they drewe nygh vnto the mountaynes, the slynge casters came out agaynste them. Neuertheless, they gat them awaye by the syde of the mountayne, and bounde Achiors hande and foote to a tree, and so left hym bounde wyth wy thes, and turned agayne vnto theyr lorde.

Notwythstandynge, the chyldren of Israel wente downe from Bethulia, came vnto hym loosed hym, broughte hym into Bethulia, set hym in the myddeste of ỹ people, and asked hym what the matter was, that the Asserpans had lefte hym bounde.

C Dsyas, the sonne of Micha, of the trybe Symeon, & Charmim (whych is also called Gothoniel) were the pryncypal rulers at the same tyme. Nowe when Achior stode in the myddest of the Sennatoures, & before them all, he tolde them, what aunswere he gaue Holofernes to ỹ thyng that he asked hym, and howe Holofernes people wolde haue slayne hym for so sayinge: & how Holofernes hym selfe was wrothe, & commaunded hym for the same cause to be deliuered vnto the Israelites: that when he ouercame the chyldren of Israel, he myghte commaunde Achyor also to be put to deathe wyth dyuers tormentes, because he sayde the God of heauen is theyr defender. And when Achyor had playnely tolde oute all these thynges, all the people fell downe vpon theyr faces, praysyng the Lorde, and poured oute theyr prayers together vnto the Lorde, wyth a generall complaynte, and weappynge, and sayde: O Lorde God of heauen and of earth, beholde theyr pryde: & looke vpon oure lowlynesse, & consyder howe it standeth wyth thy saynctes, & make it to be knowne, ỹ thou forsakest not those, whych holde them faste by the D and howe that thou bryngest them lowe ỹ presume of them selues, & make theyr bost in theyr owne strength. So when the weppynge & prayer of the people (whyche they had made the hole daye longe) was ended, they comforted Achyor sayinge: The God of oure fathers, whose power and strengthe thou haste praysed, shall rewarde the, that thou shalte rather se theyr destruccyon. When the Lorde oure God then shal geue hys seruauntes thys lybertye: God be also wyth the amonge vs: so that yf it please the, thou wyth all thyne mayest dwell wyth vs.

Nowe when Dsias had ended the counsayle he toke hym into hys house, and made a great supper, called the elders to it: & so they refreshed them selues after the fastyng. And afterwarde was al the people called together whyche made theyr prayers al the nyght longe in ỹ congregacyon, and besoughte the God of Israel for helpe

C The. vii. Chapter.

C Bethulia is beseged of Holofernes. The people requireth helpe of God. They of Bethulia wold geue ouer the cytie for want of water. The prayer of ỹ people wt teares & lamẽtaciõ

A The nexte day Holofernes commaunded hys host to go vp agaynste Bethulia. There was an. C. and. xx. M fyghtynge men on foote, & .xxii. M. horsemen, besyde the preparynge of them ỹ were wonne: & came to them on euerye syde out of the countryes & cytyes which he had taken. All these prepared them selues vnto the battayle agaynste the Israelytes, and came on by ỹ hyl side, vnto the toppe ỹ loketh ouer agaynst Dothaim, from ỹ place which is called Belma, vnto Chelmon ỹ lyeth towarde Esdrelon.

Nowe, when the chyldren of Israell sawe B so great a multytude of the Asserians, they fell downe flat vpon the ground, strowed asshes vpon theyr heades, & prayed wyth one accorde, ỹ the God of Israel wolde shewe hys mercye vpõ hys people. And so they toke theyr weapens ād sat betwene the mountaynes in the narowe place, & kepte the waye, daye and nyghte But whyle Holofernes was going about, he founde the water sprynge, whych from the South syde was conueyed into the cytye by a condyte: thys commaunded he to dyrecte an other waye, and to cut theyr cõdyte in sonder. There were wels also not far from ỹ walles, whych they vsed secretlye, more for pleasure then for necessytye.

Then wente the Amonytes, and the Moa- C bites vnto Holofernes, & sayde: The chyldren of Israel truste nether in speare nor arowe, but haue taken in, and kepe the mountaynes & hylles. That thou mayst ouercome them, therfore wythout the strykyng of any battaile, set men to kepe the welles, ỹ they drawe no water oute of them: so shalte thou destroye them wythoute swearde, or at the leest they shalbe so feble, that they must be fayne to geue ouer the citie, which they thincke not hable to be wonne: for so much as it lyeth in the mountaynes. These wordes pleased Holofernes well and al hys men of war & he set an hundreth at euery well rounde about

And when thys watch had endured twen- D tye dayes, the Cysterns and al ỹ had water, fayled them ỹ dwelte in the cytye of Bethulia, so ỹ in the hole cytye they had not dryncke ynoughe for one daye, for the people had water geuen thẽ daylye in a measure. Then came the men and wemen, ponge persones, & chyldren al vnto Dsias, & sayde all wyth one voyce: God be iudge betwyxte vs and the, for thou hast delte euell wt vs: thou woldest not speake peceably wyth the kynge of ỹ Asserpans, therefore hath God solde vs in theyr handes, & there is no mã to helpe vs where as we are broughte downe before theyr eyes in thyrste and greate destruccyon. Therefore gather nowe together all the people ỹ be in the cytie, ỹ we maye all yelde oure selues wyllyngely vnto the people of Holofernes, for better it is that we be captyue and prayse the Lord wyth oure lyues, then to be slayne and perysshe, and to be laughed to scorne ād shamed of euerye man, when we se oure wyues & chyldren dye before oure eyes. We take heauen and earth thys day to recorde: & the God of our fathers (which punysheth vs accordynge to the deseruynge of oure synnes) and gyue you warnynge, that ye gyue vp the cyty nowe into the power of Holyfernes hoste, that our ende maye be shorte with the swearde, whiche els shall endure longe, for want of water and for thyrste.

When thei had spokẽ out these wordes, there E was a great wepyng & howlynge in the whole congregacyon, and that of euery man: and they cryed an whole houre longe vnto god with one voyce, sayinge: we haue sinned with our fathers

we haue done amysse, we haue delte wyckedly. Thou ꝑ arte gracyous, haue mercye vpon vs, punysche our vnrygh teousnesse, wyth thyne owne scourge, and geue not those ouer ꝑ knowlege the vnto a people whych knowe ꝑ not, lest they saye amonge the Heathen: where is theyr God.

And when they were so werye wyth thys crynge and weppynge, that they helde theyr tōges, Olias, stode vp wyth watry eyes, & sayde O take good hertes vnto you, (deare brethren) and be of good cheare, & let vs wayt yet these fyue dayes for mercye of the Lorde paraduenture he shall put awaye hys indygnacyon, and geue glorye vnto hys name. But yf he helpe vs not when these fyue dayes are paste, we shall do as ye haue sayde.

¶ Of the vertuous woman Judyth: whych reproueth the auncyentes because they tempted the Lorde. She also moueth them to encorage and herten the people, and sheweth her counsell agaynste the enemyes of the Jewes.

A NDit happened when these wordes came to the eares of Judyth a wyddowe, whych was the daughter of Merari, the sonne of Idor, the sonne of Joseph, the sonne of Olya, the sonne of Elay, the sonne of Jammor, the sonne of Jedeon, ꝑ sonne of Raphoim, ꝑ sonne of Achitob ꝑ sōne of Melchia, ꝑ sōne of Euā, the sōne of Nathania, ꝑ sonne of Salathiel, the sōne of Simeō, the sonne of Ruben. And her husbād was called Manasses, whych dyed in the dayes of ꝑ barly harueste. For whyle he was byndyng the shewes together in the felde the heate came vpon hys heade, and he dyed at Bethulia, hys cytyte, & there was he buryed besyde hys fathers.

A Nowe was Judith hys desolate wyddowe thre yeares and syxe monethes. And in the hyer partes of her house, she made her selfe a preuye chamber, where she dwelte, beynge closed in wyth her maydens. She ware a smocke of heare and fasted all the dayes of her lyfe, excepte the Sabbothes, and newe mones: and the solempne dayes that the people of Israel kepte. She was a very fayer & bewtyful person. Her husband also had lefte her greate ryches, a plenteous housholde, greate vnmoueable possessyons and many catel. Thys Judith was a woman of a very good reporte wyth euery one, for she feared the Lorde greatlye, and there was no bodye that spake an euell worde of her.

When thys Judyth hearde, howe Olyas, had promysed the people, ꝑ after the fyfte daye he wolde geue vp the cytie vnto the Assyryans, she sente for the elders Chambry, and Charmy, & when they came to her, she sayde what thyng is thys, wherein Olyas hath consented, that yf God helpe not wythin fyue dayes, he wyll geue ouer the cytye to the Assyryans: What are ye ꝑ ye tempt the Lorde? This deuyce optayneth no mercy of God, but prouoketh hym to wrathe & displeasure. Wyl ye set the mercye of the Lorde a tyme, & appoynte hym a daye after your wyl?

¶ Neuertheless, for so muche as the Lorde is pacyente, let vs rather repente, pourynge oute teares, and besechynge hym of grace. For God threataneth not as a man, nether wyll he be prouoked vnto wrath as the chyldren of men. And therfore let vs hertely fall downe before hym, & serue hym wyth a meke spryte, and wyth weappynge eyes say vnto the Lorde ꝑ he deale wyth vs accordynge to hys owne wyll and mercye: ꝑ lyke as oure herte is nowe vexed, and brought lowe thorowe the pryde of them, it maye be so conforted thorowe hys grace: in so much as we folowe not the synnes of oure fathers, whyche forsoke theyr God, and worshypped other goddes for the whych synne they perysshed with the swearde, were spoyled and brought to shame, of all theyr enemyes. As for vs we knowe none other God but onelye hym, for whose comforte let vs tary wyth mekenesse. He shall requyre and make inquysycyonk or oure bloude, from ꝑ vexacyons of oure enemyes: he shall brynge downe all the Heathen, that ryse vp agaynste vs, & put them to dyshonour, euen ꝑ Lord our God

D Therfore deare breathren, seyng ye are the honourble and elders in the people of God, vnto whome all the people haue respect, and vpon whome the lyfe of the people standeth, lyfte vp theyr hertes wyth youre exhortacyon that they maye call to remembraunce, howe oure fathers also in tymes past were tempted, ꝑ they myght be proued, yf they worshypped theyr God a ryght. They ought to remembre, howe* our father Abraham beynge tempted, and tryed thorowe manye trybulacyons, was founde a louer and frende of God. So was Isahac, so was Jacob, so was Moses, & al they that pleased God beynge tryed thorowe many troubles, were founde steadfaste in fayth. Agayne, they that receaued not theyr temptacyons wyth the feare of God but put them selues forth wyth vnpacyencye and murmurynge agaynste God, perysshed of the destroyer, & were slayne of serpentes. And therfore shulde not we vndertake to be auenged for the thynge ꝑ is done vnto vs, but consyder, that al these punyshementes are farre lesse then oure synnes and mysdedes. Beleuyng also that thys correccyon commeth vnto vs (as to the seruauntes of God) for amendemente, and not for oure destruccyon. Gen. xxii. 8

E Then sayde Olias, and the elders vnto Judyth: All that thou spakest, is true, and noman cā repreue thy wordes. Pray ꝑ for vs nowe therfore vnto God, for thou arte an holy woman, & fearest God. And Judyth sayde vnto them: Seing, ye knowe ꝑ my wordes are of God, thē proue my counceland deuyse, yf yt be of God: & beseche God ꝑ he wyl brīg my councel to good end

Thus haue I deuysed: Ye shall stande this nyghte before the porte, and I wyll goo forthe wyth Abra my mayden. Praye ye therefore vnto God: that he wyll gracyously remember hys people of Israel whithin fyue dayes, as ye haue sayde. As for the thyng that I go in hande with all, aske ye no questyons of yt, tyll I open it vnto you my selfe: do ye nothynge elles but praye vnto the Lorde youre God for me. Then Olias, the Prynce of the people of Juda, sayd vnto her Goo eny waye in peace, the Lorde be with the,

that we maye be auenged of our enemyes. And so they wente frome her agayne.

The.ix. Chapter.

The prayer of Judyth for the byctorye.

A WOwe when they were gone theyr waye, Judyth wente into her closet, put on an hearie smocke, strawed asches vpon her heade, fel downe before the Lorde, & cryed vnto him saying: O Lord God of my father ge.xxviiii.d and.Exp.a. *Simeon, whych gauest hym a swearde for a defence agaynste the enemyes that vsed vyolence and wylfulnesse, and that raupshed the vyrgyne and put her to dyshonestye. Thou that gauest theyr wyues into a praye, and theyr daughters into captyuytye, and all theyr praye for a spoyle vnto thy seruauntes, whyche bare a zele vnto the: helpe me wyddowe, O Lord my God I beseche the. For thou hast done all thynges from the begynnynge: and loke what thou hast taken in hande & deuysed, it came euer to passe. For all thy wayes are prepared, & thy iudgemētes are done in thy euerlastynge foreknowlege. O loke nowe vpon the armyes of the Assyrians lyke as it was thy pleasure sometime to loke vpon the hoost of the Egyptyans, when they bynge weapened, persecuted thy seruauntes, and put theyr truste in theyr charettes, horsemen, & in the multytude of theyr men of warre. But thou lokedest vpon theyr hoost, casting a thycke darckenesse before them: & when they came into the depe, the waters ouerwhelmed them.

Euen so Lorde let it go wyth these, ẏ truste
B in the power & multitude of theyr men of warre in theyr charettes, arowes, and speares, & knowe not ẏ thou onlye arte oure God, whyche destroyest warres from the begynnynge, & that ẏ arte the Lorde. O lyfte vp thyne arme nowe, lyke as euer from the begynnynge, & in thy power brynge theyr power to naughte: cause theyr myghte to fall in thy wrath. They make theyr boost, that they wyll vnhalowe and defyle thy Sanctuarye, & to wast the tabernacle of thy name, & to caste downe the horne of thyne aulter, wyth theyr swearde. Brynge to passe (O Lorde) that the pryde of the enemye be cutte downe wyth hys owne swearde, that he may be taken wyth the snares of hys eyes in me, & that thou mayest smyte hym wyth the lyppes of my loue
C O geue me a stedfast mynde, ẏ I maye dyspyse hym & hys strength, & that I maye destroy hym

Thys shall brynge thy name an euerlastynge remembraunce, yf the hande of a woman ouer throwe hym. For thy power (O Lorde) standeth not in the power of men, neyther haste thou anye pleasure in the strengthe of horses. There was neuer proude parsone that pleased the, but in the prayer of the humble and meeke, hathe thy pleasure bene euermore.

O thou God of the heauens, thou maker of the waters, and Lorde of all creatures, heare me poore woman, callynge vpon the, and puttynge my truste in thy mercye. Remembre thy couenaunte. O Lorde, and mynyster wordes in my mouthe, & stablyshe thys deuyce in my herte that thy house maye contynue styll in holynesse and that al the Heathen maye knowe that thou arte God, and that there is none other but thou

The.x. Chapter.

Judith decketh her selfe to go to Holofernes, The blessynge that the elders gaue Judyth. Holofernes is in loue wyth Judyth.

A AND when she had lefte of crynge vnto the lorde, she rose vp from the place where she had lyne flat before the Lorde, and called her mayden, wente downe into her house, layde the hearye cloth from her, put of the garmentes of her wyddowhode, washed her bodye, anoynted her selfe wyth precyous thinges, of swete saueure, bryded & platted her heare, set an houe vpō her head, & put on such apparel as belōgeth vnto gladnesse, slyppers vpon her feete, armeletes, spanges, earynges, fyngerynges, and decked her selfe wyth all her beste araye.

The Lord gaue her also a specyall bewtye & fayernesse (for all thys deckynge of her selfe, was not done for anye voluptuousnesse, & pleasure of the fleshe, but of a ryghte dyscrecion and vertue, therefore dyd the Lorde increase her beutye,) so that she was exceadynge ampable, and welfauoured in all mens eyes. She gaue her mayde also a bottell of wyne, a pot wyth oyle, pottage, cakebreade and chese, & went her way

Nowe when she came to the porte of the cy-
B tye, she founde Dyas, and the elders of the cytie waytynge there. Whyche when they sawe her, they were astonyed, & maruelled greatlie at her bewtye. Neuertheless, they asked no questyon at her, but let her go, sayinge: The God of oure fathers geue the hys grace, and wyth hys power perfourme all the deuice of thy hert, that Jerusalem maye reioyce ouer the, and that thy name maye be in the nombre of the holy and ryghteous. And all they that were there, sayde wyth one voyce: so be it, so be it. Judith made her prayer vnto the Lorde, and wente onte at the porte, she and her mayde.

And as she was goinge downe the mountayne, it happened that aboute the sprynge of ẏ daye, the spyes of the Assyryans met wyth her, and tooke her, sayinge: whence commeste thou? Or whether goest thou? She aunswered: I am a daughter of the Hebrues, & am fled from them for I knowe that they shalbe geuen vnto you to be spoiled: because they thought scorne to yelde them selues vnto you, that they myghte fynde mercye in youre syghte. Therfore, haue I deuysed by my selfe after thys maner: I wyll go before the Prynce Holofernes, & tell hym all theyr secretes, and wyll shewe hym, howe he maye come by them and wynne them, so that not one man of hys hoost shall perysshe.

C des, & consydred her kaper face they were astoyned (for they wondred at her excellente bewtye) & sayde vnto her: Thou haste saued thy lyfe by fyndynge out thys deuyce, that thou woldeste come downe to oure Lorde: & be thou sure, that when thou commest vnto hym, he shall intreate the well, and thou shalte please hym at the hert

So they

So they brought her into Holofernes pauylyon, and tolde hym of her. Nowe when she came in before hym, immedyatlye he was ouercome, and taken wyth her bewtye. Then sayd hys seruauntes: who wold dyspyse the people of the Jewes, that haue so fayre wemen? Shuld we not by reason fyghte agaynste them for these? So when Judyth sawe Holofernes, syttynge in a canappe, that was wrought of purple, sylcke, gold, Smaragde, & precyous stones, she looked faste vpon hym and fell downe vpon the earthe And Holofernes seruauntes toke her vp againe at theyr lordes commaundemente.

¶ The. xi. Chapter.

¶ Holofernes requyreth of Judyth the cause of her commynge: whych geueth hym a subtel answere.

Then sayde Holofernes vnto her: Be of good chere, and feare not in thyne herte, for I neuer hurte man that wold serue Nabuchodonosor ỳ kynge. As for thy people, yf they had not dyspyseed me, I shulde not haue lyfte vp my speare agaynste thē, But tell me nowe, what is the cause ỳ thou art departed from them, & wherefore art thou come vnto vs.

And Judyth sayde vnto hym: Syr, vnderstande the wordes of thy handemayden, for yf thou wylt do after the wordes of thy handmayden, the Lorde shall bringe thy matter to a prosperous effecte. As truly as Nabuchodonosor a lorde of the lande lyueth, & as truly as hys power lyueth, which is in the to ỳ punyshemente of all men that go wronge, all men shall not onelye be subdued vnto hym thorowe the, but all ỳ beastes also of the feld. For all the people spake of thy prudente actinytie: and it hath euer bene reported, howe thou onelye art good and myghtye in all hys kyngedome, and thy dyscrecyon is commended in all landes.

The thynge is manyfest also, that Achyor spake, and it is wel knowen, what thou commaundest to do vnto hym. For thys is playne and of a suretye, that our God is so wrathe wythvs (by the reason of oure synnes) that he hath shewed by hys Prophetes vnto the people, howe ỳ for theyr synnes he wyll delyuer them ouer vnto the enemye. And for so muche as the chyldren of Israell, knowe that they haue so dyspleased theyr God, they are lore afrayed of the.

They suffer great hunger also, & for want of water, they are dead nowe in a maner. Moreouer, they are appoynted to slaye all theyr catel that they maye dryncke the bloude of them, and are purposed to spende all the holy ornamentes of theyr God (which he hath forbydden them to touch) for corne, wyne, and oyle. Seynge nowe that they do these thynges it is a playne case, ỳ they muste nedes be destroyed. Wherych when I thy handemayden perceaued, I fled from them and the Lorde hath sente me vnto the, to shewe the these thynges. For I thy handmayden wor shypped God euen nowe here besyde the, and thy handemayden shall go forth, and I wyll make my prayer vnto God, & he shall tell me when he wyll rewarde them theyr synne: then shall I come and shewe the and bryng ỳ thorowe the myddest of Jerusalem, so that thou shalte haue all ỳ people of Israell, as the shepe wythout a shepheard: there shal not so much as one dogge barke agaynste the, for these thynges are shewed me, by ỳ prouydence of God: & for so much as God is displeased wt thē, he hath sēt me to tel ỳ the same

These wordes pleased Holofernes and all his seruauntes, which merueled at the wisdom of her, & sayde one to another: there is not suche a woman vpon earth, in bewtie & dyscrecyon of wordes. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: God hath done well, that he hath sente the hether before thy people, that thou mayeste geue them into oure handes. And for so muche as thy promyse is good, yf God perfourme it vnto me, he shal be my God also, and thou shalte be excellente & greate in the courte of Nabuchodonosor, & thy name shalbe spoken of in all the lande.

¶ Holofernes commaundeth that Judyth be well intreasted. She desyreth lycence to goo oute in the nyghte season to praye, and optayneth it. Vagao is sent vnto her, to moue her to come into Holofernes to a bancket, and she commeth Holofernes is dronken.

Then commaunded he her to goo in where hys treasure laye, & charged that she shulde haue her dwellynge there, and appoynted what shulde be geuen her from hys table. Judith answered hym and sayde: As for the meate that thou hast commaunded to geue me, I maye not eate of it as nowe (lest I displease my God) but wyll eate of suche as I haue brought wyth me Then sayde Holofernes vnto her: yf these thynges ỳ thou haste brought wyth the fayle, what shall we do vnto the? And Judyth sayde: As truly as thou lyuest my Lorde thy handmayden shall not spend all thys, tyll God haue brought to passe in my hāde, the thinges ỳ I haue deuised

So hys seruauntes brought her into the tent, wher as he had appointed And as she was goynge in, she desyred that she myghte haue leaue to go forth by nyghte, and before daye to her prayer and to make intercession vnto the Lorde Then commaunded Holofernes hys chamberlaynes, that she shulde go out and in at her pleasure, to praye vnto God thos ethre dayes.

And so in the nyghte season she wente forth into the vallye of Bethulya, and washed her selfe in the well water. Then wente she vp and besoughte the Lord God of Israell. That he wold sprosper her waye. for the delyueraunce of hys people. And so she wente in, & remayned cleane in her tente, tyll she toke her meate in ỳ euenyng

Upon the fourth day it happened, that Holofernes made a supper vnto hys seruauntes, & sayde vnto Vagao his chamberlayne: Go thy way, and counsell thys Hebrueſſe, that she may be wyllynge to consente to kepe company with me. For it were a shame vnto all the Asseryans that a woman shulde so laughe a man to scorne ỳ she were come from hym vnmedled wythall.

Then wente Vagao vnto Judyth, & sayde: Let not the good daughter be afrayde, to come into my Lord, that she may be honoured before hym, that hym, that she maye eate and dryncke wine, and be merye wyth hym. Unto whome Judith aunswered: Who am I, that I shulde saye my Lorde naye: whatsoeuer is good before hys eyes, I shall do it: and looke what is hys pleasure, that shall I thyncke well done, as longe as I lyue.

D So she stode vp, and decked her selfe wyth her apparell, and wente in, and stode before him And Holofernes herte was whole moued, so ỹ he brente in desyre towarde her. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: dryncke nowe and syt downe, and be merye, for thou haste founde fauoure before me. Then sayde Judyth: Syr, I wyll dryncke, for my mynde is meryer to day, then euer it was in all my lyfe And she toke, ād dyd eate and drācke before hym, the thynges that her mayden had prepared for her. And Holofernes was merye wyth her, and drancke more wyne, then euer he dyd afore in all hys lyfe.

¶ Holofernes sleapeth for very dronckennes, and Judyth cutteth of hys heade: and goeth therewyth to her owne people of whom she is receaued wyth ioye, They geue thankes vnto God for theyr deliueraunce. Judith speaketh vnto Achyor: Whyche meruayleth at her feate done to Holofernes

A ANd whe yt was late in the nyght hys seruauntes made haste euery mā to hys lodgynge. And Vagao shute the chamber doores, and wente hys waye, for they were all ouerladen w̄ wyne. So was Judith alone in the chamber. As for Holofernes he laye vpon the bed al dronken, and of verye dronckennes fell a slepe.

Then commaunded Judith her mayden to stande wythoute before the doze, and to wayte And Judyth stode before the bed, makynge her prayer with teares, and moued her lyppes secretlye, and sayde: Strengthen me, O Lorde God of Israell, and haue a respecte vnto the workes of my handes in thys oure, that thou mayest set vp the cytye of Jerusalem, like as thou haste promysed: O graunte that by the I maye perfourme the thynge, whyche I haue deuysed thorowe the beleue, that I haue in the.

B And when she had spoken thys, she wente to the bedsteade, and lowsed the swearde that hanged vpon it, and drewe it oute. Then tooke she holde of the hearye lockes of hys heade, and sayd strengthen me, O Lord God in this houre and wyth that she gaue hym two strokes vpon the necke, and smote of hys head. Then toke she the canappye awaye, and rolled the deade bodye aside. Immedyatlye she got her forthe, and delyuered the head of Holofernes vnto her mayden, and bad her put it in her wallet.

And so these two wente forth together after theyr custome, as though they wolde praye and so passed by the hoste, and came thorowe the valley vnto the porte of the cytye. And Judyth cryed a farre vnto the watchmen vpon the walles: Open the gates (sayde she) for God is wyth vs. whyche hath shewed hys power vpon Israel. And when they hearde her voyce, they called the elders of the cytye together. And they came all to mete her: lytle and greate, ponge & olde, for they thoughte not that she shulde haue come so sone. So they lyghted candels, and gathered about her euerychone: but she wente vp into an hye place & caused silence to be proclaymed.

When euerye man nowe helde hys tonge, ¶ Judyth sayde: O prayse the Lorde our God for he hathe not dysspysed, nor forsaken them, that put theyr truste in hym, and in me his handmayden he hath performed hys mercy, whych he promised vnto ỹ house of Israel: yee, in my hād this same night hath he slaine ỹ enemy of his people

And wyth ỹ she toke forth the heade of Holofernes out of the wallet, & shewed it them sayinge: Beholde the heade of Holofernes the captaine of the Assirias, & this is the canapy, wher in he laye in his dronckennesse: where the Lorde our God hath slayne hym by ỹ hand of a womā

But as truly as the Lorde lyueth, hys Angell hath kepte me goynge thether, remaynyng there, & commynge hether agayne from thence. And the Lorde hath not suffered me hys handemayden to be defyled, but wythoute any fylthynes of synne hath he brought me agayne vnto you: and that wyth greate victorye, soo that I am escaped, and delyuered. O geue thankes vnto hym euerychone, for he is gracyous and his mercye endureth for euer.

So they praysed the Lorde all together, & gaue thanckes vnto him. And to her they sayde The Lord hath blessed the in his power, for thorowe the: he hath brought oure enemyes to naught. And Ozias the chefe ruler of ỹ people of Israel, sayde vnto her: Blessed art thou of the Lorde the hye God, aboue all wemen vpon earth.

Blessed be the Lorde, the maker of heauen D and earthe, whyche hathe guyded the a ryghte to wounde and smyte of the heade of the captayne of oure enemyes. For thys day he hath made thy name so honourable, that thy prayse shall neuer come oute of the mouthe of men, whyche shall alwaye remember the power of the Lorde seynge thou haste not spared thyne owe selfe, but put the in ieoperdye, consyderynge the aunguysshe and trouble of thy people, and so haste helped theyr fall before God oure Lorde. And all the people sayde: Amen, Amen.

Achyor also was called, and he came. Then sayde Judyth vnto hym: The God of Israel vn G to whome thou gaueste wytnes, that he wolde be aduenged of hys enemyes, euen he hath thys nyghte thorowe my hande: smytten of the head of all the vnkaythfull. And that thou mayeste se that it is so, beholde, thys is the heade of Holofernes, whyche in hys presumtuous pryde, dyspysed the God of the people of Israel, & threatened the wyth destruccyon, sayinge: when the people of Israel is taken, I shall cause the also to be stycke wyth the swearde. When Achyor sawe Holofernes heade, he fell downe vpon his face to the grounde for verye anguysshe and feare, so that he sowned wythall.

But after that he was come agayne to hym selfe, he fell downe before her, and praysed her, sayinge: Blessed arte ỹ of thy God, in al the tabernacles of Jacob: for all the people ỹ heare of thy name, shal praise ỹ god of Israel because of ỹ

¶ The counsayle of Judyth. Achior beinge an Heathen man turneth to God The Assyrians are afrayed of the Jewes.

A Judyth sayde vnto all the people: bre thren, heare me. Stycke vp thys hea de vpon oure walles, and when the sũne aryseth, take euery man hys we apon, and fall out vyolentlye: not as though ye wolde go beside them, but to runne vpon them wyth vyolence. When the spyes in the tentes se this, they shall of necessitie be com pelled to flye backward, & to rayse vp theyr cap tayne to the battayle. So when theyr captay nes come into Holofernes pauylion, & fynde the dead body wrapped in the bloude, fearfulnesse shall fall vpon them, & when ye perceaue ỳ they flye, folow them wythout al care, for God shal delyuer them vnto you to be destroyed.

Then Achyor seing ỳ power of God, which he had shewed vnto the people of Israel, fell of from hys Heathenysche beleke, and put hys trust in God, and let hym selfe be circumcysed: and so was he nombred amonge the people of Israell, he and all hys posterye vnto thys daye.

B Nowe as soone as it was daye, they stickte vp Holofernes heade vpon the walles, and euery man tooke hys weapen, and so they wente oute wyth an horyble crye. When the spyes sawe that, they ranne vnto Holofernes tente. And they that were wythin the tente, came be fore hys chamber, and made a greate ruschynge to wake hym vp, because they thought wyth ỳ noyse to haue rapsed hym. For there durste not one of the Assyryans knocke, go in, or open.

But when the captaynes and princes: and all the chefe in the kynge of the Assyryans hoost came together, they sayde vnto the chamberlay nes: Go youre waye in, and wake hym vp for the myse are crepte oute of theyr hooles, and dare prouoke vs vnto battayle.

¶ Thẽ went Vagao into his chamber, stode before the bed, & clapped wyth hys handes, for he thought he had bene sleppynge wyth Judyth. But when he had herkened perfectly with hys eares, and coulde perceaue no sterynge, he wente nygher to the bedde, and lyfte it vp, and then sawe he the deade bodye of Holofernes lyinge there without a head, welterd in his bloud vpon the earth. Then cryed he wyth lowde voyce, & wyth weppynge rente hys clothes, & wente into Judyths tente, and founde her not: And so he lept oute vnto the people & sayde: one womã of the Jewes, hath brought all Nabuchodonosors people vnto shame. For loo, Holofernes lyeth vpon the grounde and hathe no heade.

When the cheke of the Assyryans Hoofte heardeỳ, they rente theyr clothes, and there fell an intollerable feare and trembling vpon them soỳ theyr myndes were sore afrayde. And there was an exceadyng great crye in the whole hoft

The flyghte of the Assirians. The pursute of Israel after them. Israel becommeth ryche: by the spoyles of the Assyryans. Judith is prayfed of Joachim: and of the people.

A Nowe when all the hoofte heard that Holofernes was headed, theyr mynde & coũcel fel from them, and suche a feare came vpon them that they vndertoke to defend them selues by flying away: one spake not to another but hãged downe theyr heades, lefte al behynd them: and made haste to escape from the Hebrues: for they hearde, that they were hastynge to come after wyth theyr weapẽs, and so they fled by the wayes of the feldes, and thorowe all the foote pathes of the dales.

And when the chyldren of Israel sawe that they fled, they folowed vpon them, and wente downe wyth trompetes, blowynge, and makinge a greate crye after them. As for the Assiryans, they had no order, and kepte not them selues togeather, but fled theyr waye. Nenertheleffe, the chyldren of Israel fell vpon them with one companye and order, & dyscomfyted as many as they myghte get. And Ozias sent messaũgers vnto all the cytyes & countryes of Israel.

So all the regyons & euery cytie sent oute B theyr best men after them in harnes, & smot thẽ wyth the swearde, tyll they came to the vtmost parte of theyr borders. And the other ỳ were in Bethulia came into the tentes of the Assir pãs, & toke al, that they whych fled had lefte behynd them, & so they founde great good. And they ỳ came agayne to Bethulya from the battayle, tooke w̃ them suche thynges as had bene theyrs there was no nombre of the catell, and of the costlye Jewelles, so that from the lowest vnto the hyghefte, they were all made ryche of the spoyles of them. And Joachym the hyghe preaste at Jerusalem, came to Bethulya wyth al ỳ elders that they myghte se Judyth.

Nowe when she came out vnto them, they beganne all to prayse her wyth one voyce, saynge: ỳ worschyppe of the cytye of Jerusalem, ỳ ioye of Israel, ỳ honoure of oure people, ỳ haste done mãly, & thy herte is cõforted, because thou hast loued clenlynesse & chastyte, & hast knowen no mã but thyne owne husbãd: therfore hath ỳ hand of ỳ Lord comforted the: & blessed shalte ỳ be for euer. And all people sayde so be it, so be it.

In thyrtye dayes coulde the people of Israell scarce gather vp the spoyles of the Assyrians. But all that belonged vnto Holofernes, & had ben hys specially (whether it were of gold, of syluer, precyous stones, clothynge, and all ornamentes) they gaue it vnto Judyth. And all the people reioyced, bothe wemen, maydens, & younge people, wyth pypes and hearpes.

¶ The coppe of the letters of Artharerses agaynst the Iewes. The prayer of Mardocheus.

A THe great kyng Artharerses whych raygneth from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an C. & .xxvii. landes, sendeth his frendly salutacion vnto al ꝑ prynces & debites of ꝑ countres which be subiect vnto his dominiō. Whē I was made lord ouer many people, & had subdued ꝑ whole earth vnto my dompniō, my mynde was not w̄ cruelty & wrong to exhalte my selfe by ꝑ reason of my power: but purposed w̄ equyte alway & gentelnes, to gouerne those ꝑ be vnder my iurisdicciō, & wholie to set thē in a peceable lyfe, & therby to bring my kigdome vnto trā quillite, ꝑ men myght safely go thorowe on euery syde, & to renew peace agayne, which al men desire. Nowe when I asked my coūcelers howe B these thynges myghte be brought to a good ende, there was one by vs, excellente in wysdome whose good wil, truth & faythfulnes hath oft bene shewed & proued (whych was also ꝑ principal & nexte to the kyng) Aman by name: whych certyfyed vs howe ꝑ in all landes there was scatered abroade a rebellyous folke, that made statutes & lawes agaynste all other people: & haue alwaye dyspysed ꝑ proclaymed commaundements of kynges: & how that for thys cause it were not to be suffered that suche rule shulde contynue by you and not to be put downe.

C Seinge nowe we perceaue the same, ꝑ this people alone ar contrary vnto euery mā, vsyng straung & other maner of lawes, & wythstande our statutes & doynges, & goaboute to stablysh shrewed matters, ꝑ our kingdome shulde neuer come to good estate & stedfastenesse: Therfore haue we commaunded, ꝑ all they ꝑ are appointed in wrytynge & shewed vnto you by Aman, (whyche is ordeyned & set ouer all our landes) & the most pryncipal nert vnto the kyng, & in maner as a father, shall w̄ theyr wyues & chyldren be destroyed & rooted oute wyth the swearde of theyr enemyes & aduersaryes, and ꝑ there shalbe no mercy shewed, & no man spared. And this shalbe done the .xiiii. daye of the moneth (called Adar) of thys yeare, that they wyche of olde (& nowe also) haue euer bene rebellyous maye in one daye wyth vyolence be thruste downe into the hell, to thintente that after thys maner oure empyre maye haue peace and tranquylyte.

D But Mardocheus thoughte vpon all the worckes and noble actes of the Lorde, & made hys prayer vnto hym, sayinge: O Lorde Lorde, thou valeaunte and Almyghtye kynge (for all thynges are in thy power) & yf thou wylt helpe & delyuer Israel, there is no man that can wyth stande or let the: for thou hast made heauen and earth, & what wonderous thynge so euer is vnder the heauen: thou arte Lorde of all thynges, & there is no man that can resyste thy maiesty & (O Lord.) Thou knowest all thynges, thou wotest Lorde that it was nether of malyce, nor presumpcyon, nor for any desyre of glorye, that I wolde not bowe downe my selfe, nor worshyp poūder proude presumpteous Aman (for I wolde haue bene contente, & that wyth good wyll, yf it myght haue done Israel any good, to haue kyste euen hys footesteppes) but that I dyd it, because I wolde not set the honoure of aman in the stede of the glorye of God: & because I wolde worshyp none but only the my Lord, And thys haue I done in no pryde nor presumpcyon. E

And therefore O Lorde thou God & kynge haue mercye vpon thy people, for they ymagyn howe they may bryng vs to naught: yea, theyr mynde & desyre is to destroye, & to ouerthrowe thy people, ꝑ hath beneeuer thyne enherytaunce of olde. O dyspyse not the porcyon, whych thou haste delyuered & brought oute of Egypte for thyne owne selfe. Heare my prayer, & be mercyfull vnto thy people whom thou hast chosen for an heryptage vnto thy selfe. Turne our complaynte & sorowe into ioye, ꝑ we maye lyue, O Lorde, and praise thy name. O Lorde, suffer not the mouthes of them ꝑ prayse the to be destroyed.

All the people of Israel in lyke maner, cryed as earnestlye as they coulde vnto the Lord: for theyr death & destruccyō stode before theyr eyes

The prayer of Esther for the delyueraunce of her & her people.

QUene Esther also being in ꝑ battayle of A death, resorted vnto ꝑ Lord, layde away her glorious apparel, & put on ꝑ garmentes ꝑ serued for sygh̄ing & mournyng. In ꝑ sted of precious oyntmēt, she scatered ashes & donge vpō her head: & as for her bodye, she hūbled it w̄ fasting, & brought it verylow. Al ꝑ places wher she was wont to haue ioye afore those filled she w̄ the heere ꝑ she plucte of her selfe. She prayed also vnto ꝑ lord God of Israel w̄ these wordes. O my Lord, ꝑ only arte our kyng, helpe me desolate womā, which haue no helper but ꝑ, for my misery & destrucciō is hard at my hand. From my youthhod I haue hard out of ꝑ kynred of my father, ꝑ thou tokest Israell frō amōg al people (& so haue our fathers of their forelders) that they shuld be thy perpetual enheritaūce & loke what ꝑ dydest promise them, ꝑ hast made it good vnto thē. Nowe lord, we haue sīned before ꝑ, therfore hast ꝑ geuen vs into ꝑ handes of oure enemyes B because we worshipped their gods. Lord, ꝑ art rightous. Neuertheles, it satisfied them not, ꝑ we are in bitter & heuy captiuite & oppressed amōge them, but ꝑ hast layde their hādes vpon ꝑ handes of their gods: so ꝑ they begyn to take away ꝑ thyng ꝑ thou w̄ thy mouth hast ordened & appoynted, to destroy thyne enheryptaunce, to shut and stop the mouthes of them ꝑ praise ꝑ, to quēch ꝑ glory and worshyppe of thy house, and thyne alter, & to open the mouthes of ꝑ Heathē.

ginacions, he perceaued ꝑ they wer about to laye theyr cruel hādes vpō the kynge Artharerses: & so he certifyed ꝑ kynge therof. Then caused the king to examen the .ii. gelded w̄ tormētes. And whē they had graūted it they wer put to death. This ꝑ king caused to be put in ꝑ Cronicles for an euerlastynge remembraūce, & Mardocheus wrote vp ꝑ same matter. So ꝑ kyng commaunded ꝑ Mardocheus shulde remayne in ꝑ court, & for this faythfulnes of his, he gaue hī a reward But Aman ꝑ sonne of Amadathu the Agagite, which was holden in great honour & reputacīō in ꝑ kinges court vndertoke to hurt Mardocheus & his people because of ꝑ .ii. chamberlaynes ꝑ were put to death.

The. xv. Chapter.

¶ Mardocheus moueth Esther to go vnto the kynge and make intercessyon for her people: and she perfourmeth hys requeste.

Rdocheus also bad Esther goo in: vnto the kynge, & praye for her people, and for her countrye. Remember (sayth he) the dayes of thy lowe estate, how thou wast norysshed vnder my hande: For Aman whych is nexte vnto the kyng, hath geuen sentence of death agaynst vs. Call thou therefore vpon the Lord, & speake for vs vnto the kynge, & delyuer vs from death And vpon the thyrde day it happened, that Esther layde awaye the mournynge garmentes, ãd put on her gloryous apparell, and decte her selfe goodly (after ẏ she had called vpon God, which is the beholder and saueour of al thynges) toke two handemaydes wyth her: vpon the one she leaned her selfe, as one ẏ was tender: the other folowed her, and bare the trayne of her vesture The shyne of her bewtye made her face rose coloured. The symplytude of her face was chearfull and amyable, but her herte was sorowfull for greate feare. She wente in thorowe all the doores, and stoode before the kynge. The kyng sat vpon the throne of hys kyngedome, & was clothed in hys goodlye araye, al of gold, and set wyth precyous stones, and he was verye ter-

ble. He lyfte vp hys face, that shone in the clearnesse, and looked grymlye vpon her. Then fell ẏ Quene downe, was pale and faynte & leaned her self vpõ the head of the mayd, ẏ went wt her B

Neuertheles, God turned the kynges mynde ẏ he was gentyle, ẏ he leaped oute of hys seate for feare, and gat her in hys armes, and helde her vp tyll she came to her selfe agayne. He gaue her louinge wordes also, and sayde vnto her: Esther, what is the matter? I am thy brother, be of good cheare, thou shalte not dye: for oure commaundemente toucheth the comons & not the. Come nye. And wyth ẏ he helde vp hys golden rod, and layd it vpon her necke, and embraced her frendelye, and sayde talke wyth me. Then sayde she: I sawe the (O Lorde) as an Angell of God, & my herte was tronbled, for feare of thy maiestye and clearnesse. For excellente & wonderfull arte thou (O Lorde) and thy face is full of Amyte. But as she was thus speakynge vnto hym, she fell downe agayne for faynтnesse for the whych cause the kynge was afrayde, ãd all hys seruauntes comforted her.

The. xvi. Chapter.

¶ The coppe of the letters of Artharerses, wherby he reuoketh those whych he fyrste sente forth.

The greate kinge Artharerses, which A raygneth from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred and seuen & twẽtye landes, sendethe vnto the Prynces and rulers of the same landes, such as loue hym, hys frendly salutacion. Ther be manye that for the sondrye fryndeshyppes & benyfytes whyche are dyuerslye done vnto them for theyr worshyppe be euer the more proude ãd hye mynded, and vndertake not onelye to hurte theyr subiectes (for plenteous benyfytes maye they not suffer, & begynne to imagine some thynge agaynste those that do them good, and take not onelye all vnthanckefulnesse awaye from men) but in pryde and presumpcyon (as they ẏ be vnmyndefull and vnthanckfull for the good deades) they go about to escape the iudgemente of God, that seyth all thynges, whyche iudgemente hateth and punysshethe all wyckednesse: It happeneth ofte also that they whyche be set in offyce by the hyer power, and vnto whom the busynesse and causes of the subiectes are commytted to be handled, ware proude, and defyle them selues wyth sheadynge of innocente blonde, whych bryngeth them to intollerable hurt. Whych also wyth false and deceytefull wordes and wyth lyinge tales, dysceaue and betray the innocente goodnesse of Prynces. B

Nowe is it profytable & good, ẏ we take hede, make search therafter, & consider, not only what hath happened vnto vs of old: but ẏ shamfull, vnhoneste, & noysome thynges, that the debtyes haue nowe taken in hande before our eyes, and therby to beware in tyme to come, ẏ we maye make the kyngdome quyet and peaceable for all men: and ẏ we myghte sometyme drawe it to a chaunge: and as for the thyng that nowe is presente before oure eyes, to withstande it, & to put it downe, after the moost frendly maner.

What

What tyme nowe as Aman, the sonne of Amadathu the Macedonian (a straunger verely of the Persyans blonde, and farre from our goodnesse) was come in among vs as an aleant and had optayned the frendeshyppe that we beare towarde all the people, so that he was called oure father, and had in hyghe honoure of euery man, as the nexte and pryncypall vnto the kynge, he could not forbeare hym selfe from his pryde, hath vndertaken, not onelye to robbe vs of the kyngedome, but of oure lyfe.

Wythmanyfolded ysceate also hath he desyred to destroye Mardocheus oure helper and preseruer, whych hath done vs good in all thynges: and innocente Esther the lyke partaker of oure kyngedome, wyth all her people. For hys mynde was (when he had taken them oute of ye waye, and robbed vs of them) by thys meanes to translate the kyngdome of the Percyans vnto them of Macedonia, but we fynde that the Jewes (whyche were accused of the wycked, ye they myghte be destroyed) are no euell doers, but vse resonable and ryght lawes, and ye they be the chyldren of the moost hygh lyuyng God by whome the kyngedome of vs and our progenytoures haue bene well ordred hetherto.

Wherefore, as for the letters and commaundementes that were put forthe by Aman the sonne of Amadathu, ye shall do well, yf ye holde them of none effecte: for he that set them vp and inuented them, hangeth at Susis before the porte, wyth all hys kynred: and God, (whyche hath all thynges in hys power) hath rewarded hym after hys deseruynge.

D And vpon thys ye shall publyshe and set vp the coppe of thys letter in all places, that the Jewes maye frelye and wythoute hyndraunce hold them selues after theyr owne statutes, and that they maye be helped, and ye vpon the thre & twentye daye of the twelue moneth Adar, they maye be aduenged of them, whyche in the tyme of theyr anguysche and trouble, wolde haue oppressed them. For the God that gouerneth all thynges, hath turned to ioye the daye, wherein the chosen people shulde haue perysched.

Moreouer, amonge the hyghe solempne dayes that ye shal haue, ye shall holde thys also wyth all gladnesse, that nowe and in tyme to come, this daye maye be a remembraunce to good for all suche as loue the prosperytye of the Persyans: but a remembraunce of destruccyon to those that be sedycyous vnto vs.

All cytyes and landes that do not this, shal horyblye perysche and be destroyed wyth the swearde and fyre, and shall not onelye be nomore inhabyted of mē, but be abhorred also of the wylde beastes and fowles.

¶ The fyrste Chapter.

¶ Howe we ought to search and enquire after God, and who be those that fynde hym. Of the holy ghost. We ought to flye from babbelyng and murmurynge. &c.

Set youre affection vpon ryghteousnesse, ye ye be Judges, of the earth. Haue a good opynyon of the Lorde, & seke hym in the syngleneſſe of hert. For he wyll be found of them that tempte him not, and appereth vnto such as put theyr trust in him. As for froward thoughtes, they seperat from God: but vertue (if it be alowed) reformeth the vnwyse. And wyll wysedome shall not enter into a frowarde soule, nor dwell in the body ye is subdued vnto synne. For the holy Ghoost abhorreth fayned nurtour, and wythdraweth hym selfe from the thoughtes ye are wythout vnderstādynge, & where wyckednesse hath the vpperhande, he flyeth from thence, for the spyrete of wysdome is louynge, gentle & gracyous, & wyll haue no pleasure in hym ye speaketh euell wyth hys lyppes. Therefore, he that speaketh vnryghteous thynges, can not be hyd: neyther maye he escape the iudgement of reprofe. And wyll inquysycyon shalbe made for the thoughtes of the vngodlye, and the reporte of hys wordes shal come vnto God, so that thys wyckednesse shalbe punysched. For the eare of gelousye heareth all thynges, and the noyse of the grudgynges shall not be hyd. Therefore beware of murmerynge, whych is nothynge worth: and refrayne youre tunge from slaunder. For there is no worcke so darcke and secrete, that it shall go for nought, & the mouth that speaketh lyes, slayeth ye soule.

D Seke not your owne death in the errour of youre lyfe: destroye not your selues thorowe the worckes of youre owne handes. For God ¶ hath not made death, neyther hathe he pleasure in the destruccyon of the lyuyng. For he created all thynges, ye they myghte haue theyr beynge: yea, al the people of the earth hath he made that they shulde haue health, ye there shulde be no destruccyon in them, and that the kyngedome of hell shulde not be vpon earth (for ryghteousnes is euerlastynge and immortall, but vnryghteousnesse bryngeth death.) Neuertheleſſe, the vngodlye call her vnto them both wyth wordes and worckes: and whyle they thyncke to haue a frende of her they come to nought: for the vngodlye that are confederate wyth her and take her parte, are worthye of death.

For God is a wytnes of hys raynes, a true searcher out of hys hert, & an hearer of his tong. For the spyrete of ye Lorde fylleth the round compasse of the worlde: and the same ye vpholdeth al thynges, hath knowlege also of the voyce A

Therefore, he that speaketh vnryghteous thynges, can not be hyd: neyther maye he escape the iudgement of reprofe. And wyll inquysycyon shalbe made for the thoughtes of the vngodlye, and the reporte of hys wordes shal come vnto God, so that thys wyckednesse shalbe punysched. For the eare of gelousye heareth all thynges, and the noyse of the grudgynges shall not be hyd. Therefore beware of murmerynge, whych is nothynge worth: and refrayne youre tunge from slaunder. For there is no worcke so darcke and secrete, that it shall go for nought, & the mouth that speaketh lyes, slayeth ye soule.

D Seke not your owne death in the errour of youre lyfe: destroye not your selues thorowe the worckes of youre owne handes. For God ¶ hath not made death, neyther hathe he pleasure in the destruccyon of the lyuyng. For he created all thynges, ye they myghte haue theyr beynge: yea, al the people of the earth hath he made that they shulde haue health, ye there shulde be no destruccyon in them, and that the kyngedome of hell shulde not be vpon earth (for ryghteousnes is euerlastynge and immortall, but vnryghteousnesse bryngeth death.) Neuertheleſſe, the vngodlye call her vnto them both wyth wordes and worckes: and whyle they thyncke to haue a frende of her they come to nought: for the vngodlye that are confederate wyth her and take her parte, are worthye of death.

A FOr the vngodlye talke and ymagyn thus amonge themselues (but not ryght:) The tyme of oure lyfe is but shorte & tedyous: and when a mā is once gone, he hath nomore ioye nor pleasure, nether knowe we any man ỳ turneth agayne from death: for we are borne of nought, & we shalbe herafter as though we had neuer bene. For our breath is as smoke in oure nostrels, & the wordes as a sparke to moue oure hert. As for our body, it shalbe very asches ỳ are quenched, & oure soule shall vanyshe as the soft ayre. ¶ The.iiii. Chapter.

A Howe kayze is a chaste generacyon wyth vertue? The memoryall thereof is immortall, for it is knowen wyth God & with men When it is presente, men take example therat, and yf it go away yet they despze it. It is alway crowned and holden in honoure, and winneth the rewarde of the vndefyled battayle. But the multitude of vngodly chyldzen is vnprofitable: & the thynges ỹ are planted w̃ whoredome shall take no depe rote, nor laye auy fast foundacion. Thoughe they bz grene in ỹ bzaunches for a tyme, yet they shal be shaken w̃ the wynd: for they stand not fast, & thorowe ỹ vehemẽcy of ỹ wynde they shalbe roted out. For ỹ vnperfect bzaũches shalbe bzokẽ theyr frute shalbe vnprofytable & sower to eat: yee, mete for nothyng. And why? al the chyldzẽ ỹ are bozne of ỹ wycked, must beare recorde of ỹ wyckednesse agaynste theyr fathers & mothers when they be asked. But thoughe the ryghteous be ouertaken w̃ death, yet shall he be in reste

Age is an honourable thyng: neuertheles
B it standyth not onelye in the length of tyme, nor in the multytude of yeares: but a mans wysedome is the graye heare, and an vndefyled lyfe is the olde age, he pleased God, and was beloued of hym: so that where as he lyued amonge synners, he translated hym. *Yea, sodenlye was he Gene.v.c taken awaye, to the intente that wyckednesse shulde not alter hys vnderstandyng and that hypocrysye shulde not begyle hys soule. For the craftye bewytchynge of lyes make good thynges darke, the vnstedfastnesse also and wyckednesse of volupteous desyre, turne aslyde the vnderstandynge of the symple. Though he was soone dead, yet fulfylled he much tyme. For his soule pleased God: therefore hasted he to take hym away from amonge ỹ wicked. Thys ỹ people se, & vnderstande it not: they lay not vp such thynges in theyr hertes: howe that the louynge fauoure and mercyẽ of God is vpon hys saynctes, and that he hath respecte vnto hys chosen.

Thus the ryghteous that is deade, condemp
C neth the vngodly whyche are lyuynge: and the youth that is soone brought to an ende the longe lyfe of the vnryghteous. For they se the ende of ỹ wyse, but they vnderstande not what God hath deuysed for hym, and wherefore the Lorde hath taken hym awaye. And why? they se hym and dysdayne hym, therfore shal God also laugh them to scorne: So that they them selues shall dye heareafter (but wythoute honoure) yea, in shame amonge the deade for euermoare. For wythoute anye voyce shall he burste those that he pulle vp, and remoue them from the foundacyons, so that they shalbe layde waste vnto the hyghest e. They shall mourne, and theyr memoryall shall perysche. So they beynge afrayde, shall remember theyr synnes: and theyr owne wyckednesse shall bewraye them.

The.v. Chapter.

'C The constauntnesse of ryghteous before theyr persecuters. The hope of the vnfaythfull is vnprofytable and vayne. The blessednesse of the saynctes and godlye.

THen shal the ryghteous stand in gre A at steadfastenesse agaynste suche as haue dealt extreamely w̃ them, & taken awaye theyr laboures. When they se it, they shalbe vexed with horyble feare, and shal wondre at the hastinesse of the sodayne health: gronynge for very destresse of mynde, and shall saye wythin them selues, hauynge inwarde sorowe, & mournynge for very angwysshe of mynde. These are they, whom we somtyme had in derisiõ, & iested vpõ. We fooles thought their life very madnes: & theyr ende to be wout honour. But lo, howe they are coũted among ỹ chyldzen of God, & theyr porcion is among ỹ saynctes. Therfore we haue erred from the way of truth, ỹ lyght of righteousnesse hath not shyned vnto vs, & ỹ Sũne of vnderstãdyng rose not vpon vs. We haue weryed oure selues in the waye of wyckednesse and destruccyon. Tedyous wayes haue we gone: but as for the waye of the Lorde we haue not knowne it. B

What good hath oure pryde done vnto vs? Or what profyte hath the pompe of richesse brought vs? All those thynges are passed awaye lyke a shadowe, & as a messenger runnynge before: as a shyppe that passeth ouer the waues of the water, whych when it is gone by, the trace therof cannot be founde, nether the path of it in the floudes. Or as a byrde that flyeth thorowe in the ayre, & no man can se any token where she is flowen, but onely heare the noyse of her wynges, beatynge ỹ lyght wynde, partynge the ayre thorowe the vehemency of her goynge, & flyeth on shakynge her wiges, where as afterward no token of her waye can be founde. Or lyke as whẽ an arowe is shot at a marke it parteth ỹ ayer, which immedyatly commeth together agayne, so ỹ a man can not knowe where it went thorowe. Euen so nowe in lyke maner as soone as we were borne, beganne immedyatly to drawe to oure ende, and haue shewed no token of vertue, but are consumed in our owne wyckednesse

Suche wordes shall they that haue synned speake in the hell: for the hoope of the vngodlye is lyke a drye Thystle floure (or dusse) that is blowne awaye wyth the wynde: lyke a D thynne scome that is scatered abroade wyth the storme, lyke as the smooke whyche is dispersed heare and there wyth the wynde, and as the remembraunce of a straunger, that tarryeth for a daye, and then departeth. But the ryghteous shall lyue for euermoare: theyr rewarde also is with the Lorde: and theyr remembraunce with the Hyghest. Therefore shall they receaue a glorypous kyngedome, and a bewtyfull crowne of the Lordes hande: for wyth hys ryghte hande shall he couer them: and wyth hys owne holye arme, shall he defende them. Hys gelousye also shall take awaye the harnesse, and he shall weapon the cretaure to be auenged of ỹ enemyes. He shall put on ryghteousnesse for a brest plate and take sure Judgemente in steade of an helmete. The inuyncyble shylde of equyte shall he take, hys cruell wrathe shall he sharpen for a speare, and the whole compasse of the worlde,

D Then shall the thonderboltes go oute of ỹ lyghtnynges, and come out of the raygne bowe of ỹ cloudes to the place appoynted: out of ỹ har de stony indygnacyon, there shal fal thycke hayles, & the water of the see shalbe wroth agaynst them, & the floudes shall runne roughlye togethe r. Yea, a myghty wynde shal stande vp agaynst them, & a storme shall scater them a broade. Thus ỹ vnrighteous dealing of them shal bringe all ỹ land to a wyldernesse, and wyckednesse shall ouerthrowe the dwellynges of ỹ myghtye

The. vi. Chapter.

¶ The callynge of kynges, Princes and Judges: which are also exhorted to search wysdome.

A WYsdome is better then strength, ād a man of vnderstandynge is more worth then one ỹ is stronge. Heare therfore (O ye kynges) and vnderstande: O learne ye that be Judges of the endes of the earth. Geue eare ye that rule the multytudes, and delyte in much people. For ỹ power is geuē you of the Lord, & the strength from the Hyghest: whych shall trye your workes, and searche oute youre ymagynacyons: Howe that ye beyng offycers of hys kyngdome haue not executed true Judgemente, haue not kepte the lawe of ryghteousnesse, nor walked

B after the wyll of God. Horyblye, and that ryghte sone shall he appeare vnto you: for an hard iudgemente shall they haue that beare rule. Mercye is graunted vnto the symple, but they that be in auctorȳte shalbe sore punysched. For God whych is Lorde ouer all, shall excepte no mans person, neyther shall he stande in awe of anye mans greatenesse. For he hath made the small & greate, and careth for al alyke. But the myghtye shall haue the sorer punyshemente.

Unto you therfore (O ye kinges) do I speake that ye maye learne wysedome, & not go amysse For they that kepe hys ryghteousnesse, shalbe ryghteously Judged, and they that are learned in ryghteous thynges, shall fynde to make answere. Wherefore, set youre lust vpon my wordes, and loue them, so shall ye come by nurtoure

Wysedome is a noble thynge and neuer fadethe awaye: yea, she is easelye sene of them

¶ ỹ loue her, and founde of such as seke her, she preuenteth them ỹ desyre her, ỹ she maye fyrste shewe her selfe vnto them. Whoso awaketh vnto her by tymes, shall haue no greate trauayle, for he shall fynde her syttynge readye at hys dores To thyncke vpon her, is perfect vnderstandynge: and who so watcheth for her, shalbe safe: ād that sone. For she goeth about, seekynge such as are mete for her, sheweth her selfe cherfully vnto them in theyr goynges, & meteth them wyth all dylygence. For the vnfayned desyre of reformacyon is her begynnynge: to care for nurtour is loue, & loue is the keppyng of her lawes. Now the keppyng of ỹ law is perfeccyō, & an vncorrupt lyf: & an vncorrupt lyfe maketh a man famylyer wt God. And so ỹ desyre of wysedome leadeth to

D the kyngedome euerlastyng. Yf youre delyte be then in royall seates and septers (O ye kynges of the people) set youre luste vpon wysedome, that ye maye raygne for euermore. O loue the lyghte of wysedome, all ye that be rulers of the people. As for wysdome, what she is, and howe she came vp, I wyll tell you: and wyll not hyde the mysteryes of God from you: but wyll seeke her oute from the begynnynge of the natyuytie and bringe the knowlege of her into lyghte, ād wyll not kepe backe the truthe: Neyther wyll I haue to do wyth consumynge enuye, for suche a man shall not be partaker of wysedome. But the multytude of the wyse, is the welfare of the worlde, and a wyse kinge is the vpholdynge of the people. O receaue nurtoure then thorowe my wordes, and it shall do you good.

The. vii. Chapter.

¶ Wysedome ought to be preferred aboue all thynges.

I My selfe am also a mortall man, lyke as al other, & am come of the earthye generacyon of hym that was fyrste made, & in my mothers wombe was A fashioned to be flesh: In the tyme of ten monethes was I brought together in bloude thorowe the seede of man, and the commodious appetyte of slepe. When I was borne I receaued lyke ayre as other men, and fel vpon the earth (whych is my nature) cryinge and wepyng at the fyrst as al other do. I was wrapped in swadlyng clothes, & brought vp wt greate cares. For there is no kīge ỹ had any other begynnyng of byrth. Al men then haue one entraunce vnto lyfe, and one goynge oute in lyke maner.

Wherefor I desired, & vnderstanding was B geuen me: I called and the spyryte of wysedome came vnto me. I set more by her then by kynge domes & royall seates, and counted rychesse nothynge in comparyson of her. As for precyous stoone, I compared it not vnto her: for all golde is but grauell vnto her, & syluer shalbe counted but clay before her sight. I loued her a boue welfare & bewtye, & purposed to take her for my lyght, for her lyght can not be quenched. All good thynges come to me wyth her, and innumerable rychesse thorowe her handes. I was glad in thē all, for thys wysedome wente before me, and I knew not ỹ she is the mother of al good thinges Nowe as I my selfe learned vnfaynedlye, so do I make other men partakers of her, & hyde her rychesse from noman: for she is an infynite treasure vnto men, whych who so vse, become partakers of the loue ād frendshyppe of God, and are accepted vnto hym for ỹ gyftes of wysedome.

God hath graunted me to talke wyselye, & conuenyently to handle the thynges ỹ he hathe gracyously lente me. For it is he, ỹ leadeth vnto wysdome, and teacheth to vse wysedome aryght. In hys hande are both we & oure wordes: yea, al our wysdome, our vnderstanding & knowlege of al our workes. For he hath geuen me the true scyence of these thynges, so ỹ I knowe, howe the worlde was made, and the powers of the elementes: the begynnynge, endynge, and myddeste of the tymes: howe the tymes aulter, howe one goeth after another, and howe they are fulfilled, ỹ course of the yeare: the ordinaun

ces of the starres: the nature and kyndes of beastes: the furyousnesse of beastes: the power of ỹ wyndes: ỹ ymagynacyõs of men: ỹ dyuersities of yong plantys: the vertues of rootes, and all suche thynges as are secrete and not loked for, haue I learned: For ỹ worckemaster of all thyn
D ges hath taught me wysdome. In her is the spyrite of vnderstandynge whych is holye, manyfolde, one onely, subtyl, curteous, discrete, quycke, vndefyled, playne, swete, louyng that is good, sharpe, whyche forbyddeth not to do well, gentyle, kynde, stedfast, sure, fre, hauynge all vertues, cyrcumspecte in all thynges: receauynge all spyrytes of vnderstandynge, beinge cleane and sharpe. For wysdome is nymbler then all nymble thynges: she goeth thorowe and attayneth to all thynges, because of her cleannesse. For she is the breth of the power of God, and a pure cleane expressynge of the clearnesse of Almyghtye God, Therfore can no vndefyled thynge come vnto her: for she is ỹ brightenesse of the euerlastynge lyghte, ỹ vndefyled myrroure of the maiestye of God and ỹ ymage of hys goodnesse.
E And for so muche as she is one, she maye do all thynges, & beynge stedfast her selfe, she renueth all: and among ỹ people conuayeth her selfe, into ỹ holye soules. She maketh Gods frendes & Prophetes: for God loueth noman, but hym in whome wysedome dwelleth. For she is moare bewtyfull then the Sunne, and geueth more lyghte then the starres, and the daye is not to be compared vnto her: for vpon the daye commeth nyght. But wyckednesse cannot ouercome wysdome: and folysheneste maye not be wyth her.

¶ The effectes of wysedome.

A WYsedome reacheth frome one ende to another myghtely, and louynge ly doth she order all thynges. I haue loued her, and laboured for her, euen from my youth vp: I dyd my dylygence to marye my selfe wyth her, suche loue had I vnto her bewtie. Who so hath the companye of God, commendeth her nobylytye: yea, the Lorde of all thynges hym selfe loueth her. For she is the scolemastresse of the nourtoure of God, and the choser oute of hys worckes. Yf a man wolde desyre rychesse in thys lyfe, what is rycher then wysdome, that worcketh all thin
B ges? Thou wylte saye: vnderstandynge worcketh. What is it amonge all thynges, that worketh moare then wysedome? Yf a man loue vertue and righteousnesse, let hym laboure for wysdome, for she hath greate vertues. And why? she teacheth soberneste and prudence, ryghteousnesse and strength, whyche are such thynges as men can haue nothyng more profitable in their lyfe. Yf a man desyre muche knowlege, she can tell the thynges ỹ are paste, and dyscerne thynges for to come: she knowethe the subtyltes of wordes, and can expounde darcke sentences. She can tell of tokens, & wonderous thynges or euer they come to passe, and the endes of all times: & ages. So I purposed after thys maner I will take her vnto my company, and comune louyngely wyth her: no doubte, she shal geue me good counsayle, & speake comfortably vnto me in my carefulnesse & greefe. For her sake shall I be well & honestly taken amonge the commens & lordes of ỹ counsayle. Though I be yong, yet shal I haue sharpe vnderstandynge, so ỹ I shal be meruelous in ỹ syghte of great men, & the faces of prynces shall wõder at me, when I holde my tonge, they shall abyde my leysure: when I speake, they shal loke vpõ me, & if I talke much they shal laye theyr handes vpõ theyr mouth.

Moreouer, by the meanes of her I shall obtayne immortalyte, and leaue behynd me an euerlastynge memorye all amonge them that come after me. I shall set the people in order, and the nacyous shalbe subdued vnto me. Horryble tyrauntes shalbe afrayde when they do but beare of me, amonge the multytude I shalbe counted good, and myghtye in battayle. When I come home, I shall fynde reste wyth her: for her companye hath no bytternesse, and her felowe
C shyppe hath no tedyousnesse, but myrthe & ioye

Nowe when I consydred these thynges by my selfe, and pondred them in my herte, howe ỹ to be ioyned vnto wysedome is immortalytye, and greate pleasure to haue her frendeshyppe, howe ỹ in the worckes of her handes are infynyte rychesse: howe that, who so kepeth company wyth her shalbe wyse, and that he whyche talketh wyth her, shall come to honoure: I went a D bout seking, to gather her vnto me: For I was alad of arrye wyt, & had a good vnderstanding But when I grewe to more vnderstandynge, I came to an vndefyled bodye. Neuertheless, when I perceaued ỹ I coulde not kepe my selfe chaste, excepte God gaue it me, (& ỹ was a poynte of wysdome also, to knowe whose gyfte it was) I stepped vnto the Lord: & besought hym & wyth my whole hert I sayd after this maner.

For the thynges that they suffered they bare them vnpacyently, beinge not contente in them but vnwyllynge. And whē they perished by ẏ same thynges ẏ they toke for goddes, they knowleged then, ẏ there was, but one true God whome afore they wolde not knowe: therefore came the ende of theyr dampnacyon vpon them

¶ All thynges be vayne, except the knowlege of God. Idolatres and Idols are mocked.

A Roma.i.b. VAyne are all men, whyche haue not knowlege of God: ✠ as were they that out of the good thynges whych are sene, knewe not hym, that of hym selfe is euerlasting. Nether toke they so much regarde of the worckes that are made, as to knowe, who was the craftesman of them, but some toke the fyre, some the wynd or ayre, some the course of the starres, some the water, some toke Sunne and Mone, or ẏ lyghtes of heauen whyche rule the earth, for gods. But though they had such pleasure in theyr bewtye, that they thoughte them to haue bene goddes: yet shulde they haue knowen, howe muche more fayrer he is that made them.

B For the maker of bewty hath ordeyned al these thynges. Or yf they meruayled at the power ✠ worckes of them, they shuld haue perceaued therby, ẏ he whych made these thinges, is myghtyer then they. For by ẏ greatnesse and bewte of the creature, the maker thereof maye playnelye be knowen. Notwythstandynge they are the lesse to be blamed, that seke God, ✠ wolde fynd hym and yet mysse. And why? for so much as they go aboute in hys worckes and seeke after them, it is a token, ẏ they regarde and holde muche of hys worckes ẏ are sene, howebeit they are not wholy to be excused. For yf theyr vnderstandynge ✠ knowlege be so greate: ẏ they can deserne the worlde ✠ the creatures, why do they not rather fynde oute the Lorde thereof?

But vnhappe are they, ✠ among the dead is theyr hope, that cal them gods which are but the worckes of mens handes: golde, syluer, and the thynge that is founde out by connynge, the symylytude of beastes, or any vayne stone that Et.xliiii.a Jeremi.x.a hathe bene made by the hande of olde. * Or as when a carpenter cutteth downe a tre out of the woode, and pareth of the barcke of it connyngly: and so wyth the one parte maketh a vessel to be vsed, and dresseth meat wyth the residue. As for the other parte ẏ is lefte, whych is profytable for nothyng (for it is a croked peace of wod and full of knobbes) he caruеth it dylygentlye C thorowe hys vanyte, and accordyng to ẏ knowlege of hys connyng, he geueth it some proporcyon, fashyoneth it after ẏ symylytud of a man, or maketh it lyke some beast straketh it ouer wyth red, and paynteth it, and loke what foule spotte is in it he casteth some coloure vpon it.

Then maketh he a conuenient tabernacle D for it, setteth it in wall, ✠ maketh it fast with yron, prouiding so for it, lest it happē to fall: for it is wel knowen, ẏ it can not helpe it selfe: And why? it is but an Image, ✠ must of necessite be helped. Then goeth he ✠ offereth of hys goodes vnto it, for hys chyldzen, and for hys wyfe: he seketh helpe at it, he asketh counsell at it: he is not ashamed to speake vnto it, ẏ hathe no soule: for health, he maketh hys petycyon vnto hym that is sycke: for lyfe, he prayeth vnto hym ẏ is dead he calleth vpō hym for helpe ẏ is not able to helpe hym selfe: and to sende hym a good iournеye, he prayeth hym that maye not goo. And in all the thynges that he taketh in hande (whether it be to optayne anye thyng or to worcke) he prayeth vnto hym, that can do no maner of good.

¶ The detestacyon and abhompnacion of ymages. A curse of them, and of hym that maketh them. The euelles that come of ydolatrye.

A Gayne, another man purposyng to saple, and begynnynge to take hys iournye thorowe the ragynge see, calleth for helpe vnto a stocke that is farre weaker then the tre that bareth hym. For as for it, couetousnes of monye hath founde it oute, and the craftesman made it wyth hys connynge. A

But thy prouydence, O father gouerneth all thynges from the begynnynge: * For thou Ero.xliii.b haste made awaye in the see, and a sure path in the myddest of the waues: declarynge thereby that thou hast power to helpe in al thinges, yea though a man wente to the see wythout shyppe Neuertheless, that the worckes of thy wysdome shuld not be vayne, * ẏ hast caused an Arke to be made: and therfore do men commyt theyr lyues to a smale peace of woode, passynge ouer the see in a shyppe, and are saued. B Genn.vi.b

* For in the old tyme also when the proud gyauntes perished, he (in whome the hope was lefte to increase the worlde) wente into the shyp whych was gouerned thorowe thy hande, and so lefte seede behynde hym vnto the worlde. Gene.vii.d. For happye is the tree where thorowe ryghteousnes commeth: but cursed is the ydoll that is made wyth handes, * yea both it ✠ he that made it. He because he made it: ✠ it because it was called god, where as it is but a frayle thyng. ✠ For ẏ vngodly ✠ hys vngodlynes are bothe lyke abhompnable vnto God. Euē so ẏ worke and he ẏ made it also, shalbe punyshed together. Therefore shall there a plage come vpon the ydolles of the Heathen: for out of the creatures of God they are become abhompnacyon, a temptacyon vnto the soules of men, and a snare for ẏ fete of ẏ vnwyse. And why? ẏ sekynge out of ydoles is the begynnynge of whoredome, and the bryngyng vp of them is the destruccyon of lyfe. For they were not from the begynnyng, nether shal they contynue for euer. The welthy ydelnes of men hath founde them out vpon earth, therfore shall they come shortlye to an ende. When a father mourned for hys sonne ẏ was taken awaye from hym, he made hym an ymage (in al ẏ hast) of hys dead Psal.cxb.a and.cxxvb Baru.vi.a Psal.vii.b

of hys dead sonne: and so beganne to worshype hym as a god, whych was but a dead man, and ordeyned hys seruauntes to offer vnto hym.

Thus by proces of tyme and thorow an vngracyous custome, thys errour was kept as a lawe & tyrauntes compelled men by vyolence to honoure ymages. As for those that were so farre of that men myght not worshippe them presenly, theyr pycture was brought from farre (lyke the ymage of a kynge whome they wolde honoure) to the intente that wyth greate dylygence they myght worshyppe hym whych was farre of, as though he had bene presente

Agayne the synguler connyng of ỳ craftesman gaue the ignoraunte also a greate occasyon to worshyppe ymages. For the workeman wyllynge to do hym a pleasure ỳ set hym a worcke, laboured wyth all hys connynge to make the D ymage of the best fashyon. And (so thorowe the bewtye of the worcke) the commen people was deceaued, in so much ỳ they toke hym nowe for a God, whych a lytle afore was but honored as a mã. And thys was the errour of mãs life, whẽ men (ether for to serue theyr owne affeccyon, or to do some pleasure vnto the kynges) ascrybed vnto stones & stockes the name of God, whych oughte to begeuen vnto no man.

Moreouer, thys was not ynough for them ỳ they erred in the knowlege of God: but where as they lyued in greate warres of ignorannce, those many and great plages called they peace
deu.xviii.b Jere. vii.b and pix.a. For ether * they slue theyr owne chyldren, & offered them, or dyd sacrifyce in the nyght season or els helde vnreasonable watches: so that they kepte nether lyfe nor marryage cleane: but ether one slue another to death malycyously, or elles greued hys neyghboure wyth aduoutrye. And thus were all thynges myxte together, bloude, manslaughter, thefte, dyssymulacyon, corruptyon, vnfaythfulnesse, sedycyon, periury, dysquyetynge of good men, vnthanckfulnesse, defylynge of soules, chaungynge of byrthe, vnstedfastnesse of marryage, mysorder of aduoutrye & vnclennesse. And why? the honouringe of abhomynable ymages is the cause, the begynnynge and ende of all euell. For they that worshyppe Idoles: ether they be mad whẽ they be mery, or prophecye lyes, or lyue vngodlye, or elles lyghtlye for sweare them selues: For in so much as theyr trufte is in the ydoles (whych haue nether soule nor vnderstandynge) though they sweare falselye yet they thyncke it shall not hurte them.

Therfore commeth a great plage vpõ them and ỳ worthely, for they haue an euell openyon of God, geuynge hede vnto ydolles swearynge vntrustlye to deceaue, and dysprysyng ryghteousnes. For theyr swearynge is no vertue, but a plage of them that synne, and goeth euer wyth the offence of the vngodlye.

The.xv. Chapter.

The ioye of the faythfull, praysynge the mercye of God for whose graces sake they serue not ydoles.

A BUt thou (O oure God) arte swete longe sufferynge, and true, & in mercye ordrest thou all thynges. Though we synne, yet are we thine, for we knowe thy strength. Yf we synne not, then are we sure, that thou regardest vs. For to knowe the, is perfecte ryghteousnes Yea, to knowe thy ryghteousnes and power is the rote of immortalite. As for the thynge that men haue founde out thorowe theyr euell science, it hath not dysceaued vs: as the payntyng of the pycture (an vnprofitable labour) and carued ymage, wt dyuers coloures, whose sight entyseth ỳ ignorannte: so ỳ he honoureth & loueth the pycture of a deade ymage ỳ hath no soule. 25

Neuertheless, they ỳ loue such euell thynges, are worthye of the death: they that trust in them, they ỳ make them, they ỳ loue them, and they ỳ honoure them. The potter also taketh & tempereth softe earth, laboureth it, and geueth it the fashyõ of a vessell, whatsoeuer serueth for oure vse: and so of one pece of claye he maketh some cleane vessel for seruyce, and some contrary, But where to euery vessell serueth, ỳ knoweth the potter hym selfe. So wyth hys vayne laboure he maketh a God of the same claye: thys doth euen he, whych a lytle afore was made of earth hym selfe, and wythin a lytle whyle after (when he dyeth) turneth to the earthe agayne.

Notwythstandynge, he careth not ỳ more because he shall laboure, nor be cause hys lyfe is shorte: but stryueth to excell goldesmythes, the syluersmythes and coppersmythes, and taketh it for an honoure to make vayne thinges. For his herte is asches, hys hope is but vayne earth, and hys lyfe is more vyle then claye, for so much as he knoweth not hys owne maker, ỳ gaue hym hys soule to worcke, and brethed in hym ỳ breth of lyfe. They counte oure lyfe but a pastyme, and oure conuersacyon to be but a market, and that men shulde euer be gettynge, and that by euel meanes. Nowe he that of earth maketh frale vesselles and ymages, knoweth hymselfe to offende aboue al other.

All the enemyes of the people, and ỳ holde them in subiecyon, are vnwyse, vnhappye, and exceadynge proude vnto theyr owne soules: for they iudge all the ydolles of the heathen to be goddes, whych nether haue eyesyghte to se, nor noses to smell, nor eares to heare, nor fyngers or hãdes for to grope: and as for theyr fete, they are to slowe to go. For man made them, and he ỳ hath but a borowed spyrete, fashyoned them But no man can make a God lyke vnto hym: for seynge he is but mortall hym selfe, it is but mortal ỳ he maketh wyth vnrighteous handes He hym selfe is better then they whome he worshyppeth, for he lyued thoughe he was mortall so dyd neuer they. Yea, they worshypped beastes also, whyche are moost myserable: for comparc thynges, that can not kele vnto them, and they are worse then those.

Yet is there not one of these beastes, that wyth hys syghte can beholde any good thynge nether haue they geuen prayse nor thankes vnto God.

The.xiii. Chapter.

¶ The companyes of the proude & of the rych are to be eschewed. The loue of God: lyke do companye wyth theyr lyke.

A Who so toucheth pytch, shalbe fyled wythall: and he that is familyar wyth the proude, shall clothe hym selfe wyth pryde. He taketh a burthen vpõ hym, that accompanyeth a more honorable man than hym selfe. Therfore kepe no familyarыte wyth one ꝑ is rycher then thy selfe. Howe agree the ketell and the pot together? for yf the one be smitten agaynst the other it shalbe broken. The ryche dealeth vnryghteouslye, and threateneth wyth all: but the poore beynge oppressed and wrongeouslye dealt with all, suffereth scarcenesse, and geueth fayre wordes. Yf thou be for hys profyte, he vseth the: but yf thou haue nothynge, he shall forsake the. As longe as thou hast anye thynge of thyne owne he shalbe a good felowe wyth the: yea, he shall make the a bare man, and not be sorye for the.

Yf he haue nede of the, he shall defraude the: and (wyth a preuye mocke) shall he put the in an hoope, and geue the all good wordes, and saye: what wantest thou? Thus shall he shame the in hys meate, vntyl he haue supte the cleane vp twyse or thryse, and at the laste shall he laughe the to scorne. Afterwarde, when he seythe that thou hasse nothynge, he shall forsake the, & shake hys heade at the. (Submyt thy selfe vnto God, and wayte vpon hys hande.)

B Beware that thou be not dysceaued and brought downe in thy symplenesse. Be not to humble in thy wysedome: leeste whan thou arte brought lowe, thou be dysceaued thorowe folysshenes. If thou be called of a myghtye mã, absente thy selfe, so shal he cal the to hym: the more ofte. Preasse not thou vnto hym, ẏ thou be not shut oute: but go not ẏ farre of, leest he forget ẏ. Withdrawe not thy selfe from hys speach, but beleue not hys many wordes. For wyth muche communycacyõ shal he tempte the, & (wyth a pretty mock) shal he questiõ the of thy secretes. The vnmercyfull mynde of his shal marcke thy wordes, he shal not spare to do ẏ hurt, & to put the in pryson. Be ware and take good hede to thy selfe, for ẏ walkeste in parell of thy ouerthrowinge.

Nowe when ẏ heareſt hys wordes, make the as though thou wereſt in a dreame, & wake vp. Loue God all thy lyfe longe, & call vpõ hym in thy nede. Euery beaste loueth hys lyke, euen so let euery man loue hys neyghboure. All flesshe wyll resorte to theyr lyke, and euery man wyll kepe companye wyth suche as he is hym selfe.

But as the wolfe agreeth wyth the lambe, soo doth the vngodly wyth the ryghteous. * What felowesshyppe shulde an holye man haue with a dogge? Howe can the ryche & the poore agree together? The wylde Asse is the lyons praye in ẏ wyldernesse, euen so are pore men ẏ meat of the ryche. Lyke as the proude maye not away with lowlynes, euen so do the ryche abhore the poore. If a rych man fal, hys frendes set hym vp agayne: but when the poore falleth, hys acquayntaunce forsake hym. If a ryche man fall into an errour, he hath many helpers: he speaketh proud wordes, and yet men iustyfye hym.

D But yf a poore man go wronge, he is punyshed: yea though he speake wyselye, yet can it haue no place. Whan the rych man speaketh, euery mã holdeth hys tonge: & looke what he sayeth, they prayse it vnto the cloudes. But yf the poore man speake, they saye: What felowe is thys? & yf he do amysse, they shall destroye hym. Ryches are good vnto hym that hath no synne in hys conscyence, and pouerte is a wycked thinge in the mouthe of the vngodlye: The herte of a man chaungeth hys countenaunce, whether it be in good or euell. But yf a voluptous man heare it, he shal haue no pleasure therin, but caste it behynde hys backe. The talkyng of a foole is lyke an henye burthen by the waye but to heare a wyse man speake, it is a pleasure. Where a doubte is in the congregacyon, it is asked at the mouth of the wyse, and they shal ponder hys wordes in theyr hertes. Lyke as is a house ý is destroyed, euen so is wysedome vnto to a fole. As for the knowlege of ý vnwise, it is but darcke wordes. Doctryne is vnto hym that hath no vnderstandynge, euen as fetters about hys fete, and lyke manycles vpon hys ryghte- Eccl. xix. b hande. * A foole lyfteth vp hys voyce wt laughter, but a wayse man shal scarse laugh secretlye

Learnynge is vnto a wyse man a Jewel of golde, and lyke an armelet vpon hys ryghte arme. A foolyshe mans fote is soone in hys neyboures house, but one that hath experyence, shalbe a shamed at the personne of the myghtye.
A foole wyll pepe in at the wyndowe into the house, but he that is well nourtered, wyll stand wythoute. A foolyshe man standeth herkenyng at the doore, but he that is wyse wyl be ashamed

The lyppes of the vnwyse wyll be tellyng foolyshe thynges, but ý wordes of such as haue vnderstandynge, shalbe wayed in the balaunce The hert of fooles is in their mouth, but ý mouth of ý wyse is in theyr hert. When ý vngodly curseth the blasphemer he curseth hys owne soule. Leuit. xix. b

¶ The purgacyon of the slouthfull. Of the foolyshe sonne and daughter, we must haue dyscrecyon howe and to whome we oughte to preach, of sorowynge vpon the deed. A fole is not to be much talked withal. Iniuryes, and wronges do breake frendeshyppe and amyte.

A Slouthfull bodye is moulded of a stone of claye, and euery man wyll speake to hys dyspraise. A slouthfull body is made of the dong of oxen, and euerye one ý toucheth hym must wash hys handes agayne. A mysnurtered sonne is the dyshonoure of the father. A foolysh daugh doughter shalbe lytle regarded. A wyse daughter is an heritage vnto her husbande: but the ỳ commeth to dyshonestye, bringeth her father in heynesse. A daughter that is paste shame, dyshonoureth both her father and her husband, the vngodly shal regard her, but they both shal dyspice her The playig of muslike is not mete wher heuines is, euen so is the correccyon and doctryne of wysedome euer vnpleasaunte vnto fooles

B Who so teacheth a foole, is euē as one that gleweth a potcherde together: as one that telleth a tale to hym that heareth hym not, and as one that rayseth a man oute of an heuye slepe. Who so telleth a foole of wysedome, is euen as a man, whych speaketh to one ỳ is a slepe When he hath toide hys tale, he sayeth: what is ỳ matter? When one dyeth, lamentacyon is made for hym: because the lyghte fayleth hym, euen so let men mourne ouer a foole: for he wanteth vnderstandynge. Make but lytle weaypynge because of the deed: for he is come to rest, but the life of ỳ foole is worse then the death. Seuen dayes doo men mourne for him that is deed, but the lamentacyon ouer the vnwyse and vngodlye shulde endure all the dayes of theyr lyfe.

C Talke not much wyth a foole, and go not wyth hym that hath no vnderstandynge. Beware of hym leeste it turne the to trauayle, and thou shalte not be defyled wyth hys synne. Departe from hym, and thou shalte fynde reste and shalt not be drawen backe into his foolyshenes What is heuyer then leade? And what shulde a

The thoughte of the wyse shall neyther feare, nor be offended at any tyme.

D Lyke as a fayre plastered wal in a wynter house, and an hye buyldynge, maye not abyde the wynde and storme: euen so is a fooles herte a frayde in hys ymagynacyon, he feareth at euery thynge, and cannot endure. (A wauerynge herte in the ymagynacyon of a foole wyll not euerstand in awe, but he that abydeth in the cōmaundementes of God, wyll alway feare.) He that nyppeth a mans eye bryngeth forth teares and he that prycketh the herte, bryngeth forthe meanynge and thought. Who so casteth a stone at the byrdes, frayeth them awaye: and he that blasphemeth hys frend, breaketh the frendeshyp thoughe thou dreweste a swearde at thy frende yet dyspayre not, for thou mayest come agayne to thy frend. Yf he speake sowerly, feare not for ye maye be agreed together agayne, except it be that thou blaspheme hym, dysdayne hym, open hys secretes and wounde hym traytorously for all such thinges shall dryue awaye a frende.

E Be faythfull vnto thy neyghboure in hys powerte, that thou mayest reioyse wyth hym also in hys prosperyte. Abyde stedfaste vnto hym in ỳ tyme of his trouble, ỳ thou mayest be heyre wyth him in hys heritage. Lyke as the vapour and smoke goeth out at the ouen before the fyre euen so euell wordes, rebukes and threatenynges go before bloudesheddynge. Be not ashamed to defende thy frende: as for me, I wyll not hyde my face from him though he shulde do me Psal.xxx.a. harme. ¶ A prayse of wysdome proceadynge forth of the mouth of God. Of her worckes and place where she resteth.

A WYsedome shall prayse her selfe, and be honoured in God, and reioyce in the myddeste of hys people: In the congregacyons of the hyghest shal she open her mouth, and tryumphe in the beholdyng of hys power: In the myddest of her people shall she be exalted and wondred at in the holifulnesse. In the multytude of the chosen she shalbe commended, and amonge such as be blessed she shalbe praysed, and shall saye: I am come oute of the mouthe of the hyghest e, fyrste borne before all creatures. I caused the lyghte that fayleth not to aryse in the heauen, & couered all the earthe as a cloude. My dwellynge is aboue in the heygth, and my seate is in the pyller of the cloude. It is better to be wyth an euell man, then wyth a frendlie wyfe that putteth one to shame and rebuke. I wyll remember the workes of the Lorde, and declare the thynge that I haue sene. In the wordes of the Lorde are hys workes. The Sunne ouerloketh all thynges wyth hys shyne, and all hys workes are ful of the clearnesse thereof. Hath not the Lorde brought to passe that hys Saynctes shulde tell oute al hys wonderous workes, whyche the Almyghtye Lord hath stablyshed? All thinges endure in his glory. He seketh out the grounde of the deepe, & the herte of men, & he knoweth all theyr ymagynacyon and wisedome. For the Lorde knoweth all scyence, and he looketh into the token of the tyme. The prayse of certen holy men, Henoch, Noe, Abrahā, Isahac and Iacob.

men, and the generacyon of our fore elders and fathers. Many more glo ryous actes hath the Lord done, and shewed hys greate power euer sence the beginnyng. The noble famous mē raygned in theyr kyngedomes, and bare excellente rule. In theyr wysedome and vnderstandynge, they Ero.r biiic folowed the councell shewed in the prophetes.* They led the folke thorowe the councell & wyse dome of the scrybes of the people. Wyse senten=ces are found in theyr instruccion. They sought the swetnes and melody of musyke, & brought forth the pleasaunte songes in scrypture. They were ryche also, and coulde comforte and pacify those that dwelte wyth them. All these were ve ry noble and honourable men in theyr generacy ons, and were well reported of in theyr tymes. These haue lefte a name behynde them, so that theyr prayse shall alwaye be spoken of. After=warde, there were some, whose remembraunce Gen. bii.d is gone. * They came to naughte and perysched as though they had neuer bene: and became as thoughe they had neuer bene borne: yea, & theyr chyldren also wyth them. 25

Neuertheless, these are the louynge men, whose ryghteousnesse shall neuer be forgotten but contynue by theyr prosperyte. Theyr chyl=dren are an holye good herytage: Theyr seed en dureth fast in the couenaunte. For theyr sakes shall theyr chyldren and seed contynue for euer, & theyr prayse shall neuer be put downe. Theyr bodyes are buryed in peace, but theyr name ly=ueth for euer moare: The people can speake of theyr wysedome, and the congregacyon can tal ke of theyr prayse.* Enoch walked ryghte and Ecc'o.xlix c acceptably before the Lorde: therefore was he Genue. b.c translated for an example of a mendemente to the generacyons.* Noe, was a stedfast and ry= Genne.bi a ghteous man, & in the time of wrath he became and.bv biij a reconsylynge. ¶ Of Josyah, Hezechias, Dauyd, Jeremy. Ezechyel, Zorobabel, Jesus, Nehemyah, Enoch, and Joseph.

The remembraunce of *Josyas is lyke as when the Apotycarye maketh many precyous swete smelling thinges together. Hys remembraunce shalbe swete as hony in al mouthes and as the playnge of Musycke at a bancket of wyne. He was appoynted to turne the people agayne, and to take awaye all abhompnacyons of the vngodlye. He dyrected hys herte vnto the Lorde, and in the tyme of the vngodlye he set vp the worshyppe of God agayne. All kynges (excepte Dauyd, Hezechias and Josyah) commyted wyckednesse: for euen the kynges of Juda, also forsooke the lawe of God. For they gaue theyr honne vnto other, theyr honoure and worshyppe also to a straunge people.

A *ii.Macch. iii.and.xiii

Symon * the sonne of Onias the hye preeste, whiche in his lyfe set vp the house agayne, & in his dayes made fast the temple. The heygth of the temple also was founded of hym, the double buyldynge and the hye walles of the temple. In his dayes the wels of water flowed out, and were excedynge full as the see. He toke care for his people, and delyuered them from destruction.

structyon. He kepte hys cytye, and made it strōge, that it shulde not beseaged. He dwelte in ho-noure and worshyppe amonge hys people, and enlarged the entraunce of the house, & the court He gaue lyghte as the mournynge starre in the myddest of the cloudes, and as the Moone whē it is full. He shyned as the Sunne in the temple of God. He is as bryghte as the raynebowe in the fayre cloudes, and florysheth as the floures and roses in the sprynge of the yeare, and as ly-lyes by the ryuers of water. Lyke as the braunches vpon the mounte Lybanus, in the tyme of Somer: as a fyre and incence that is kyndled.
Lyke as an whole ornamente of pure golde, set wyth all maner of precyous stoones, and as an Olyue tree, that is fruytefull and as a Cypresse tree, whych groweth vp on hye.

B When he put on the garmente of honoure & was clothed wyth all bewtye: when he wente to the holye aulter to garnysche the coueringe of the Sanctuarye: when he tooke the porcyons oute of the Preastes hande, he hym selfe stoode by the hearthe of the aulter, and hys brethren ro unde about in order. As the braunches of Cedre tree vpon the mounte Lybanus so stoode they rounde about hym. And as the braunches of the Olyue tree, so stoode all the sonnes of Aaron in theyr glorye, and the oblacyons of the Lorde in theyr handes before all the congregacyon of Is raell. And that he myghte sufficyently perfour me hys seruyce vpon the aulter, and garnysche the offryng of the hyeste God, he stretched oute hys hand, & tooke of the drynckofferynge, & pou red in of ỹ wyne so he poured vpō the botome of the aulter a good smell vnto the hyeste Prynce.

C Then began the sonnes of Aaron to syng and to blowe wyth trompettes, and to make a great noyse, for a remembraunce and prayse vn to the Lorde. Then were all the people afrayde and fell downe to the earth vpon theyr faces to worshyppe the Lorde theyr God & to geue than kes to the Almyghty God, They songe goodly also wyth theyr voyces, so that there was a ple asaunte noyse in the greate house of the Lorde.
And the people in theyr Prayer, besoughte the Lorde the Hyghest, that he wolde be mercyfull tyll the honoure of the Lorde were perfourmed, thus ended they theyr mynistracyon and seruyce
Then went he downe and stretched out hys hā des ouer the whoole multytude of the people of Israell, that they shulde geue prayse and thankes oute of theyr lyppes vnto the Lorde, and to reioyce in hys name. He beganne yet once also to praye, that he myghte openly shewe the than kesgeuynge before the Hyghest, namelye thus:
O geue prayse & thanckes (ye al) vnto the Lor de our God whych hath euer done noble & great fulnesse of herte, and peace for our tyme in Isra el. Whych faythfully kepeth hys mercye for vs horre fro my herte: as for the thyrde whome I hate, it is no people. They that syt vpon the mo and prayed for deliueraunce from deathe. I call led vpon the Lorde the father of my Lorde, that he wolde not leaue me without helpe, in the day of my trouble, and in the tyme of the proude: I

The prestes also take awaye the garmētes ℰ of the ymages, and decke theyr wyues & chyl-dren wythall. Whether it be good or euell that any man do vnto thē, they are not able to recō-pense it: they can neyther sette vp a kynge nor put hym downe. Howe shulde then the thynges that are made of them, be goddes? Vayne therfore are the thynges (yee, verye shame is it) that they leaue behynde them for theyr prosperytie. For assoone as there commeth any warre or plage vpon them, then the prestes ymagyne, where they maye hyde them selues wyth them. Howe can men thynke then, ỹ they be goddes, whyche neyther may defende them selues from warre, nor delyuer them from myfortune? For seyng they be but of wood, of stone, of syluer and of golde: all people and kynges shall knowe here-after that they be but vayne thynges: yee, it shalbe openly declared, that they be no goddes: but euen the very worckes of mens handes, and that God hath nothyng to do wyth them. (It is manyfeste then that they are no goddes, but the worckes of mens hādes, and no worcke of God in them.) They can set no kynge in the lande, nor geue rayne vnto mē. They can geue no sentence of a matter, nether defende the lāde from wronge. For they are not able to do so moche as a crowe, that flyeth betwyxte hea-uen and earthe.

When there happeneth a fyre into the house of those goddes of wodde, and syluer, and of golde, the prestes wyll escape and saue them

The Sunne, the moone, & all the starres, seynge they geue theyr shyne and lyghte, are obedyent, and do men good. Whan the lyghtenynge glysstereth, all is cleare. The wynde blowethin euery countre: and whã God commaũdeth the cloudes to go rounde about the whole worlde, they do as they are bydden, whan the fyre is sent downe from aboue & commaunded, it burneth vp hylles and woddes. But as for those goddes, they are not lyke one of these thinges, neyther in bewtye, neyther strẽgth. Wherfore, men shulde not thynke nor saye that they be goddes, seynge they can neyther geue sentẽce in iudgemente, nor do men good. For so muche nowe as ye are sure, that they be no góddes, ℣ then feare thẽ not. For they can neyther speake euell nor good for kynges. They can shewe no tokens in heauen for ỹ Heathen, neyther shyne as the Sunne, nor geue lyghte as the Moone: yee, the vnreasonable beastes are better then they, for they can get them vnder the rofe, and do them selues good. So can ye be certifyed by nomaner of meanes, that they be goddes: therfore feare them not. For lyke as a scarcrowe in a garden of herbes kepeth nothyng, euen so are theyr goddes of wodde, of syluer and golde: and lyke as a white thorne in an orcharde, that euerye byrde syttethe vpon: yee, lyke as a dead bodye that is caste in the darcke. Euen so is it with those goddes of wodde, syluer and golde. By the purple and scarlet wyche they haue vpon them, and soone fadeth awaye: ye maye vnderstande, that they be no goddes: yee, they them selues shalbe consumed at the laste, wyche shalbe a great confusyon of the lande. The story of Susanna wyche is the thyrtene Chapter of Danyel after the Latyn.

THere dwelt a man in Babilon A called Joachym, that tooke a wyfe, whose name was Susanna, the daughter of Helchya, a verye fayre woman and suche one as feared God. Her father & her mother also were godly people, and taught theyr doughter accordynge to the lawe of Moses. Nowe Joachym (her husband) was a greate ryche man, and had a fayre orchard ioynynge vnto hys house. And to hym resorted the Jewes comenly, because he was a mā of reputacion amonge thē. The same yere were there made two iudges, suche as the Lord speaketh of: All the wyckednes of Babylon commeth from the elders (that is) from the iudges, which ſeme to rule ꝑ people. These cam oft to Joachyms houſe, and al ſuch as had anye thing to do in ꝑ law came they thether vnto thē

B Nowe when the people came agayne at af ter none, Suſanna went into her huſbandes or charde, to walke. The elders ſeinge thys that she wente in daylye, and walked, they burned for luſt to her: yee, they were almoſt out of their wittes, & caſt downe theyr eyes, that they ſhuld not ſe heauen, nor remember that God is a righ teous Judge. For they were bothe wounded w̄ the loue of her, neyther durſt one ſhewe another hys grefe. And for ſhame, they durſt not tel her theyr inordynat luſt, that they wold fayne haue to do with her. Yet they layde wayte for her ear neſtly from daye to daye, that they myghte (at the leſt) haue a ſyghte of her. And the one ſayde to the other: Up, let vs go home, for it is dyner tyme. So they wente theyr waye from her.

When they returned agayne, they came together, enquyrynge out the matter betwyxte them ſelues: yee, the one tolde the other of hys wycked luſt: Then appoynted they a tyme whē they myghte take Suſanna alone.

C It happened alſo that they ſpyed oute a cō uenyente tyme, when she wente forth to walke (as her maner was) and nobodye wyth her, but Exodu.ii.a ii.reg.xi.a. two maydens, and thought * to waſhe her ſelfe in the gardē, for it was an hote ſeaſon: And ther was not one perſone there, except ꝑ two elders ꝑ had hyd them ſelues to behold her. So ſhe ſaid to her maydens: go fet me oyle & ſope, & ſhut the orcharde doze, that I maye waſhe me. And they dyd as ſhe bad them, and ſhut the orcharde doze and wente oute them ſelues at a backe dooze, to fet ꝑ thynge that ſhe had commaunded: but Su ſanna knewe not, that the elders laye there hyd wythin. Nowe when the maydens were goone forthe, the two Elders gat them vp and came vpon her, sayinge: nowe the orcharde dozes are ſhut, that no man can ſe vs: we haue a luſt vnto the, therfore conſente vnto vs, and lye wyth vs

D Yf thou wylte not, we wyll bringe a teſty monyall agaynſte the, that there was a ponge felowe wyth the, and that thou haſt ſente away thy maydens from the for the ſame cauſe. Suſā na ſyghed, and ſayde: Alas. I am in trouble on euery ſyde. Though I folowe youre mynde, it wyll be my deathe, and yf I conſente not vnto you, I cannot eſcape your handes. Wel, it is bet ter for me, to fa lin to youre handes without the dede doynge, then to ſynne in the ſyghte of the Lord: and wyth that, ſhe cryed out wyth a loud voyce: the elders alſo cryed oute agaynſte her.

Then ranne there one to the orcharde doze and ſmote it open. Nowe when the ſeruauntes of the houſe hearde the crye in the orcharde they

E ruſhed in at the backe dooze, to ſe what the mat ter was. So when the elders tolde them, the ſer uauntes were greately aſhamed, for why? there was neuer ſuche a repoꝛte made of Suſanna.

On the morowe after, came the people to Joa chym her huſbande, and the two elders came al ſo, full of myſcheuous ymaganacyon agaynſte Suſanna, to bringe her vnto death, and ſpake thus before the people: Sende for Suſanna the daughter of Helchias, Joachyms wyfe. And im medyatly they ſente for her. So ſhe came wyth her father and mother, her chyldren and all her kynred. Nowe Suſanna was a tender perſone and meruelous fayre of face. Therfore the wyc ked men commaunded to take of the clothes frō her face (for ſhe was couered) that at ꝑ leſt they myght ſo be ſatiſfied in her bewty. Then her frē des: yee, & all they ꝑ knewe her, began to wepe.

These two elders ſtode vp in the myddeſt of the people, * and layde theyr handes vpō Su ſanna, wheych wepte and loked vp towarde hea uen, for her herte had a ſure truſte in the Lorde. And the elders ſayde: As we were talkynge in the orcharde alone thys woman came in wyth her two maydens whome ſhe ſente awaye from her, & ſpared the orcharde dozes: with ꝑ a ponge felowe (whyche there was hyd) came vnto her, and laye wyth her. As for vs, we ſtoode in a cor ner of the orcharde. And when we ſawe thys wyckedneſſe, we ranne to her: and perceaued, that they had medeled together. But we coulde not hold hym, for he was ſtrōger then we: thus he opened the dooze anō gat hym awaye. Le. vrii. c

F Nowe when we had taken thys woman, we aſked her what ponge felowe this was: but ſhe wolde not tell vs. Thys is the matter, and we be wytneſſes of the ſame. The comen ſorte beleued them: as thoſe that were the elders and Judges of the people, and ſo they condempned her to death. Suſanna cryed oute wyth a loude voyce and ſayde: O euerlaſtynge God, * thou Hebr.xiii.c ſercher of ſecretes, thou that knoweſt all thyn= ges afore they come to paſſe: thou wotteſt, that they haue borne falſe wytneſſe agaynſt me, and beholde, I muſt dye, where as I neuer dyd ſuch thynges, as theſe men haue malycyouſlye inuen ted agaynſt me. And the Lorde heard her voyce For when ſhe was led forth to death, the Lorde rayſed vp the ſpryte of a ponge chylde, whoſe na me was Danyell, whyche cryed wyth a loude G voyce: * I am cleane from thys bloud. Then al ii.reg.iii.f. Actes.xx.d. the people turned them towarde hym, & ſayde: What meane theſe wordes, that thou haſt ſpo= ken? Danyel ſtode in the myddeſte of them and ſayde: Are ye ſuche fooles, O ye chyldren of Iſ= rael, ꝑ ye cannot diſcerne nor knowe the truth? Ye haue hear condempned a daughter of Iſrael vnto death, and knowe not the truth wherefore Go ſpt on Judgemente agayne, for they haue ſpoken falſe wytneſſe agaynſte her.

Wherfore the people turned agayne in all the haſte. And the elders (that is the pryncypal heades) ſayde vnto hym: come ſyt downe here a monge vs, and ſhewe vs thys matter, ſeynge God hath geuen the as greate honoure as an el der. And Danyel ſayde vnto them: * Put theſe ii.reg.iii.b two aſyde one from another, & then ſhal I heare them. When they were put aſonder one frome a nother, he called one of them and ſayd vnto him O thou cankered carle, that haſte vſed thy wyc kednes ſo long: thyne vngracyous dedes which thou haſt done afore, are nowe come to lyghte.

¶ After the death of Alexander the kynge of Macedonya. Antyochus taketh the kyngedome. Many of the chyldren of Israell. make couenaunte wt the Gentyles. Antyochus subdueth Egypt and Jerusalem vnto hys domynyon. Jerusalem beynge burnt maketh lawes of her owne, & forbydeth to kepe Gods lawes. Antyochus setteth vp an Idoll ouer the aulter of God.

After that Alexander the sonne of Philyppe, kynge of Macedonya wente forth of the lande of Cethim, and slewe Darius kynge of the Persians and Medes: It happened that he toke greate warres in hande, wanne very many stronge Cytyes, and slewe manye kynges of the earthe, goynge thorowe to the endes to the endes of the worlde, and gettynge manye spoyles of the people: in so much that the worlde Judit.1,b. stode in greate awe of hym, * & therfore was he proude in hys herte. Nowe when he had gathered a myghty strong host, & subdued the landes and people wyth theyr prynces, so that they became trybutaryes vnto hym: he fell sycke. And whē he perceaued ỹ he must nedes dye, he called for his noble estates (which had bene brought Dani.vii.a and.viii.b. vp with him of childzen) * and parted hys kyngdome amonge them, whyle he was yet alyue.

So Alexander raygned .xii. yere and then dyed

After hys death fell the kyngedome vnto hys prynces, and they optayned it euerye one in hys rowme, and caused them selues to be crowned as kynges: and so dyd theyr chyldzen after them many yeares, and much wickednes increased in the worlde. Oute of these came the vngracyous rote, noble Antiochus the sonne of Anty-i.mac.viii.a ochus the kynge (* whych had bene a pledge at Rome) and he raygned in the .C. and seuen and thrtye yeare of the empyre of the Grekes.

B In those dayes wente there out of Israell wycked men, which moued muche people wyth
Deu.vii,a. theyr counsaell sayinge: * Let vs go and make a couenaunt with the Heathen, that are rounde Jer.xliii,c about vs: & for sence we departed from them we haue had much sorowe. So thys deuyce pleased them wel, and certayne of the people toke vpon them for to go vnto the kynge, whych gaue thē lycence to do after the ordinaunce of the Heathē i.Esa.xlii.b * Then set they vp an open scole (at Jerusalem) of the lawes of the Heathen, and were nomoare cyrcumcysed: but forsoke the holye testament, & iii.re.xxi.d. ioyned them selues to the Heathen, * and were cleane sold to do myscheke. So whē Antyochus beganne to be myghtye in hys kyngedome, he went about to optayne the lande of Egypte also, ỹ he myghte haue the domynyon of two realmes, * Upon thys entred he into Egypt wyth a i.mac:b.a. stronge host, wyth charettes, elephantes, horsemen, and a great nomber of shyppes & beganne to warre agaynst Ptolomy the kyng of Egypt But Ptolompye was afrayed of hym: and fled: & manye of hys people were wounded to deathe. Thus Antiochus wanne many stronge cities & toke away great good out of the land of Egipt

C * And after ỹ Antyochus had smytten Ei.mac.b.c, gypt, he turned agayne in the .C.xliii. yeare, and went towarde Israell, & came vp to Jerusalem wyth a myghty people: & entred proudly into ỹ Sanctuary, & toke away the golden aulter, the candelstycke and all the ornamentes therof, the table of the shewbread, the powryng vessel, the chargers, the golden spoues, the vayl, the crownes, and ỹ golden apparel of the temple, & brake downe al. He toke also the siluer and gold, ỹ precyous Jewels, and the secret treasurs ỹ he foūd And when he had taken away altogether, caused a great murther of men, & so fulfilled his malycyous pryde, he departed into his owne lande

ii.Esa.b.a. ry in al the land of Israel * The prynces & the elders of the people mourned, the yong men & the maydens were defyled, and the fayre bewtte of wemen was chaunged: the brydegrome and the bryde toke them to mourning: the lande & those that dwelte therin, was moued: for al the house of Jacob was broughte to confusyon.

* After two yeares the kynge sente hys
ii.mac.b.a. cheke treasurer into the cytyes of Juda, whyche came to Jerusalem wyth a greate multytude of people, speakyng peacyable wordes vnto them but all was dysceate: for when they had geuen hym credence, he fell sodenly vpon the cyty, and smote it sooze, and destroyed much people of Israell. * And when he had spoyled the cytie, he set i.mac.viii.d fyre on it, castyng downe houses and walles on euery syde. The wemen and theyr childzen toke they captyue, and led awaye theyr catell. Then buylded they the cytye of Dauyd wyth a greate and thycke wall, and wyth myghtye towares, and made it a stronge holde for them. Besyde al thys, they set wycked people and vngodly men to kepe it, stoared it wyth weapens and vytayles: gathered the goodes of Jerusalem and laied them vp there: thus became it a theuysshe castel.

And thus was done to laye wayte for the people that wente into the Sanctuary, and for the cruel destruccyon of Israel. C The.ii.Chapter

C The mournynge of Mathathyas and hys sonnes for the destruccyon of the holy cytye. They refuse to do sacrifyce vnto Idols. The zele of Mathathias for the lawe of God. They are slayne and wyll not fyghte agayne because of the Sabboth day. Mathathias dyinge commaundeth hys sonnes to stycke by the worde of God after the example of the fathers.

IN those dayes there dyd stande vp one Mathathyas the sonne of John the sonne of Simeon the preast (out of the kynred of Joarys) from Jerusalem, and dwelte vpon the mounte of Modin, and had .v. sonnes, Jhon called God dys, Symeon called Thasy: Judas, otherwyse called Machabeus: Eleaser, otherwise called Abaron: and Jonathas, whose syrname was Apus. These sawe the euel that was done among the people of Juda, and Jerusalem. And Mathathyas sayde: Woo is me, alas that euer I was borne, to se this mysery of my people, and the pyteous destruccyon of the holy cyty: and thus to syt so styl, it beyng delyuered into the handes of the enemyes. * Her Sanctuary is come into the power of straungers: her Temple is, as it were a man ỹ hath lost hys good name: her precyous ornamentes are caryed awaye captyue. Her old men are slayne in the stretes, and her yonge men are fallen thorowe the swearde of the enemyes.

What people is it, that hath not some possessyon in her kyngdome? Or who hath not gotten somme of her spoyles? All her glory is taken awaye. She was a free woman and nowe she is become an hande mayde.

Beholde oure Sanctuarye, oure bewtye and honoure is wasted awaye, and defyled by ỹ Gentiles. What helpeth it vs then to lyue? And Mathathias rente hys clothes, he & hys sōnes & put sackecloth vpon them, & mourned very sore.

Then came the men thyther whyche were sente of kynge Antyochus, to compell suche as were fled into the cytye of Modyn, for to do sacrifyce, and to burne incense vnto Idolles, and to forsake the law of God. So, many of the people of Israell consented and enclined vnto them but Mathathias and his sonnes remayned sted faste. Then spake the commyssyoners of kynge Antyochus, and sayd vnto Mathathias: Thou arte a nobleman, of hye reputacion and greate in thys cytye, hauynge fayre chyldren and brethren. Come thou therefore fyrste, and fulfyl the kynges commaundemente, lyke as all the heathen haue done, yee and the men of Juda, & such as remayne at Jerusalem: so shalt thou and thy chyldren be in the kynges fauour and enryched wyth gold, syluer, and greate rewardes.

Mathathias answered, and spake wyth a loude voyce. Though al nacions obey the kyng Antiochus, & fall away euery mā from keppyng the lawe of theyr fathers: thoughe thy consente to hys commaundementes, yet wyll I and my sonnes & brethren, not fall from the lawe of our fathers. God forbyd we shulde, that were not good for vs * that we shulde forsake the lawe & ordynaunces of God, and to agre vnto the commaundemente of kynge Antyochus. Therefore we wyll do no suche sacrifyce, neyther breake the statutes of oure lawe * to goo another way. And when he had spoken these wordes, there came one of the Jewes, which openly in the syght of all, dyd sacrifyce vnto the Idolles vpon the aulter in the cytye of Modyn, according to the kynges commaundemente.

When Mathathias sawe thys, it greued hym at the herte, so that hys raynes shoke with all and hys wrath kyndled for very zeale of the lawe. Wyth ỹ he starte vp, and killed the Jewe beside the alter: Yee, and slewe the kynges commyssyoner, that compelled hym to do sacrifyce, and destroyed the aulter at the same tyme: such a zeale had he vnto the lawe of God * Lyke as Phinehes dyd vnto zambry the sonne of Salomy. And Mathathias cryed wyth a lowde voyce thorowe the cytye sayinge. Whoso is feruent in the lawe, and wyll kepe the couenaunte, let hym folowe me. * So he and hys sonnes fled in to the mountaynes, and lefte all that euer they had in the cytye. Manye other godlye men also departed into the wyldernesse wyth theyr chyldren, theyr wyues and theyr catell, and remayned there: for the tyrannye increased sore vpō thē.

kynges commaundement, and were gone theyr waye to the wyldernes into secret places, and ỹ there were many departed after them: they folowed vpon them, to fyght agaynste them on the Sabboth day & sayde wylye yet rebell? Get you hence and do the commaundement of kynge Antyochus, & ye shal lyue. They aunswered: * We wyll not go forth, nether wyl we do the kynges commaundement, to defyle the Sabboth daye. Then beganne they to fyghte agaynste them, neuertheles, they gaue them none other aunswere, neyther caste they one stone at them, nor made kaste theyr preuy places, but sayd: we wyl dye all in our innocency, heauen and earth shall testefie with vs, that ye put vs to death wrongfully. Thus they fought agaynst them vpō the sabboth, & slewe both men & cattel, theyr wyues & their childrē to the nōbre of a thousāde people.

E When Mathathias and hys frendes hearde thys, they mourned for them ryght sore & sayde one to another: If so be ỹ we all do as our brethren haue done, and fight not for our lyues and for our lawes agaynst the hethen, then shal they the soner rote vs out of the earth. So they concluded among them selues at the same time: sayeng, what soeuer he be that cōmeth to make bataple with vs vpon the Sabboth day, we wyll fyght agaynste hym and not dye all, as our brethren that were murthered so haynously. Upon this came the Sinagoge of the Jewes vnto the stronge men of Israel, all suche as were feruent in the lawe. And all they that were fled for persecucyon, came to helpe them, and to stande by them: In somuche that they gathered an host of men, and slue the wycked doers in theyr gelousy and the vngodly men in theyr wrath. Some of the wicked fled vnto the heathen, and escaped.

Thus Mathathias and his frendes went about, and destroyed ỹ aulters, and circumcised the chyldren, that had not yet recyued circumcision: as many as they founde within the coastes of Israel: and folowed mightely vpō the childrē of pryde, and this acte prospered in theyr hādes: In so muche, that they kepte the lawe agaynste the power of the Gentyles and the kynges: and gaue not ouer their dominiō vnto wicked doers

F After this, whē the tyme drue on fast, that Mathathias shulde dye, he sayd vnto his sōnes: Nowe is pryde and persecucion increased, nowe is the tyme of destruccion and wrathful displeasure: wherfore (O my sonnes) be ye feruente in the lawe, and ieoparde your lyues for the Testament of the fathers, cal to remembraunce what actes our fathers dyd in theyr tyme, so shal ye receyue greate honour and an euerlastyng name.

Psalm.ci.b ii.ma.viii.a

He went thorowe the cities of Juda, destroyeng the vngodly out of them, turning away the wrath from Israel, and receyuing such as were oppressed: and the fame of him went vnto the vttermost parte of the earth. Then Appolonius (a prynce of Syria) gathered a myghty great host of the heythen, and out of Samaria, to fyght agaynst Israel. Which whē Judas perceyued, he hym, and a great multitude with hym, the remnaunt fled, and he toke theyr substaunce. Judas also toke Appollonius owne swearde, & fought with it all hys lyfe longe.

Nowe whē Seron (another prince of Syria)
B herde saye, that Judas had gathered vnto hym the congregacion and churche of the faythful, he sayde: I wyll get me a name & a prayse thorow out the realme: for I wyll go fyght with Judas and thē that are wyth him, as many as haue despysed the kynges cōmaundement. So he made him ready, and there wente wyth hym a greate myghty hoost of the vngodly, to staude by him, & to be auenged of the childrē of Israel And whē they came nye vnto Bethorō, Judas went forth agaynst them with a smal company. And when his people sawe suche a great hoost before them they sayde to Judas: Howe are we able (beyng so fewe) to fyght agaynste so great a multitude and so stronge, seyng we be so wery, and haue fasted all thys daye?

*But Judas sayde: It is a small matter for f.rr.xiij.a. many to be ouercome with fewe: yea, there is no difference to the God of heauen, to delyuer by a great multitude or by a smal company: *for the ij.pa.xxb.b victory of the battayle standeth not in the multitude of the hoost, but the strength cōmeth from heauen. Beholde, they come agaynst vs wyth a presumtiouse and proude multitude, to destroye vs, our wyues & our chyldren, and to robbe vs. But we wyll fyght for our lyues, & our lawes, and the Lorde hym selfe shall destroye them be=
C fore our face: therfore be not ye afrayde of them.

As soone as he had spoken these wordes, he leapte sodaynly vpon them. Thus was Seron smytten, and his hoost put to flyght, and Judas folowed vpon them beyonde Bethoron vnto the playne felde: where there were slayne eyght hundred men of them, and the residue fled into the lande of the Philistines. Then all the Heathen on euery syde were afrayde of Judas and his brethren: so that the rumour of him came vnto the kynges eares, for all the Gentyles coulde tell of the warres of Judas.

So when kynge Antiochus hearde these ty=
D dynges, he was angry in his mynde: whet for he sente forth, & gathered an hoost of his whole realme, very strong armies: & opened his treasury and gaue his hoost a yeares wages in hande, cō=maundyng them to be ready at all tymes.

Neuertheless, when he sawe, that there was not money ynough in his treasuryes, and ẏ thorowe the discorde & persecucion, whych he made in the lande (to put downe ẏ lawes ẏ had bene of olde tymes) his customes & tributes of the lande were minished: he feared ẏ he was not hable for to beare the costes & charges any longer, nor to haue suche gyftes, to gyue so liberally as he dyd afore, more then the kynges ẏ were before hym.

Wherefore, he was heuy in hys mynde, and thought *to go into Persides, for to take tribu=
f.mac.vi.a tes of the land, & so to gather muche money. So he lefte Lysias (a noble man of ẏ kynges bloud) to ouerse ẏ kynges busynesses, from the water Euphrates vnto the borders of Egypte: and to kepe wel his sōne Antiochus, tyl he came agayn

Moreouer, he gaue him halfe of his hoost and Elephantes, cōmytted vnto him euery thyng of hys mynde, concernynge those whyche dwell in E Juda and Jerusalem: that he shuld sende out an army agaynst them, to destroye and rote out the power of Israel and the remnaunt of Jerusalē: to put out their memorial from that place, to set straungers for to enhabyte all theyr quarters, and parte theyr lande amonge them: Thus the kynge toke the other parte of the *hoost, and de= parted frō Antioche (a cytie of his realme) ouer Iosep.ca.x
the water of Euphrates, in the hundred & .xlvii. lib. antiq.
yere, and went thorowe the hyghe countryes.

son of Doziminus, Nicanor and Gorgias migh ti.ma.viij.b tye men, and the kynges frendes. These he sent wyth forty thousande foote men, & seuen thou=sande horsemen, for to go into the lande of Juda and to destroye it, as the kynge commaunded. So they wente forth wyth al theyr power, and came to Emaus into the playne feld. When the marchauntes harde the rumoure of them, they, and theyr seruauntes, toke verye muche syluer, and golde, for to by the chyldren of Israel to be thyr bond men: There came vnto them also yet mo men of warre on euerye syde, out of Syrya & from the Phylystynes.

Nowe when Judas and hys brethren F saw that trouble increased, and that the Hoost drewe nye vnto theyr borders consydrynge the kynges wordes whyche he commaunded vn=to the people: namelye that they shulde vtterly waste and destroye them: They sayde one to ano=ther: Let vs redresse the decaye of our people, let vs fyghte for oure folke and for oure Sanctua=rye. Then the congregacyon were soone readye gathered to fyght, to praye and to make supply cacyon vnto God for mercye and grace.

* As for Jerusalem, it laye voyde and f.mach.f.b was as it had bene a wylderneſſe. There wente no man in or out at it, and the Sanctuary was troden downe. The aleauntes kepte the castell, there was the habytacyon of the Heathen. The myrth of Jacob was taken away, the pype and the harpe was gone from amonge them.

The Israelytes gathered them together & G came to Maspha before Jerusalem: for in Mas=pha was the place *where they prayed afore ty= me in Israel. So they fasted that daye, and put f.reg.b.ii.b
sackeclothes vpon them, and caste asshes vpon theyr heades, rente theyr clothes, & layde for the the bookes of the lawe (whereoute the Heathen sought the lykenes of theyr ymages) & brought the preastes ornamentes, the fyrstlynges and ẏ tithes. They set ther also ẏ *abstayners (which had fulfylled theyr dayes) before God, and cry=

¶The.iiii. Chapter.

¶Judas goeth agaynst Gozgias whych lyeth in wayt
He putteth Gozgyas and hys hoost to flyght. Lysyas inuadeth Jewry, but Judas dzyueth hym oute. Judas purifyeth the temple and dedycateth the aulter.

AThen toke Gozgias fyue thousand Joseph.lib men of fote, and a thousande of the xii.capp.x. beste hozsemen, and remoued by nyghte, to cō nye where the Je-wes hoost laye, and so to slay thē sodenlye. Nowe the men that kept the castell, were the conueyers of them. Then a rose Judas to smyte the cheke and pzyncypall of the kynges Hoost at Emmaus, foz the armye was not yet come together. In the meane seasō came Gozgyas by nyghte into Judas tentes: & when he founde no man there, he soughte them in the Mountaynes, and thoughte they had ben fled awaye, because of hym. But when it was daye, Judas shewed hym selfe in the felde wyth thze thousande men onelye, whych had ne ther herneste noz swoordes to theyr myndes.

But on the other syde, they sawe that the Heathen were myghtie and wel harnessed, and theyr hozsemen aboute them, and all these well experte in feates of warre. Then sayde Judas to the men that were wyth hym: Feare ye not ỹ multytude of them, be not afrayde of theyr vyo lente runnynge: remember, howe oure fathers Exo.xiiii.e were delyuered * in the red see, when Pharao fo lowed vpon them wyth a great hooste.

Euen so let vs also cry nowe towarde hea uen: and the Lozde shall haue mercy vpon vs, & remember the couenaunte of oure fathers: yea, & destroye thys hoost befoze youre face thys daye
And al the Heathen shal knowe, that it is God
hym selfe, whych delyuereth and saueth Israell

B Then the Heathen lyfte vp theyr eyes: and when they sawe that they were commynge a-gaynste them, they wente oute of theyr tentes ii.Mac.x.bi.d into the battayle: and they that were wyth Ju das, blewe vp the trompettes. * So they buckled together, and the Heathē were dyscomfyted and fled ouer the playne felde: but the hynmoste of them were slayne. Foz they folowed vpon them vnto Assaremoth, and into the feldes of I dumea towarde Azot and Jānia: so that there were slayne of them vpon a thze thousande men

So Judas turned agayne wyth hys hoost, and sayde vnto the people: Be not gredy of the spoy les, we haue yet a battayle to fyght, foz Gozgy as & hys host are here by vs in the mountaynes but stande ye fast agaynst your enemyes & ouer come them: then may ye safly take the spoyles.

As Judas was speakynge these wozdes ¶ beholde, there appered one parte of them vpon the mount. But when Gozgyas sawe that they of hys partye were fled, and the tentes bzent vp (foz by the smoke they myght vnderstand what was done) they perceauynge thys, were verye soze afrayde: and when they sawe also that Judas and hys Hooste were in the felde readye to stryke battayle, they fled euerychone into the lā-de of the Heathen.

So Judas turned agayne to spoyle the ten tes, where thy gat muche golde and syluer, pzecyous stones, purple and greate rychesse. Thus they wente home, and songe a Psalme of thanc-kesgeuyng, and pzayed God in heauen: * foz he Psa.cxxxvi.a is gracyous, and hys mercye endurethe foz euer
Psa.cxviii.a And so Israell had a greate vyctozye in ỹ daye.

Nowe all the Heathen that escaped, came and tolde Lysias euerye thynge as it happened Wherfoze Lysias was soze afrayed, & greued in hys mynd, because Israel had not gotten such mysfoztune, as he wolde they shuld, neyther as the kynge commaunded. The nexte yeare folo-wynge gathered Lysyas thzescoze thousande chosen men of foote, and fyue thousande hozsemen to fyght agaynste them.

So they came into Jewry, and pytched theyr D tentes at Bethozon, wher Judas came agaynst them wyth ten thousande men. And when he sawe so greate and myghtye an hooste, he made hys pzayer, and sayde: Blessed be thou (O saue oure of Israell) * whyche dedeste destroye the i.re.xvii.g vyolente powere of the Gyaunte, in the hande of thy seruaunte Dauyd, * and gauest the hoost i.re.xiiii.b of the Heathen into the hande of Jonathas (the sonne of Saull) and of hys weapon bearer.

Put thys hoost nowe into the hande of thy people of Israel, and let them be confounded, in theyr multytude and hozsemen. Make them a-frayed, and dyscomfozte the boldnesse of theyr strength that they may be moued thozow there destruccion. Cast them downe thozow the swer de of thy louers, then shall all they that knowe thy name, pzayse the wyth thankesgyuynge.

So they stroke the battayle, and there wer slayne of Lysyas hooste, fyue thousande men.
Then Lisias seing the discomfyting of his men and the manlinesse of the Jewes, how they were ready, eyther to lyue oz dye lyke men: he went vnto Antioch, and chose out men of warre: that when they were gathered to gether, they might come agayne into Jewry. Then sayd Judas & hys bzethen beholde, oure enemyes are dyscom-fited: Let vs now go vp, to clense and to repare
the Sanctuarye. E

* Upon thys, all the hoost gathered them to- ii.Mac.x.a gyther, and went vp into mounte Syon.
Nowe when they sawe the Sanctuarye layed waste, the aulter defiled, the dozes bzent vp, the

shrubbes growynge in the courtes, lyke as in a woode or vpon mountaynes: yea, and that the preastes Celles were broken downe: They rent theyr clothes, made great lamentation, caste ashes vpon theyr heedes, fell downe flatte to the grounde, made a greate noyse wyth the trompettes, and cryed towarde heauen.

Then Judas appoynted certayne men to fyghte agaynst those whych were in the castell tyll they had clensed the Sanctuarye. So he chose preastes that were vndefyled, such as had pleasure in the lawe of God: and they clensed ỹ Sanctuarye: and bare oute the defyled stones into an vncleane place. And for so muche as the aulter of burnteoffrynges was vnhalowed, he tooke aduysemente, what he myght do wythall so he thoughte it was best to destroye it (leste it shulde happen to do them any shame) for the Heathen had defyled it, and therefore thy brake it downe. As for the stones, they layed them vp vpon the mountayne by the house in a conuenyente place: tyl there came a prophet, to shewe what shulde be done wyth them.

*So they tooke whole stones accordynge to the lawe, and buylded a new aulter such one as was before, and made vp the Sanctuarye wythin and wythoute, and halowed the house and the courtes. They made newe ornamentes, and brought the candelsticke, the aulter of incence, and the table into the temple. The incence layed they vpon the aulter, and lyghted ỹ lampes whych were vpon the candelstyck, that they myghte burne in the temple. They set the shewebread vpon the table, and hanged vp the vayle and set vp the temple, as it was afore. *

ii.Mac.x.a

And vpon the fyue and twentye daye of the nynthe moneth, whyche is called the moneth of Casleu, in the hundred and eyghte & fortye yeare they rose vp by tymes in the morynyng for to do sacrifyce (accordyng to ỹ lawe) vpon the newe burnteofferynge aulter that they had made: after the time and season that the Heathen had defyled it. The same daye was it set vp agayne, wyth songes, pypes, harpes, and cymbales

And all the people fel vpō theyr faces, worshyppynge and thanckynge the God of heauen whiche had geuen them the victory.* So they kepte the dedycacyon of the aulter eyghte dayes offerynge burnte sacrifyces and thanckeofferynges wyth gladnesse. They decte the temple also with crownes and shyldes of golde, and halowed the portes and celles, and hanged doores vpon them. Thus there was verye greate gladnesse amonge the people, because the blasphemy of the Heathen was put waye. So Judas and hys brethren wyth the whole congregacyon of Israel, ordeyned, *that the tyme of dedycacyon of the aulter shulde be kepte in hys season from yeare to yeare, by the space of eyghte dayes, frō the fyue and twenty daye of the moneth Casleu wyth myrthe and gladnesse.

And at the same tyme buylded they vp the mounte Syon wyth hye walles and stronge towers round about: lest the Gentyles shuld come and treade it downe, as they dyd afore. Therefore Judas set men of warre in it, to kepe it, and made it stronge, for to defende * Behsura: ỹ the people might haue a refuge agaynst ỹ edomites

The. v. Chapter.

Judas vanquyshed the Heathen that go about to destroy Israell: and is holpen of hys brethren Symon and Jonathas. He ouerthroweth the cytye of Ephron because they denyed hym passage thorowe it.

IT happened also that when the Heathen round about hearde, howe that the aulter and the Sanctuarie were set vp in theyr olde estate: it displeased them very sore, wherefore they thoughte to destroye the generacyon of Jacob that was amonge them: In so muche that they beganne to slay and to persecute certayne of the people. * Then Judas foughte agaynst the chyldren of Esau in Idumea, & agaynst those whych were at Arabathane (for they dwelte rounde about the Israelytes) where he slew and spoyled a greate multytude of them. He thoughte also vpon the malice and vnkaythfulnesse of the chyldren of Bean, howe they were a snare & a stopp vnto the people, & howe they layd wayte for thē in the hye way. Wherfore he shutte vp them into towers, & came vnto them, destroyed them vtterlye and burnte vp theyr towers, wyth all that were in them.

Ezec.xxv.c and.xxv.a ii.mach.v.c

Afterwarde, wente he agaynste the chyldren of Ammon, whereof he founde a myghtye power and a greate multytude of people, wyth Tymothy theyr captayne. So he stroke manye battayles wyth them, whyche were destroyed before hym. And when he had slayne them, he wanne Gazer the cyty, wyth the townes belongynge therto, & so turned agayne into Jewrye The Heathen also in Galaad gathered them together agaynste the Israelytes ỹ were in theyr quarters, to slay them: but they fled to the castel of Datheman and sente letters to Judas & hys brethren, sayinge: The Heathen are gathered agaynste vs on euery syde, to destroye vs, & now they make them readye for to come, & laye syege to the castell, whereunto we are fled, & Tymothye is captayne of theyr hooste: come therefore and delyuer vs oute of theyr handes: for there is a greate multytude of vs slayne alredye. Yea, & oure brethren that were at Tubyn, are slayne & destroyed (well nye a thousande men) and theyr wyues, theyr chyldren, and theyr goodes haue the enemyes led awaye captyue.

Whyle these letters were yet a redynge, B beholde, there came other messengers from Galyle wyth rente clothes: whyche tolde euen the same tydynges, and sayde: that they of Ptolomays, of Tyrus and of Sydon were gathered agaynste them, and that all Galylee was fylled wyth enemyes to destroye Israell. * When Judas and the people hearde thys, they came together (a great congregacion) to deuise, what they myghte do for theyr brethren, that were in trouble, and beseeged of theyr enemyes. And Judas sayde vnto Symon hys brother: chose the oute certayne men, & go delyuer thy brethren in Galylee: As for me and my brother Jonathas, we wyll go into Galaad ythym. So he lefte Joseph̄us the

phus the sonne of zacharye, and Azaryas to be Captaynes of the people, and to kepe the remnaunte of the hooste in Jewrye, and commaunded them sayinge: Take the ouersyghte of this people, and se that ye make no warre agaynste the Heathen, vntyll the tyme we come agayne And vnto Symeon he gaue thre thousande mē for to go into Galyle, but Judas hymselef had eyghte thousande in Galaadythym.

¶ Then went Symeon into Galyle, & stroke dyuers battayles with the Heathen: whome he dyscomfyted, and folowed vpon them vnto the porte of Ptalomays. And there were slayne of the Heathen almooste thre thousande men. So he toke the spoyles of them, and caryed awaye the Israelites that were in Galile and Arbatis wyth theyr wyues, theyr chyldren, and all that they had, and brought them into Jewry wyth great gladnesse. Judas Machabeus also and hys brother Jonathas wente ouer Jordan, and trauayled .iii. dayes iourney in the wyldernesse: Where the Nebuthyes met them, and receaued them louynglye, and tolde them euery thynge ỳ had happened vnto theyr brethren in Galaadythym, and howe that many of them were besieged in Barasa, Bozor Alymys, Casphor, Mageth and Carnaim (all these are stronge walled & mightie greate cities) and that they were kept in other cyties of Galaad also: & tomorow they are appoynted to bryngе theyr hoost vnto these cyties, to take them, & to wynne thē in one daye.

So Judas and hys hoost turned in all the haste in the wildernesse towarde Bosor, & wanne the cytie, slewe al the males with the swerde, toke al their goodes, and set fyre vpon the cytie. And in the night they tooke theyr iourney from thence, and came to the castell. And bytymes in the morning when they loked vp, beholde, there was an innumerable people bearynge ladders and other instrumentes of warre, to take the castell and to ouercome them.

When Judas sawe that the battayle began ne, and that the noyse therof went vp, and rang into heauen, and that there was so greate a crye in the cytie: He sayde vnto hys hoost: fyght this daye for youre brethren. And so came behynde theyr enemyes in thre companies, and blew vp the trompettes, and cried in their praier to God.

But as soone as Tymothes hoost perceaued that Machabeus was there, they fled from hym, & the other slewe them downe ryghte sore: so that there was kylled of them the same daye, almoost eyghte thousande men. Then departed Judas vnto Maspha, layde seege vnto it, and wanne it: slewe all the males in it, spoyled it, and set fyre vpon it: From thence wente he and tooke Casbon, Mageth, Bosor, and the other cytyes in Galaad.

D ii.mac.v.d * After thys gathered Tymothy another hooste, whyche pytched theyr tentes before Raphon beyonde the water. Judas also sente to espye the hooste, and they broughte hym worde agayne, sayinge: All the Heathen that be rounde aboute vs, are gathered vnto hym, and the hoost is verye greate. Yee they haue hyred the Arabyans to helpe them, & haue pytched theyr tētes beyonde the water and are redy to come & fyghte agaynst the. So Judas wente on to mete them.

And Tymothy sayde vnto the captaynes of hys hooste: when Judas and hys hooste come nye the ryuer: yf ye go ouer fyrste, we shall not be able to wythstande hym, for why? he wyll be to stronge for vs. But yf he dare not come ouer so that he pytche hys tente beyonde the water: then wyll we go ouer, for we shalbe stronge ynoughe agaynste hym. Nowe as sone as Judas came to the ryuer, he appoynted certayne scrybes of the people, and commaunded them, sayinge: se that ye leaue none behynde vpon thys syde of the ryuer, but let euery man come to the battayle. So he wente fyrste ouer vnto them, and hys people after hym.

And all the Heathen were dyscomfyted before hym, and let theyr weapons fall, and ranne into the temple that was at Carnym. Whyche cytye Judas wanne, & burnte the temple wyth al that were in it: So was Carnaim subdued, & myghte not wythstande Judas. Then Judas gathered all the Israelytes that were in Galadathym, from the leaste vnto the mooste, wyth theyr wyues and theyr chyldren (a verye great hooste) for to come into the lande of Israell.

*So they came vnto Ephrō, whych was a myghtye great and stronge cytye, and laye in theyr waye. For they could not go by it, nether of the ryght hande nor of the lefte, but muste go thorowe it. Neuertheless they that were in the cytye wolde not let them go thorowe, but walled vp the portes wyth stones. And Judas sent vnto them wyth peaceable wordes saying: Let vs passe thorowe youre lande, that we maye go into oure owne countree: there shal nobodye do you harme, we wyll but onelye go thorowe on foote. But they wolde not let them in. E ii.mac.xii.c

Wherefore Judas commaunded a proclamacyon to be made thorowoute the hooste, that euery man shuld kepe hys order: and so they dyd theyr beste lyke valeaunte men.

And Judas besieged the cytye al that day and all that nyght, and so wanne it, where they slew as many as were males, and destroyed the cytye, and spoyled it, and wente thorowe all the cytye ouer them that were slayne. Then wente they ouer Jordayne into the playne felde before Bethsam. And Judas helped those forwarde that came behinde, and gaue the people good exhortacion al the waye thorowe, tyll they were come into the lande of Juda. Thus they wente vp vnto the mount Syon, where they offred wyth* & thanksgeuyng: because ther were none ii.par.xx.e of thē slayne, but came home agayne peaceably

Nowe what tyme as Judas & Jonathas were in the lande of Galaad, and Symeō theyr brother in Galyle before Ptolamays: Then Josephus the sōne of zachary and Azaryas the captaynes, hearynge of the actes that were done & of the battayles that were stryken, sayde: Let vs get vs a name also, and go fyghte agaynste the Heathen that are rounde aboute vs.

So they gaue theyr hooste a commaunde- F

ment, & wēt toward Jamnya. Then came Gor gyas and hys men oute of the cytye, to fyghte a gaynst them: Josephus also and Azarpas were chaced vnto the borders of Jewry, & ther were slayne that daye of the people of Israel, two. M. men: so that there was a greate mysery among ii.Ma.v.b. the people* and all because they were not obedyente vnto Judas and his brethren, but thought they shulde quyte them selues manfully. Neuertheless they cam not of the seed of these men, by whome Israel was helped. But the men that were wyth Judas, were greatelye commended in the syght of al Israel, & al the Heathen, were soeuer theyr name was heard vpon, & the people came vnto them, byddynge them welcome.

After thys went Judas forthe wyth hys brethren, aud foughte agaynste the chyldren of Esau, in the lande that lyeth towarde the south where he wanne the cytye of Ebron, & the townes that lye besyde it: and as for the walles and towre rounde abonte it, he brente them vp.

Then remoued he to goo into the lande of the Philystynes, and wente thorowe Samarya. At the same tyme were there manye Preastes slayne in the battayle, whyche wylfullye and wythoute aduysemente wente oute for to fyghte, to get them honoure. And when Judas Deute.vi.a came to Azot in the Philystynes lāde*, he brake downe theyr aulters, brente the Images of theyr Jolles, spoyled the cytyes & came agayne into the lande of Juda.

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

¶ Antyochus wyllynge to take the cytye of Elymas for a prayse is dryuen awaye of the cytezyns. He falleth into syckenesse and dyeth. Hys sonne Antiochus is made kynge. The beseege of the tower of Syō. Eupator commeth into Jewry wyth a greate armye. The boldnesse of Eleazar.

Josephus. xiii lyb. xii. antt

NOwe when kynge Antyochus trauayled thorowe the hye countryes, he hearde that Elymas in Persya was a noble and plenteous cytye in syluer and golde, and that there was in it a verye ryche temple: where as were clothes, cote armoures and shyldes of golde, whyche Alexandre the sonne of Philyp, kynge of Macedonea (that raygned fyrst in Greke lande) had left behynde hym. Wherefore he wente aboute to take the cytye & to spoyle it, but he was not able: for the citezyns were warned of it, and foughte wyth hym. And he fled and departed wyth great heynesse, and came agayne into Babylon. Moreouer, there came one whyche brought hym tydynges in 1.mac.iii.e. and.iiii Persyde, that hys hoostes whyche were in the lande of Juda, were dryuen awaye, & how ỳ Lysyas wente forthe fyrste wyth a greate power, and was dryuen away of the Jewes: howe that they had wonne the vyctorye, and gotten great goodes oute of the hoostes that perysshed, howe they had brokē downe the abhominaciō which 1.macha.i.f he set vp vpon the aulter at Jerusalem, and kensed the Sanctuarye wyth hye walles, lyke as it was afore: yee, and Bethsura hys cytye also.

So it chaunsed, that when the kynge had
B herde these wordes, he was afrayed and greued very sore. Wherefore he layde hym downe vpō hys bed, and fell sycke for verye sorowe: and all because it had not happened as he had deuysed. And there contynued he long, for hys greefe was euer, more and more, so that he sawe he muste nedes dye. Therefore he sente for hys frendes, and sayde vnto them: the slepe is gone from myne eyes, for the verye sorowe and vexacyon of hert that I haue. For when I consyder in my mynd the greate aduersytie that I am come vnto, and the floudes of heynesse whyche I am come in, where as afore tyme I was so mery, & so greatly set by (by reason of my power.) Agayne, consydrynge the euell that I haue done at Jerusalem, from whence I tooke all the rychesse of golde and syluer that were in it, and sente to fetche awaye the inhabytours of Jewry wythoute anye reason why: I knowe that these troubles are come vpon me for the same cause. And behold, I muste dye wyth great sorow, in a straūge lande. Then called he for one Philyp a frende of hys, whome he made ruler of all hys realme, and gaue hym the Crowne, hys roobe and hys ryng: that he shulde take hys sonne Antiochus vnto hym, and brynge hym vp, tyll he myghte raygne hym selfe. * So the kynge Antyochus ii.ma.ix.a dyed there, in the hundred and foretye and nyne b.c.d.e
C yeare. When Lisias knewe that the kinge was deed, he ordeyned Antyochus his sōne (*whom he had brought vp,) to raygne in hys fathers Joseph. ca xviii. xii stead, and called him Eupator, nowe they that 1.mac. iii.d were in the castel (at Jerusalem) kepte in the Jewes rounde aboute the Sanctuarye, & sought euer styll to do them harme for the strengthenynge of the Heathen.

Wherefore, Judas thought to destroye them, & called all the people together, that they myghte laye seege vnto them. So they came together in the hundred and fyftye yeare, and beseeged them, layng forth theyr ordinaunce and instrumentes of warre. Then certayne of them that were beseeged, wente forth (vnto whome some vngodly mē of Israell ioyned them selues also) and wente vnto the kynge, sayinge: How longe wyll it be, or thou punysche and aduenge our brethren? We haue euer bene mynded to do thy father seruice, to walke in hys statutes, and to obeye hys commaundementes: Therfore our people fell from vs, & whersoeuer they founde anye of vs, they slewe them: and spoyled oure inherytaunce and they haue not onelye medled wō vs, but wyth all oure countryes: and beholde, thys daye are they beseegynge the castell at Jerusalem, * and haue made vp the stronge holde 1.mac.iii.g in Bethsura. And yf thou doest not preuente thē ryghte sone, they wyll do moare then these, and thou shalte not be able to ouercome them.

He hyred men of warre also oute of other realemes & out of the Iles of the see, whiche came vnto hym. And the nombre of hys hoostes was an hundred thousande foote men, & twentye thousande horsemen, & two and thyrtye Elephantes well exercysed in battayl* These came 1.ma.xiii.g vi.f

thorowe Idumea vnto Bethsura, & beseeged it alonge season, and made dyuers instrumentes of warre agaynste it. But the Jewes came out and brente them, and foughte lyke men. Then departed Judas from the castell at Jerusalem, and remoued the hoost towarde Bethzacaran ouer agaynste the kynges armye.

E So the kynge arose before the daye, and broughte the power of hys hooste into the way to Bethzacaran, where the hoostes made them redaye to the battayle, blowynge the trompettes. And to prouoke the Elephātes for to fyght they shewed them the sap of red grapes & molberyes, and deuyded the Elephantes amonge the hoost: so that by euerye Elephant there stood a thousande men well harnessed, and helmettes of stele vpon theyr heades. Yee, vnto euery one of the Elephantes also were ordeyned fyue hundred horsemē of the best, whyche wayted on the Elephant, goynge whersoeuer he went, and departed not from hym. Euerye Elephante was couered wyth a stronge towar of wood, where vpon were two and thyrty valeaunt men with weapons to fyghte, and wythin was a man of Inde to rule the beaste.

As for the remnaunte of the horsemen, he set vpon both the sydes in two partes wyth trōpettes, to prouoke ỹ host, and to stirre vp suche as were slow in the army. And when the sunne shone vpon theyr shyldes of golde and stele, the mountaynes glystered against at them, & were as bryght as the cressettes of fyre. The kynges hooste also was deuyded, one part vpon the hye mountaynes the other lowe beneth: so they wēt on takynge good hede: and keppng theyr order And all they that dwelt in the land, were afrayed at the noyse of theyr hooste, when the multytude wente forth, and when the weapons smot together, for the hooste was bothe greate and myghtye: Judas also and hys hooste entred in to the battayle, and slewe syxe hundred men of the kynges armye. Nowe when Eleasar the sō of Saura, dyd se one of the Elephantes decked wyth the kynges badge, and was a more goodlye beaste then the other: he thoughte the kynge shulde be vpon hym, and leopardye hym selfe to delyuer hys people, and to get hym a perpetuall name. Wherefore he ranne wyth a corage vnto the Elephante in the myddest of the hoost, smytynge them downe of both sydes, and slewe manye aboute hym. So wente he to the Elephantes fete, and gat hym vnder hym, and slew hym then fell the Elephante downe vpon hym, and there he dyed. Judas also and hys men seynge ỹ power of the kynge and the myghtye violence of hys hooste departed from them. And the kynges armye wente vp agaynste them towarde Jerusalem, and pytched theyr tentes in Jewry besyde mounte Syon. Moreouer, the kynge tooke truce wyth them that were in * Bethsura

But when they came oute of the cytye (because they had no vyttayles wythin, & the land laye vntylled) the kynge tooke Bethsura, & set men to kepe it, and turned his hoste to the place of the Sanctuarye, and layd seege to it a great whyle. Where he made all maner ordynaunce, handebowes, fyre dartes, rackettes to cast stoones, scorppons to shote arowes, and slynges. The Jewes also made ordynaunce agaynste theyrs, and foughte alonge season.

But in the cytye there were no vytayles, for it was the seuenth yeare of the warres and those Heathen that remayned in Jewry, had eaten vp all theyr store. And in the Sanctuarye were fewe men lefte, for the hungre came so vpō them, that they were scatered abrode euery mā to hys owne place.

So when Lysyas hearde ỹ Philyp (* whō Antyochus the kyng whyle he was yet lyuyng had ordeyned to brynge vp Antyochus hys sonne, that he myghte be kynge) was come agayne oute of Persya, and Medea, wyth the kynges hooste, and thoughte to optayne the kyngdome He gat hym to the kynge in all the haste, and to the captaynes of the hooste, and sayde we decrease daylye, and oure vytayles are but small: A- G gayne, the place that we lay seege vnto is very stronge, and it were oure parte to se for the realme. Let vs agre wyth these men, and take truce wyth them, and wyth al theyr people, & graunt them to lyue after theyr lawe, as they dyd afore For they be greued, and do all these thynges agaynste vs, because we haue dyspysed theyr lawe. So the kynge and the prynces were contente, and sente vnto them to make peace, and they receaued it. Nowe when the kinge and the prynces had made an othe vnto them, they came oute of the Castell, and the kynge wente vp to mount Syon. But when he sawe that the place was wel defenced, he brake hys oth that he had made, & commaunded to destroy the wal round aboute. Then departed he in al the haste, and returned vnto Antyoch, where he founde Phylip haupnge dompynyon of the cytye. So he fought against him, & toke the citie againe in his hādes

¶ Demetrius raygned after he had kylled Antiochus, and Lysyas. He troubleth the chyldren of Israel thorow the counsayle of certayne wycked persons. The prayer of the prestes agaynste Nychanor. Judas kylleth Nychanor, after he had made hys prayer.

IN the hundred and one and fyftye yeare came Demetrius the sonne of A Seleucus from the cytye of Rome wyth a small companye of men, vnto a cytye of the see coaste and there he bare rule And it chaunced that when he came to Antyoch the cytye of hys progenytoures, his hooste tooke Antyochus and Lysyas, to bryng them vnto hym. But when it was told hym, he sayd: let me not se theyr faces: So the hoost put them to death. Now when Demetrius was set vpon the throne of hys kyngedome, there came vnto hym wycked and vngodlye men of Israel whose captayne was Alcimus, that wold haue bene made hye preaste; These men accused the people of Israell vnto the kynge, sayinge: Judas and hys brethren haue slayne thy frendes, and dryuen vs oute of oure owne lande. Wherefore sende nowe some man (to whome thou geuest credence) that he maye go and se all the destruccyon, wyche he hath done vnto vs and to the kynges land, and let him be punyshed with all hys frendes and fauourers.

Then the kynge chose Bachydes a frende
B of hys, whych was a man of great power in the realme (beyonde the great water) and kaythful vnto the kynge, and sente hym to se the destruccyon that Judas had done. And as for that wycked Alcimus, he made him hye preaste, and commaunded hym to be aduenged of the chyldren of Israel. So they stode vp, & came wyth a greate hoost into the lande of Juda, sendynge messaungers to Judas and hys brethren, and speakinge vnto them wyth peaceable wordes: but vnder
1.mech.7.b dysceate. * Therfore Judas and hys people beleued not theyr sayinge, for they sawe that they were come wyth a greate hooste

After thys came the Scrybes together vnto Alcimus and Bachides, trustynge the beste vnto them. And fyrste the Assideans requyred peace of them, sayinge: Alcimus the preast is come of the seede of Aaron, howe can he disceaue vs? So they gaue them louing wordes, & swore vnto them, and sayde: we wyll do you no herme neyther youre frendes: and they beleued them. But the verye same daye toke they .iii. score mē of them, and slewe them accordynge to the wordes that were writen, * They haue cast the flesh Psa.Irrira C of thy sayntes, and shed theyr bloude rounde aboute Jerusalem, and there was no man ỹ wold burye them. So there came a greate feare and dreade amonge the people, sayynge: there is nether truth nor ryghteousnesse in them, for they haue broken the appoyntemente and oth ỹ they made. And Bachydes remoued hys hoost from Jerusalem, and pytched hys tente at Betzeka: where he sent forth and toke many of them that had forsaken hym. He slewe many of the people also and cast thē into a great pyt Thē cōmytted he the lande vnto Alcimus, & left men of warre wt̄ him to helpe hym, And Bachides hym selfe wente vnto the kyng And thus Alcymus defended hys hyghe Preastehode, and all suche as vexed Israel resorted vnto hym: In so much that they optayned the lande of Juda, and dyd much euel vnto the Israelytes.

Nowe when Judas sawe all the myschefe that Alcimus and hys company had done (yee, more then the Heathen themselues) vnto the Israelytes, he wente forthe rounde aboute all the borders of Jewrye, and punished those vnkayth full rennagates, so that they came nomore oute into the countre. So when Alcimus, sawe that Judas and his people had gotten the vpper hande, and that he was not hable to abyde them, he went agayne to the kyng and sayd al ỹ worst of thē ỹ he coulde. Then the kynge sent Nychanor one of hys chefe princes (whych beare euel wyll to Israel) and commaunded hym, that he shuld vtterlye destroye the people.

3.ma.7.b.a. * So Nychanor came to Jerusalem wyth a great hoost, and sent vnto Judas and hys brethren wyth frendly wordes (but vnder desceat) sayinge: there shalbe no warre betwyxt me and you: I wyll come wyth fewe men, to se howe ye do, wyth frendeshyppe. Upon thys he came vnto Judas, and they saluted one another peaceably, but the enemyes were appoynted to take Judas by vyolence. Neuertheless, it was tolde Judas, that he came vnto hym but vnder dysceate wherefore, he gat hym awaye from hym, & wolde se hys face nomore. When Nichanor perceaued that hys councell was bewrayed, he wente out to fyght agaynst Judas, besyde Capharsa- E

After thys came Nichanor vp vnto mount Syon: and the Preastes wyth the elders of the people went forth to salute hym peaceably and to shewe hym the burntesacrifyces that were offred for the kynge. But he laughed them and the people to scorne, mocked them, defyled theyr offerynges, and spake dysdaynefullye: yee, and swore in his wrath, sayinge, * Yf Judas and his 13.ma.7.b.a hoost be not delyuered nowe into my handes, as sone as euer I come agayne (& fare well) I shall burne vp thys house. Wyth that, went he oute in a greate anger. Then the preastes came in, and stoode before the aulter of the temple, weppynge, and sayinge.

* For so much as thou (O Lorde) hast chosen thys house, that thy name myghte be called 11.par.7.c

When Nichanor was gone from Jerusalem, he pytched hys tente at Bethoron, & there an hooste met hym oute of Siria. And Judas came to Adarsa wyth thre thousande men, and made hys prayer vnto God, sayinge: O Lorde,

When Nichanors men of warre sawe that he was killed, they cast awaye theyr weapons and fled, but the Jewes folowed vpon them an whole dayes iourney frō Adazar vnto Gazara, blowinge with the trompettes and makyng tokens after them. So the Jewes came forth of al the townes there about and blewe out theyr hornes vpon them, and turned agaynste them. Thus were they all slayne, and not one of them lefte.

AIudas heard also the fame of ꝑ Romās that they were myghtie & valeaunt mē and agreable to all thynges ꝑ are requyred of them, & make peace wyth all men, whych come vnto them, & howe they were doughtye men of strength. Besides that, it was told hym of theyr battailes, & noble actes which they dyd in Galacya, howe they had conquered thē, & brought them vnder tribute: & what great thynges they had done in Spane: howe ꝑ wyth theyr wysedome and sober behauoure they had wonne the mynes of syluer & gold, ꝑ are there, & obtayned all the lande, wyth other places farre from thē: howe they had dysconfited and slayne downe the kynges ꝑ came vpon thē, from the vttermost parte of the earth, & howe other people gaue them trybute euery yeare. Howe they had slayne & ouercome Philippe & Perses kynges of Cethī, & other mo (in battel) which had brought theyr ordynaunce agaynst them: howe they dysconfyted great Antiochus kynge of Azia (that wolde nedes fyght wyth them) haupnge an. Moreouer, howe that as for other kyngedomes and Iles whyche sometyme wythstoode them, they destroyed them, and brought them vnder theyr domynyon. But helped euer theyr owne frendes, and those that were confederate wyth them, and conquered kyngedomes, bothe farre and nye, and that whosoeuer heard of their renowne was afrayed of them: for whome they wold helpe to theyr kyngedomes, those raygned and whome it lyked not thē to raygne, they put hym downe. And howe they were come to great preheminence: haupnge no kynge amonge them nether any man clothed in purple, to be magnyfyed therthorowe, but had ordeyned them selues a parlyment, wherin there sat. iii. C Then Judas chose Eupolemus ꝑ sōne of Jhō the sonne of Jacob, & Jason the sonne of Eleazer and sent them vnto Rome for to make frendshyp & a bonde of loue wt them, that they myghte take from them the bondage of the Grekes, for the Jewes sawe that the Grekes wolde subdue ꝑ kyngdome of Israel. So they went vnto Rome (a very greate iourney:) & came into the parlamente, and sayde: Judas Machabeus with hys brethrē and the people of the Jewes hathe sente vs vnto you, to make a bonde of frendeshyp and peace wt you, and ye to note vs as youre louers and frendes. And ꝑ matter pleased the Romaynes ryght well, wherfore it was wrytten vp: of the whych the Romaynes made a wrytynge in tables of brasse, and sent it to Jerusalem: that they myghte haue by them a memoryal of the same peace: and bonde of frendshyp after thys maner. God saue the Romaynes & the people of the Jewes both, by see and by lande, and kepe the swearde & enemy from them for euer more. Yf there come fyrst any warre vpon the Romaynes or anye of theyr frendes thorowout all theyr domynyon, the people of the Jewes shall helpe them (as the tyme requyreth) and that wythal theyr hertes. Also they shall nether geue nor sende vnto theyr enemyes vytayles, weapens, money, nor shyppes: but fulfyll thys charge at the Romaynes pleasure, and take nothynge from them therfore. Agayne, yf ꝑ people of the Jewes happen fyrst to haue warre the Romayns shall stande by them with a good wyll, accordynge as the tyme wyl suffre. Nether shall they geue vnto the Jewes enemyes, vytayles, weapens, mony, nor shyppes. Thus are the Romaynes content to do, and shall fulfyll theyr charge wythoute anye dysceate.

Accordynge to these artycles, the Romaynes made the bonde wyth the Jewes. Nowe after these artycles (sayde they) yf anye of the partyes wyll put to them, or take any thynge from them: they shal do it wyth the consente of both: & whatsoeuer they adde vnto them, or take frome them, it shall stande faste. And as touchynge the euell that Demetrypus hath done vnto the Jewes, we haue wrytten vnto hym sayinge: wherefore layest thou thy heuy pocke vpon the Jewes oure frendes and louers? Yf they make any complaynte of the agayne vnto vs, we shall defende them, and fyghte wyth the by see and by lande. D

¶ After ꝑ death of Nicanor Demetrius sendeth his army agaynst Judas. Judas is slayne. Jonathas is put in the stead of his brother. The strife betwene Jonathas & Bachides. Alcimus is takē wt the palsye, & dyeth. Bachides returneth agayne vnto the king. He cōmeth vpō Jonathas by ꝑ councel of certaine wicked persons, & is ouercome. The truce of Jonathas with Bachides

AIn the meane season when Demetrypus hearde that * Nichanor and hys hooste was slayne in the felde, he proceded further to sende Bachides & Alcimꝰ agayne into Jewrye, and those that were in the ryght wynge of hys hooste: wyth hym. So they wente forth by the waye that leadeth vnto Galgala, & pytched theyr tentes before Mesaloth whyche is in Arbellis: and wanne the cytie and slewe much people. In the fyrste Moneth of the. C. and two yeare, they brought theyr hooste to Hierusalem, and rose vp, and came to Berea, wyth twentye A 1. mac. bff. & Joseph. ca. xvii. ii. fii.

thousande footemen, and two. M. horsemen.

Nowe Judas had pytched his tente at Laisa, wyth thre thousande chosen men. And when they sawe the multytude of the other armye ꝑ it was so great, they were sore afrayed, and many conuayed them selues oute of the hoost. In so much that there abode no mo of them but eyght hundred men. When Judas sawe that hys host fayled hym, and that he muste nedes fyght: it brake hys herte, that he had no time to gather them together: wherefore the man was in extreme trouble. Neuertheless, he sayde vnto them: that remayned wyth hym. Up, let vs go agaynste oure enemyes, peraduenture we shalbe able to fyght wyth them. But they wolde haue stopped hym, saying: we shal not be able, therfore let vs now saue oure lyues, and turne agayne to oure brethren, and then wyll we fyghte agaynste them, for we are here but fewe.

And Judas sayd: God forbyd that we shulde fle frō them. Wherfore, yf our tyme be come: let vs manfully dye for our brethren, and let vs not stayne our honour. Then the host remoued oute of the tentes, and stode agaynst them. The horsmen are deuyded in two partes, the slyngcasters and archers went before the host: and al ꝑ mygh tie men were formost in the felde. Bachides himselfe was in the ryght wynge of the battel, and ꝑ host drewe nye in two partes, and bleweꝑ trompets. They of Judas syde blewe the trompetes also, and the earth shoke at the noyse of the hoostes, and they stroke a felde from the morow tyl nyght. And when Judas sawe that Bachydes host was strongest of the ryght syde, he toke wᵭ hym all the herdy men, and brake ꝑ ryght winge of their order, and folowed vpon them vnto the mount Azot. Nowe when they whyche were of the lyfte wynge, sawe that the ryght syde was dyscomfyted the ꝑsecuted Judas & them that were wyth hym. Then was there a sore battayl for many were slayne and wounded of both the partyes. Judas also hym selfe was kylled, and ꝑ remnaunt fled. So Jonathas and Symon toke Judas their brother, and buryed hym in hys fathers sepulchre in the cytye of Modin. And al the people of Israel made gret lamentacyon for hym, and mourned longe, sayinge: Alas, ꝑ thys worthye shulde be slayne, whyche delyuered the people of Israell. As for other thynges partayning to the battayles of Judas, the noble actes that he dyd and of hys worthynesse: they are not wrytten, for they were very manye.

C * And after the death of Judas, wycked men came vp in all the coastes of Israel, and there arose all suche as worcke vngodlynesse. In those dayes was there a greate dearthe in the lande, & all the countre gaue ouer them selues and theirs vnto Bachides, So Bachides chose wyked mē & made them Lordes in the lande, These sought out & made search for Judas frendes, & brought them vnto Bachides: which auenged hym selfe vpon them wyth greate dyspyte. And there came so greate trouble in Israel, as was not sence the tyme that no prophete was sene there.

Then came all Judas frendes together, and sayd vnto Jonathas: for so much as thy brother Judas is dead, ther is none lyke hym to go forth agaynst our enemyes, agaynst Bachydes, and such as are aduersaries vnto oure people. Wherfore, thys daye we chose the for hym, to be oure prynce: and captayne to order oure battayl. And Jonathas toke the gouernaunce vpon hym at ꝑ same tyme and ruled in steade of hys brother Judas. When Bachydes gat knowlege therof, he soughte for to sle hym. But Jonathas and Symon hys brother, perceauynge that, fledde into the wyldernes of Thecua wyth all their compayne, and pytched theyr tentes by the water pole of Halpher. D

Whych when Bachydes vnderstode, he came ouer Jordayne wyth all hys host vpon the Sabboth day. Nowe had Jonathas sent his brother Jhon (a captaine of the people) to praye his frendes the Nabuthites, that they wolde lende them theyr ordynaunce, for they had muche. So ꝑ children of Jambry came oute of Madaba, & tooke Jhon & all that he had, & went theyr waye wyth all. Then came worde vnto Jonathas and Symon hys brother, that the chyldren of Jambrye made a great marryage, and brought the bryde from Madaba wyth greate pompe: for she was daughter to one of the noblest prynces of Canaan. Wherfore they remembred the bloud of Jhō their brother, and wente vp, and hyd them selues vnder the shadowe of the mountayne.

So they lyft vp theyr eyes, and loked, and beholde, there was much ado, and greate repayre: for the brydegrome came forth, and hys frendes and hys brethrē mete them wyth tympanyes, instrumentes of musyke, & many weapons. Then Jonathas and they that were wyth hym, roose out of their lurkynge places agaynst them, and slewe many of them. As for the remnaunt, they fled into the mountaynes, and they toke al their substaunce. Thus the Marryage was turned to mourynge, and the noyse of their melodye into lamentacyon. And so when they had auenged the bloud of their brother, they turned agayne vnto Jordane. E

Bachydes hearynge thys, came vnto the very border of Jordane wyth a greate power vpō the Sabbothdaye. And Jonathas sayde to hys companye, let vs get vp, and fyght agaynst our enemyes: for it standeth not wyth vs to daye as in tymes past: Beholde, our enemyes are in our waye, the water of Jordane vpon the one syde of vs, wyth banckes, kennes and wodes of the other syde, so ꝑ there is no place for vs to departe vnto. * Wherefore crye nowe vnto heauen, that ye may be delyuered from the power of your enemyes. So they stroke the battel. And Jonathas stretched oute hys handes to smyte Bachydes, but he fled backewarde. Then Jonathas & they that were wyth hym, leapte into Jordane, and swymmed ouer Jordaue vnto hym & there were slayne of Bachydes syde that daye a. M. men. Ꝑa. r. a t. ma, iii. b.

Therfore Bachydes with hys hoste turned agayne to Jerusalem, and buylte vp the castles & and stronge holdes that were in Jewrye, Jerycho, Emaus, Bethoron, Bethell, Thamnata,

Pha-

Phara, and Topo, wyth hygh walles, with poꝛtes and wyth lockes: and set men to kepe them, that they myght vse theyꝛ malyce vpon Israel. He walled vp the cytye Bethsurath, Gazarah, and the castel, and pꝛouided them wyth men and vytayles. He toke also the chefeste mens sonnes in the countrye foꝛ pledges, and put them in the castell at Jerusalem to be kepte.

Afterwarde in the hundꝛed fyftye and thꝛe yeare in the seconde moneth, Alcymus commaũded, that the walles of the inmoste Sanctuarye shulde be destroyed, and the buyldynges of the pꝛophetts also. And whē he beganne to destroye them, the thinges that he went aboute, were hindꝛed, foꝛ he was smytten wyth a palsye, and hys mouth shut, so that he could no moꝛe speake, noꝛ commaunde any of hys house: concernynge hys busynes. Thus dyed Alcymus in greate mysery ff at ꝑ same tyme. And when Bachydes sawe that Alcymus was dead, he turned againe to ꝑ kyng and so the lande was in reste two yeares. Then all the vngodlye men helde a councell, sayinge: Behold Jonathas and hys company are at ease & dwel without care. Wherfoꝛ, let vs bꝛyng Bachides hether, & he shal take thē all in one nyght.

So they went and gaue Bachydes thys coũcel whych arose to come wyth a great hoost: and sent letters pꝛeuelye to hys adherentes, whych were in Jewꝛye, to take Jonathas and those ꝑ were with hym: but they myght not, foꝛ ꝑ other had gotten knowlege of theyꝛ deuyce. And Jonathas toke fyftye men of the couutrye (whych were the ryngleaders of them) and slewe them. Then Jonathas and Symon wyth theyꝛ company departed vnto the cytye Bethbessē whych lyeth in the wyldernes, and repayꝛed the decaye thereof, and made it stronge. When Bachydes knewe thys, he gathered al hys hoost, and sente woꝛde to them that were of Jewꝛy. Then came he and layde sege to Bethbessen, and foughte agaynst it a longe season, and made instrumētes of warre. Nowe Jonathas lefte hys bꝛother Simon in the cytye, and wente foꝛth hym selfe into the countrye, and came wyth a certayne nombꝛe and slewe Odares and hys bꝛethꝛen and the childꝛen of Phaleron in theyꝛe tentes: so ꝑ he began to be stronge, and to increase in power.

As foꝛ Symon and hys company, they went oute of the citie, and bꝛente vp the instrumentes of warre, and foughte agaynst Bachydes, and dysconfyted hym. And Bachydes was soꝛe vexed, because hys councell & trauell was in vayne. Wherfoꝛe he was wꝛoth at the wycked men (ꝑ gaue hym councell to come into theyꝛ lande) and slewe many of them. Then purposed he with hys companye to go awaye into hys owne countrye whereof when Jonathas had knowlege, he sent ambassidours vnto him, foꝛ to make peace with hym and that he shulde delyuer hym hys pꝛysoners agayne. To the whyche Bachydes consented gladly, and dyd accoꝛdyng to hys desyꝛe: yee and made an othe, that he shulde neuer do hym harme al the daies of hys life. So he restoꝛed vnto hym all the pꝛysoners that he had taken oute of the lande of Juda, and then turned and went hys waye into hys owne lande, neyther pꝛoceaded any further to come vnto the boꝛderes of Juda. Thus Israel had nomoꝛe warre. And Jonathas dwelt at Machemas, & beganne there to gouerne the people, and destroyed the vngodly men out of Israel.

IN the hundꝛed and thꝛescoꝛe yeare, A came Alexander: the sonne of noble Antiochus and tooke Ptolomays, whose cytyzyns receaued hym, and ther he raygned. When Demetrius heard therof, he gathered an exceadynge great hoost and wente foꝛthe agaynste hym to fyghte. Wherfoꝛe Demetrius sente letters vnto Jonathas, wyth louyng woꝛdes, & pꝛayse him greatly. Foꝛ he sayde: we wyll fyꝛst make peace wyth hym, befoꝛe he bynde hym selfe with Alexander agaynst vs: elles he shal remembꝛe the euel ꝑ we haue done agaynst him, his bꝛother and hys people. And so he gaue Jonathas leaue to gather an hoost to make weapons, and to be confederate wyth hym, and commaunded the pledges that were in the castell to be delyuered vnto hym. B

Then came Jonathas to Jerusalem, and red the letters in the audyence of all the people: and of them that were in the castle. And therefoꝛe were they soꝛe afrayed, because they heard that the kynge had geuen them lycence to gather an hooste. Thus were the pledges delyuered vnto Jonathas, whych restoꝛed them to theyꝛ elders Jonathas also, dwelte at Jerusalem, & beganne to buylde vp, and to repayꝛe the cytye: commaũdynge the woꝛcke men to wall it: and the mount Syon round about wyth fre stone, to be a stroꝛg holde, and so they dyd. As foꝛ the heathen that were in the castels whych Bachydes had made vp, they fled: so that euery man lefte the place, & went into hys owne countre. Onelye at Bethsura remayned certayne of the Jewes, whyche had foꝛsaken the lawe and commaundementes of God, foꝛ Bethsura was theyꝛ refuge.

Nowe when kynge Alexander heard of the pꝛomyses that Demetrius hadde made vnto Jonathas, and when it was tolde hym of the battayles and noble actes, whyche he and hys bꝛethꝛen had done, and of the great trauailes ꝑ they had taken, he sayde: where shall we fynde such a man? Well we wyll make hym oure frende, and be confederate wyth hym. Upon thys he wꝛote a letter vnto hym: wyth these woꝛdes: Kyng Alexander saluteth hys bꝛother Jonathas. We haue heard of the, that thou art a valeaunt mā and mete to be our frend: wherfoꝛe thys day we oꝛdayne the to be our hygh Pꝛeast of thy people and to be called the kynges frend. (Upon thys he sent hym a purple clothyng, and a crowne of of golde) ꝑ thou mayest consider what is foꝛ our pꝛofyt, and kepe frēdshyp towarde vs. C

thre score yeare vpon the solempne feaste day of of the tabernacles. Jonathas put the holy rayement vpon hym. Then gathered he an hoost and made many weapons. Whych when Demetrynus hearde, he was maruelous sorye, and sayde: Alas, what haue we done, that Alexander hath preuented vs in gettynge the frendeshyppe of ꝑ Jewes for hys owne defence?

Yet wyll I wryte louyngely vnto them also yee, and promyse them dygnyties and rewardes ꝑ they maye be of my syde. Wherupon he wrote vnto them these wordes. Kynge Demetrynus sẽdeth gretynge vnto the people of the Jewes. Where as ye haue kepte your couenaũt toward vs, and contynued in oure frendeshyp, not enclynynge to oure enemyes, we were glad, when we hearde therof. Wherfore remayne styll, and be faythfull to vs: & we shal wel recompẽce you for ꝑ thynges ꝑ ye haue done on our party: we shall release you of many charges, & geue you rewardes. And nowe I dyscharge you & all the Jewes frome trybutes: I forgeue you the customes of salt, and release you of the crowne taxes, of the D thyrd part of the sede, & halfe of the frute of trees whyche is myne owne dutye. These I leaue for you frõ thys daye forth: so that they shall not be taken of the lande of Juda, nor of the thre cyties whych are added therunto out of Samarya and Galyle from thys daye forthe for euermore. Jerusalem also wyth all thynges belongynge ther to, shalbe holy and fre: yee the tythes and trybutes shall pertayne vnto you. As for the power of the castell whyche is at Jerusalem, I rempt and geue it vnto the preast that he maye set in it such men, as he shall chose to kepe it. I frelye delyuer all the Jewes that are pryseners thorowoute al my realme, so that euery one of them shalbe free from paying any tribute, yee, euen of theyr cattel

All the solempne feastes, Sabothes, new mones, the dayes appoynted, the thre dayes before and after the feast, shalbe free for al the Jewes in my realme, so that in them no man shal haue power to do anye thynge, or to moue any busynes agaynst anye of them in anye maner of cause.
There shal thyrty thousande also of the Jewes be wrytten vp in the kinges hoste, and haue their wages payed as all other menne of warre of the kynges shuld haue, and of them shalbe ordeyned certayne to kepe the kynges stronge holdes: yee and some of them shalbe set ouer the kynges busynesse, that they may faythfullye deale wyth ꝑ same. The Jewes also shal haue princes of their owne, and walke in theyr owne lawes as ꝑ king hath commaunded in the lande of Juda.

And the thre cytyes that are fallen vnto Jewry frõ the countre of Samarya and Galile: shall be taken as Jewrye, and be vnder one: nether be subiecte to anye straunge Lorde, but to the hye preast. As for Ptolomays and the lande pertaynynge therto, I gyue it vnto the Sanctuary at E Jerusalem, for the necessarye expences of the holy thynges. Moreouer, I wyll geue euerye yeare fyftene thousande sycles of syluer out of the kynges checker (whych partayneth vnto me) to the worcke of the temple: yee, and loke what remayneth (whyche they that had our matters in hand in tyme paste haue not payed,) the same shall they geue vnto them also. And besydes all thys, the fyue thousande sycles whych they toke yearly of the rentes of the Sanctuary, shall belonge vnto the preastes that do serupce.

Item whosoeuer they be, that fle vnto ꝑ temple at Jerusalem or wythin the lybertyes therof where as they are fallen into the kynges daunger for anye maner of busynes, they shalbe pardoned, and all the goodes that they haue in mye realme, shalbe fre. For the buyldynge also and repayrynge of the worcke of the Sanctuarye, expenses shalbe geuen oute of the kynges Checker: Yee, and for the makynge of the walles rounde aboute Jerusalem, for the breakynge downe of the olde, and for ꝑ settyng vp of the stronge holdes in Jewrye, shall the costes and charges, be geuen oute of the kynges Checker.

*But when Jonathas and the people hearde these wordes, they gaue no credence vnto them, neyther receaued them, for they remembred the greate wyckednesse that he had doone vnto Israell, and howe sore he had vexed them. Wherefore, they agreed vnto Alexander, for he was a Prynce that had dealte frendly wyth them and so they stoode by hym alwaye. *Then gathered Kyng Alexander a great hoost, and brought his army agaynst Demetrynus. So the two kynges stroke battayle together, but Demetrynus hoste fled, and Alexander folowed after, and fell vpon them. Amyghtye sore felde was it, contynuing tyll the Sunne wente downe, and Demetrynus was slayne the same daye. 1.mac.bꝯ.d

Ptolomy the kynge of Egypte wyth these wordes, sayinge: Forsomuch as I am come agayne to my Realme, and am sette in the throne of my progenytoures, and haue gotten the dompynon ouercommed Demetrynus, conquered the lande, and strycken felde wyth hym, so that we haue discomfyted both hym and hys hoost, and syt in the throne of hys kyngedome: Lette vs nowe make frendeshyppe together, geue me thy daughter to wyfe: so shall I be thy sonne in lawe, & bothe geue the rewardes, and her greate dygnytye.
Ptolompe the kynge gaue aunswere, sayinge: Happye be the daye wherein thou arte come agayne, vnto the lande of thy progenytours, and sette in the throne of theyr kyngdome. As nowe wyll I fulfyl thy wrytyng: but mete me at Ptolomays, that we maye se one another, and that I maye marry my daughter vnto the, according to thy desyre. So Ptolomy went out of Egypt wyth hys daughter Cleopatra, and came vnto Ptolomays in the. Clxii. yeare: where kynge Alexander mette hym, and he gaue Alexander his daughter Cleopatra, and maryed them at Ptolomays with great worshyppe, lyke as the maneris of kynges to be. Then wrot kyng Alexan G der vnto Jonathas, that he shulde come & mete hym. So he wente honorably vnto Ptolomays and there he mette the two kynges, and gaue them greate presentes of golde and syluer, and founde fauoure in theyr syghte.

And the

And there came together agaynst Jonathas certayne wycked men & vngracious persons of Israel, makyng complaintes of hym, but ỹ kynge regarded them not. As for Jonathas, the kynge commaunded to take of hys garmentes: and to clothe hym in purple: and so they dyd. Then the kynge appoynted hym to syt by hym, and sayde vnto hys Peynces: Go wyth hym into the myddest of the cytye, and make a proclamacion, that no man cõplayne agaynst him in any matter, & that noman trouble hym for any maner of cause

So it happened: that when his accusers sawe the worshype whyche was proclaymed of hym, and that he was clothed in purple, they fled euerychone. And the kynge made muche of hym, wrote him among his cheke frendes, made hym
Joseph. ca. vi. lib. xiii. antiqu, a Duke, and partaker of his dominion.* Thus Jonathas went agayne to Jerusalẽ wyth peace and gladnes. In the hundred. lxv. yere came Demetrypus, ỹ sonne of Demetrypus, from Creta into hys fathers lande: whereof when Alexander heard tell, he was ryghte sorye, and returned vn
1. mac. xii. a to Antioch. And Demetrius chose *Appolonyus, (whych had the gouernaunce of Celosyrya) to be hys captayne.

So he gathered a greate hoost, and came vn to Jamnia, and sent worde vnto Jonathas, the hye Prest, saying: Darest thou wythstande vs, thy selfe alone? As for me, I am but laughed to scorne and shamed, because thou prouedest thy strength agaynst vs in the mountaynes. Nowe therfore, yf thou trustest in thyne owne strength come downe to vs in the playne felde, and there let vs proue our strength together: thou shalte fynde, that I haue valeaunt men of warre wyth me, and shalt knowe whom I am, and the other that stande by me.

Whyche saye: that your foote is not able to stande before our face, for thy fathers haue bene
H twyse chased into theyr owne lande. And nowe, howe wylte thou be able to abyde soo greate an hoost of horsmen and fotemen, in the felde where as is neyther rocke, stone, nor place to fle vnto?

When Jonathas heard the wordes of Appoilonius, he was moued in hys mynde: wherefore he chose ten thousand men, and went out of Jerusalem, and Symõ hys brother met hym for to helpe hym. And they pytched theyr tentes at Joppa, but the cytye kept hym forth, for Joppa was an holde of Appollonius: Then Jonathas layde seege to it, and they that were in the cyty: for very feare let hym in, and so Jonathas wãne Joppa. Appolonius hearynge of thys, toke. iii. thousande horsemen, wyth a great hoost of fote and went as though he wold go to Azotus, and came immedyatly into the playne felde: because he had so many horsemen, and put hys truste in thẽ. So Jonathas folowed vpon him to Azotus and there they stroke the battayl. Nowe had Appollonius lefte a thousande horsemen: behynde them preuely in the tentes. And when Jonathas knewe that such wayte was layde behynd them they went rounde aboute the enemyes hoost, and shotte dartes at the people from the mountayng to the euenynge. As for Jonathas people, they kepte theyr order as he had commaunded them, and the enemyes horses were euer labourynge.

Then broughte Symon forth his hoost, and set them agaynst the foote men. For the horsemẽ were wery alredy. So he discomfyted them, and they fled. And they that were scatered in the feld gat them to Azotus, and came into the temple of Dagon theyr Idol, that they myghte there saue theyr lyues. But Jonathas set fyre vpon Azot⁹ and al the cytyes round about it, and toke theyr goodes and *brente vp the temple of Dagon, wt

Thus were slayne and brent wel nye. viii. M men. So Jonathas remoued ỹ hoost from thence and brought them to Ascolon: where the men of the cytye came forth, and met hym wyth greate worshyppe. After thys went Jonathas and his hooste agayne to Jerusalem, wyth greate substaunce of good. And when kynge Alexander heard these thynges, he thoughte to do Jonathas moare worshyppe and sente hym a colar of golde, as the vse is to begeuen vnto such as are of the kynges next bloude. He gaue hym also the cytye of Accaron (wyth the landes belongyng thereto) in possessyon:

But the kynge sayd not a word thereto. And Jonathas mette the kynge wyth great honour at Joppa, where they saluted one another, and toke theyr reste. So when Jonathas had gone wyth the kynge vnto the water that was called Eleutherus he turned agayne to Jerusalem.

Nowe Ptolompe had gotten the dominyon of the cytyes vnto Selucya vpõ ỹ see coast ymagynynge wycked conncels agaynste Alexander and sente Ambassadours vnto Demetrypus, sayinge: Come let vs make a bonde betwyxte vs, so shall I gyue the my doughter that Alexãder

Thus he toke hys doughter from hym, gaue her vnto Demetrius, and forsoke Alexander, so that hys malyce was openly knowen. And Pto lomy came to Antyoch, where he set two crow= nes vpon hys owne heade: the crowne of Egypt and of Asia. In the meane season was kynge A lexander in Cycila, for they that dwelte in those places, had rebelled agaynst hym. But when A= lexander hearde of thys, he came to warre agay inste hym. So kynge Ptolomy brought forthe hys hoost and met hym wyth a myghtye power and chased hym awaye. Then fled Alexander in to Araby: there to be defended, and kynge Pto= lomayes honoure encreased. After thys when Demetrius the kyng sawe that hys lande was in rest, and that no resystaū ce was made hym: he sente awaye all hys hooste euerye man to hys owe place, excepte an armye of straungers, whome he brought frome the I les of the Heathen, wherfore all hys fathers host hadde euell wyl at hym. *Nowe was there one 1.mac.xii.c.
Tryphon (that hadde bene of Alexanders parte afore) whyche when he sawe that all the hooste murmured agaynst Demetrius he wente to E= malcuel the Arabian (ꝑ brought vp Antiochus the sonne of Alexander) and laye sore vpon hym to delyuer hym thys ponge Antyochus that he myghte raygne in hys fathers steade. He tolde hym also what greate euell Demetrius had do ne, and howe hys men of warre loued hym not and so remayned there a longe season.

And Jonathas sent vnto kynge Demetrius to desyre them oute whyche were in the Castell at Jerusalem, & in the other refugyes, for they dyd Israell greate harme. So Demetrius sent worde vnto Jonathas, sayinge: I wyl not only do these thynges for the and thy people, but at ty me conuenyente I wyll do both the and thy peo= ple greate worshyppe. But nowe thou shalt do me a pleasure, yf thou wylt sende me men to hel= pe me, for all myne armye is goone fro me. So Jonathas sent hym .iii. After thys came Tryphon agayne wyth yonge Antiochus: whych raygned and was crowned kynge. Then there gathered vnto hym all the men of warre: whome Demetrius had put awaye, these foughte agaynst Demetrius, whych fled and turned hys backe. So Tryphon toke the Elephantes, & wanne Antioch And yonge Antyochus wrote vnto Jonathas, sayinge. I confyrme the in thy Preastehode, and make the ruler ouer foure countryes, that thou mayest be a frende of the kynges.

Upon thys he sent hym golden vesselles to be serued in: and gaue hym leaue to dryncke in golde, to be clothed in purple, and to weare a colar of golde. He made hys brother Symon also captayne, from the coastes of Tyrus vnto the borders of Egypte. Then Jonathas toke hys iourney, and wente thorowe the cytyes beyonde the water of Jordane, and all the men of warre of Syria gathered them vnto him for to helpe him So he came vnto Ascalon, and they of the cytye receaued hym honourably, and from thence wēt he vnto Gaza, but they wolde not lette hym in, wherfore he layde sege vnto it, burnyng vp and spoylynge the places that were aboute the cytye

And the cytizins of Gaza submytted them selues vnto Jonathas, whyche made peace wyth them, but toke of their sonnes to pledge, sent thē to Jerusalem, and went thorowe the countre vnto Damascus. Nowe when Jonathas hearde that Demetrius prynces were come into Cades (whych is in Galyle) wyth a greate hoost, purposynge to put Demetrius out from medlynge in the realme, he came agaynste them, and lefte Symon hys brother in the lande whyche came to Bethsura, and layd seege to it a longe season and dysconfyted them. So they desyred to haue peace wyth hym, whyche he graunted them, and afterwarde put them oute frome thence, tooke the cytye and set men to kepe it. And Jonathas wyth hys hoost came to the water of Genesar, and betymes in the morynge gatte them to the playne felde of Azor.

And beholde, the hoostes of the Heathen met them in the felde, and layde watche for them in the mountaynes: so that when Jonathas came agaynst them, the other (whyche were layed to watch) rose oute of their places and fought, and they that were of Jonathas syde fled, euery mā and there was not one of them lefte excepte Mathathyas the sonne of Absolomus and Judas ỹ sonne of Calphy the captayne of the hoost.

Thē Jonathas rent hys clothes layde earthe vpon hys heade, made hys prayer & turned agayne vnto thē in the felde: where they foughte together and he put them to flyghte. Nowe when his owne men: that were fled sawe this: they turned agayne vnto hym and helped hym to folowe vpon all theyr enemyes vnto theyr tentes at Cades. So there were slayne of the Heathen the same daye, iii. M. men: & Jonathas turned agayne to Jerusalem. ¶ The. xii. Chapter ¶ Jonathas sendeth Ambassadours to Rome and to the people of Sparta to renue theyr couenaunt of fredshypp Jonathas putteth to flyght the prynces of Demetrius. Tryphon taketh Jonathas by dysceate.

Jonathas seynge that the tyme was mete for hym, chose cetayne men and sent thē vnto Rome for to stablysche 1.mac.vi.a and to renue * the frendshyppe wythe them. He sēt letters also vnto Sparta and to other places in lyke maner. So they went vnto Rome, and entred into the councel, & sayde: Jonathas the hye preast and the people of the Jewes sente vs vnto you: for to renue ỹ olde frendeshyppe and bonde of loue: Upon thys the Romaynes gaue them fre pasporte, that men shulde leade them home into the lande of Juda peacyablye. And thys is the coppye of the letters that Jonathas wrote vnto the Spartians.

Jonathas the hye preast wyth the elders, prestes, & the other people of the Jewes, sende greatynge vnto the Spartyās their brethren. There were letters sente longe agoo vnto Onias the hye preaste, from Aryus: whyche than raygned amonge you: that ye are our brethren, as the wrytynge made thereupon specyfyeth. And Onias entreated the ambassadoure that was sent honourablye, and receaued the letters: wherein there was mencyon made of the bonde of loue & frendshyppe: But as for vs, we nede no suche wrytynges: for why? we haue the holye bookes of scrypture in oure handes to oure comfort. Ne B uertheless we had rather sente vnto you, for the renuynge of the brotherhod & frendshyppe: Lest we shulde be straunge vnto you, for it is longe synce the time that ye sent worde vnto vs. Wherfore: in the sacrifyces that we offer and other ceremonyes vpon the hye solempne dayes and other we alwaye remember you wythoute ceasyng (lyke as reason is, and as it becommeth vs to thynche vpon oure brethren) yea, & are ryght glad of youre prosperous honour.

And though we haue had great troubles and warres, so ỹ the kynges about vs haue foughten agaynst vs: yet wolde we not be greuous vnto you, nor to other of oure louers and frendes in these warres. For we haue had helpe from heuen, so ỹ we are delyuered, and our enemyes subdued. Wherfore we chose Numenius the sonne of Antyochus, & Antypater the sonne of Jason, & sente them vnto the Romans, for to renue the olde bonde of frendshyp & loue wt them. We commaunded them also to come vnto you, to salute you, & to delyuer you our letters, concernyng the renouacion of our brotherhod. And now ye shall C do ryght well to geue vs an answer thereunto.

And thys is the coppye of the wrytyng, which Aryus the kynge of Sparta sente vnto Onias Arius kyng of the Spartians sendeth gretinge vnto Onyas the hyghe Preaste. It is founde in wrytynge, that the Spartyans and Jewes are brethren, and come out of the generacyon of Abraham And now for so much as thy sis come to oure knowlege, ye shall do well, to wrote vnto vs of youre prosperyte. As for vs, we haue written oure mynde vnto you. Oure catell and goodes are youres and yours ours. These thynges haue we commaunded to be shewed vnto you.

When Jonathas harde ꝑ Demetrius prynces were come forth to fyght agaynst hym with a greater hoost then afore, he went from Jerusalem: & mete them in the lande of Hemathe, for he gaue them not space to come into hys owne cõtry. And he sente spyes vnto theyr tentes, whych came agayne and tolde hym, that they were appoynted to come vpon hym in the nyghte season Wherefore when the Sunne was gone downe, Jonathas commaunded hys men to watche all the nyghte, and to be readye wyth weapons for to fyghte: and set watche men rounde aboute the hooste, But when the adversaryes harde that Jonathas was readye wyth hys men to the battel: they feared, and were afrayed in theyr hertes and kyndled fyres in theyr tentes, brake vp, and gat them awaye. Neuertheless, Jonathas & his company knewe it not tyll the morning, for they sawe the fyres burnynge.

D Then Jonathas folowed vpon them, but he myghte not ouertake them, for they were goone ouer the water Eleutherus'. So Jonathas departed into the Arabyans (whyche were called Zabadei) slewe them and tooke theyr goodes. He proceaded further also, and came vnto Damascus, & wente thorowe all the countre. But Symon hys brother tooke hys iourney and came to Ascalon and to the nexte stronge holdes, departynge vnto Joppa, and wanne it. For he harde ꝑ they wolde stande of Demetrius parte, wherfore he sette men of warre in the cytye to kepe it After thys came Jonathas home agayne, and called the elders of the people together, and deuised wyth them for to buylde vp the stronge holdes in Jewrye, and the walles of Jerusalem, to set vp an hye wall betwyxte the castell and the cytye, for to seperate it frome the Cytye, that it myghte be alone and that men shuld neyther by nor sell in it. E Upon thys they came together for to buylde vp the cytye, and for so muche as the wall vpon the broke of the west syde (called Caphetah) was fallen downe, they repayred it: And Symon set vp Adiadah in Sephelah, and made it stronge settynge ꝑtes and lockes vpõ it. Nowe whē * Triphon purposed to raygne in Asia, to be crowned, and to slaye the kynge Antyochus: he was afrayed that Jonathas wolde not suffre hym: but fyghte agaynst hym: Where fore he wente aboute to take Jonathas & to kyll hym. So he departed, and came vnto Bethsan. Then wente Jonathas forth agaynste hym to ꝑ battell wyth .xl. M. chosen men, and came vnto Bethsan also. But when Tryphon sawe that Jonathas came wyth so greate an hooste to destroye hym, he was afrayed, and therfore he receaued hym honourablye, commended hym vnto all hys frendes, and gaue hym rewardes and cõmaunded hys men of warre to be as obedyente vnto hym as to hym selfe.

1.mach.xi.c Joseph.ca, xii,li.xiii.

And sayd vnto Jonathas, why hast thou caused thys people to take such trauayle, seing ther is no warre betwyxte vs: Therfore sende them home agayne, and chose certayne men to wayte vpon the, and come thou with me to Ptolomais for I wyll geue it the, wt the other stronge holdes men of warre & theyr offycers: As for me I must departe, thys is onely the cause of my comming Jonathas beleued hym, and dyd as he sayd, put tynge awaye hys hooste, whyche went into the lande of Juda. He kepte but thre thousande by hym, wherof he sent two thousande into Galyle and one thousande went wyth hym selfe.

Nowe assone as Jonathas entred into Ptolomays, the cytyzyns spared the gates of the cytye, and toke hym, and slewe all them wyth the swearde, that came wyth hym. Then sente Tryphon an hoost of fote men and horsemen into Galyle and into the great playne, to destroye Jonathas company. But when they knewe that Jonathas was taken: and al they slayne that wayted vpon hym, they toke councell together, and came forth ready to the battell. So when they whych folowed vpon them, sawe that it was a matter of lyfe, they turned back agayne. As for the other they went into the land of Juda peceably, and bewayled Jonathas, and them ꝑ were wyth hym rycht sore. And Israel made greate lamentacion. Then all ꝑ heathen ꝑ were round aboute them sought to destroye them. For they sayde: nowe haue they no captayne, nor any mã to helpe them. Therfore, let vs ouercome them, and roote oute theyr name from amonge men.

NOwe when Symon harde that Tryphon gathered a greate hoost to come into the land of Juda, and to destroye it, and sawe that the people was in greate fearfulnesse & care: He cam vp to Jerusalem, & gathered the people together, and gaue them exhortacyon, sayinge: Ye knowe what great battayles I and my brethren and my fathers house haue foughte for the lawe and the Sanctuarye, and what maner of troubles we haue sene: thorowe occasyon wherof, * al my brethren are slayne for Israels sake, and I am lefte aloone. And nowe let me not spare myne owne lyfe in anye maner of trouble, for I am not better then my brethren, but wyll auenge my people and the Sanctuarye, oure children and oure wyues: for al the heathen are gathered together to destroy vs of verye malyce. 1.mac.xi.c xv.d.xvi.b.

At these wordes the hertes of the people were kyndled together, so that they cryed wyth a loude voyce sayinge: Thou shalte be our captayne in stead of Judas, and Jonathas thy brethren, ordre

ozdze thou our battayle, and whatsoeuer thou commaundest vs, we shall do it. So he gathered all the men of warre, makyng hast to finish all the walles of Jerusalem, whyche he made stronge round aboute. Then sent he Jonathas the sonne of Absalomes wyth a fresh hoost vnto Joppa, whych dzoue them oute that were in the castell, and remayned there hymselfe. Tryphō also remoued frō Ptolomais wyth a great armye, to come into the land of Juda, and Jonathas wyth hym in warde. And Symon pytched his tentes at Addus befoze the playne feld

But when Tryphon knewe that Symon stode vp in steade of his bzother Jonathas, and that he wolde warre agaynste hym, he sent messengers vnto hym sayenge: Where as we haue kept Jonothas thy bzother, it is foz mony that he is owinge in the kinges accoūpt concerning the busynes that he had in hande. Wherfoze, sē de nowe an hundzed talentes of syluer, and his two sonnes foz suretye, that when he is letten fozth, he shall not fozsake vs, and we shal sende hym agayne. Neuertheless, Symon knewe, ỹ he dessembled in hys wozdes, yet commaunded he the monye and chyldzen to be delyuered vnto hym, lest he shuld be the greater enemy agaynst the people of Israel, and say: because he sēt him not the mony and the chyldzen, therefoze is Jonathas dead.

So Symon sent hym the chyldzen and an hundzed talentes, but he dyssembled, and wold not let Jonathas go Afterward came Tryphō into the lande to destroye it, and wente rounde aboute by the waye, that leadeth vnto Adoz. But whersoeuer they went, thether went Simon and hys hoost also. Nowe they that were in the castell, sente messengers vnto Tryphon, that he shuld make hast to come by the wylder nes, and to sende them vytayles. And Tryphō made ready all hys hozsemen to come the same nyght. Neuertheless it was a very great snow so that he came not in Gaaladithī And whē he dzewe nye Baschama, he slewe Jonathas and hys sonnes ther, and then turned foz to go home into hys owne land.

Then sente Symon to fet hys bzothers dead coarse, and buried it in Modin his fathers cytye. So al Israel bewayled hym with great lamentacyon, and mourned foz hym very long And Symon made vpon the sepulchze of his father and hys bzethzen, a buyldynge hye to loke vnto, of fre stone behynd and befoze, and set vp seuen pyllers, one agaynst another (foz hys father, hys mother, & foure bzeathzen) & set great pyllers round aboute wyth armes vpon them foz a perpetual memozye, and carued shyppes besyde the armes that they myght be sene of mē saylyng in the see. Thys sepulchze whyche he made at Modin: standeth yet vnto thys daye.

D Joseph, ca. 5. libr. xiii. *Now as Tryphon went fozth to walke wyth the ponge kynge Antiochus, he slew him trayterously, and raygned in his steade, crowned hymselfe kynge of Asa, and dyd much euel in the lande. Symon also buylte vp the castels in Jewzye makyng them stronge wyth hye to wzes, greate walles, & poztes, & lockes, and layed vp vytayles in the stronge holdes. And Symon chose certayne men, and sent them to king Demetrius, to desyze hym, that he wolde discharge the lande from all bondage, foz Tryphō had spoyled it very soze. Whereupon Demetrius the kynge answered hym, & wzote vnto him after thys maner.

Demetrius the kyng sendeth gretynge vnto Symon the hye pzeaste hys frende, wyth the elders and people of the Jewes The goldē crowne and pzecyous stone that ye sente vnto vs, haue we receaued, and are ready to make a sted fast peace wyth you: yee, and to wzyt vnto our offycers, foz to relase you, concernyng the thynges where in we myde you fre, and the appointmēt ỹ we make with you, shalbe fyrme and stable. The strong holdes whych ye haue buylded shalbe youre owne. As foz any ouersyght oz faute commytted vnto thys day, we fozgeue it and ỹ crowne taxe that ye ought vs also. And where as was any other trybute in Jerusalem, it shalbe nowe no trybute: & loke who are mete among you to be in our court, let them be wzytten vp, that there maye be peace betwyxte vs.

Thus the yocke of the Heathen was takē E from Israell in the hundzethe and seuententhe yeare. And the people of the Jewes beganne to wzyte in theyz letters and actes on this maner

In those dayes went Symon vnto Gaza and beseeged it round aboute, where he set vp ordinaunce of warre. And wan a towze, which he toke So they gat into the towze, leapt into the city, which was in a great feare: In so much that the people of the cytye rente theyz clothes and clymed vp vpon the walles wyth theyz wiues, and chyldzen, beseechynge Symon to be at one with them, sayinge:

O reward vs not after oure wyckednesse but be gracious vnto vs, and we shal do the seruyce. Then Symon foz verye pyty wold fyght nomoze agaynst them, but put them oute of the cyty, and caused the houses (where in the ymages were) to be clensed, and so entred the cytye with Psalmes of pzayse, geuyng thankes vnto the Lozd. So when he had cast al abhominacions oute of the cytye, he set suche men in it as kept the law of God and made the citie strōg & buylded a dwellyng place foz hym selfe.

Now, when they in the castell at Jerusalē were kepte so straytelye, that they could not come fozth into the countrye, and myght neyther by noz sell, they were verye hungry, and many of thē famyshed to death, In so much that they besought Simō to be at one wyth them, which he graunted them. So he put them oute from thence, and clensed the castell from fylthynesse. And vpon the thze and twentye daye of the seconde moneth in the. Clxxi. yeare they entred into it with thankesgeuynge and bzaunches of Palme trees, wyth Harpes, Croudes, Symbales, and lutes. syngynge Psalmes and songes of pzayse vnto God: foz that the great enemye of

And Symon ordayned that the same day shulde be kept euery yeare in gladnesse, and made stronge the hyll of the temple that was besyde the castell, where he dwelte hymselfe wyth hys company. Symon also perceauyng that Jhon hys sonne was a myghty man of armes made hym captayne of all the hoostes and caused hym to dwell at Gaza.

The.xiiii.Chapter.

Demetrius is ouercome of Arsaces. Simon beyng captayne, there is greate quyetenes in Israel: The couenaunt of frendelhyppe wyth the Romãs, and wyth the people of Sparta is renewed.

A IN the.Clxxii.yeare gathered king Demetrius his hoost, and departed vnto Media to get him helpe for to fight againste Triphon. Nowe when Arsaces the king of Persia & Media heard, that Demetrius was entred wt in hys borders he sente one of hys prynces, to take hym alyue: & to bryng hym vnto hym. So he wente and slew Demetrius hoost, toke hym selfe, brought hym to Arsaces whych kept him in warde. And al the lande of Juda was in reste so longe as Simõ lyued, for he sought ỹ welth of hys people, therfore, were they glad to haue him for their ruler, & to do him worship alway

B Symon wanne the cyty of Joppa also for an hauen towne and made it an entraunce into the Iles of the see. He enlarged the borders of hys people, and conquered them more land. He gathered vp many of theyr people ỹ were prysoners: he had the dompniõ of Gaza. Bethsura and the castel, whych he clensed from fylthynes and there was no man that resysted hym, So ỹ euery man tylled hys grounde in peace, the lãd of Juda, and the trees gaue theyr frute and encreace. The elders sat all in Judgement & toke theyr deuyce for the wealth of the lande the yõg men put on worshyp & harnesse vpon them. He prouyded vytayles for the cyties, & made goodly stronge holdes of them, so ỹ the fame of hys worshyppe was spoken of vnto the ende of the worlde.* For he made peace thorowe oute the

Euerye man sat vnder hys vyne and fygge tres, and there was noman to fray them away There was none in the land to fyght agaynste them, for then the kynges were ouercome. He helped those ỹ were in aduersite among hys people, he was dyligent to se the lawe kepte, as for such as were vngodly and wicked he toke thẽ awaye. He set vp the Sanctuarye, and encreased the holye vessels of the Temple.

When the Romans & the Spertyans had gotten word, ỹ Jonathas was dead they were ryghte sorye, But when they harde ỹ Symon hys brother was made hye preaste in his steade & howe he had wonne the lande agayne wyth ỹ cyties in it, they wrote vnto hym in tables of brasse, to renue the frendeshyp, & bonde of loue,

And thys is the copy of the letters that the Spartyans sente. The Senators & cytezins of Sparta sende gretyng vnto Symon the great preaste, wyth the elders, Preastes, & the other people of the Jewes theyr brethrẽ Whan your ambassydours that were sente vnto our people certifyed vs of youre worshyppe, honour & prosperous welth, we were glad of theyr cõminge & haue wrytten the errande whych they spake before the coũsail of ỹ people, namly ỹ Numenius the sonne of Antiochus & Antipater the sõne of Jasõ the Jewes ambassidours are come vnto vs, for to renue the olde frendeshyppe wyth vs. Upon thys the people consented, ỹ the men shulde be honorably intreated, & that the copy of theyr errand shulde be wrytten in the speciall bokes of the people, for a perpetuall memorye D vnto ỹ Spartyans. yee, & that we shulde sende a copy of the same vnto Symõ the great preast After thys dyd Symõ sende Numenius vnto Rome, wyth a golden shylde of a thousand pounde weyght, to confyrme the frendshyp wyth them which when the Romãs vnderstode, they sayde: what thankes shall we recompẽce agayne vnto Symon & hys chyldren? For he hathe stablyshed hys brethren, ouercome the enemyes of Israel. Wherfore they graunted hym to be free. And al thys wrote the Jewes in tables of brasse, & nailed it vnto ỹ pillers vpõ ỹ moũt Syon. The coppe of the wrytynge is thys.

yeare of Symon the hye preaste, in the greate congregacyõ of the preastes, rulers of the people & elders of the country at Asaram, were these wordes openly declared.

For so muche as there was much warre in E oure lande, therefore Symon the sonne of Mathias (come of the chyldren of Jareb) and his brethren put themselues in parel, & resysted the enemyes of theyr people: ỹ theyr Sanctuary & law myght be mayntayned, & dyd theyr people greate worshyppe: Jonathas in lyke maner after ỹ he had gouerned his people & bene theyr hye preaste: dyed & lyeth buryed besyde hys elders.

After ỹ wolde theyr enemyes haue troden theyr holy thinges vnder foote, destroyed their land, & vtterly wasted theyr Sanctuary. Thẽ Simon withstoode them, & fought for hys people, spent much of his owne monye, weapened the valeaunt men of hys people, gaue them wages, made strong the cities of Juda, with Bethsura ỹ lyeth vpon the borders of Jewry (where the ordynaũce of theyr enemies laye som time) and set the Jewes there for to kepe it.

He made fast Joppa also, which lyeth vpon ỹ F see, & Gaza ỹ bordreth vpõ Azotus, (wher the enemies dwelt afore) & there he set Jewes toke peti: & whatsoeuer was mete for the subduing of the aduersaryes, ỹ layd he therin, Now whẽ the people sawe the noble actes of Simon, and what worshippe he was purposed to do for thẽ hys godly behauoure, & faythfulnesse which he kept vnto them, & howe he sought by alwayes the welth of hys people, because he dyd all thys therfore they chose hym to be theyr prince, & hy preaste preaste. And in his tyme they prospered well by hym, so that ỹ Heathen were take oute of theyr land: & they also whych were in the cytye of Dauid at Jerusalem in the castel (where they went out and defyled all thynges that were aboute ỹ Sanctuarye, and dyd greate harme vnto clenlynesse) and Symon put men of the Jewes in it, for the defence of the lande and cytye, and set vp the walles of Jerusalem.

¶ And kynge Demetrius confyrmed hym in hys hye preasthode, made hym his frende, & dyd hym great worshyp. For he harde that the Romans called the Jewes theyr frendes, louers & bretheren, howe honorablye they receaued Symons ambassadours: howe the Jewes and preastes consented that he shuld be theyr prynce and hye preaste perpetually (tyll God rayled vp the true prophet) & that he shulde be theyr captayne to care for the Sanctuarye, & to set officers vpon the workes therof, ouer the lande, ouer the weapons, ouer the houses of defence, to make prouysyon for the holy thynges, & to be obeyed of euery man, & all the wrytynges of the lande to be made in hys name: that he shuld be clothed in purple & golde, & that it shulde be lawfull for none of the people nor preastes to breake any of these thynges, to withstande hys wordes, nor to call any congregacyon in the lande without hym, that he shulde be clothed in purple, and weare a colar of golde. And yf there were anye whyche disobeyed or brake thys ordynaunce that he shulde be punysshed.

So al the people consented to alow Simō and to do accordinge vnto these wordes: Symon also hym selfe toke vpon hym, and was cōtente to be the hye Preaste, the Captayne, and Prynce of the Jewes and preastes, & to gouerne them all. And they commaunded to make thys wrytyng in tables of brasse, and faste it to the compasse of the Sanctuarye in an open place, & laye vp a copy of the same in the tresurye, that Symon and hys posterye myghte haue it.

The.xv Chapter.

¶ Antiochus maketh a couenaunt of frendshyp w Simon & Triphō is persecuted The Romās wryt letters vnto kinges & nacyōs in the defence of the Jewes. Antyochus refusynge the helpe that Simon sent hym, breaketh his couenaunt.

A ¶ Moreouer kynge Antyochous the sonne of Demetrius sente letters from the Iles of the see, vnto Symon the hye preaste and prynce of the Jewes and to all the people, contaynyng these wordes Antyochus the kinge sendeth greatyng vnto Simon the hye preast, and to the people of the Jewes. For so muche, as certayne wycked men haue gotten the kyngdome of our progenitours I am purposed to chalenge the realme agayne, and to restore it to the olde estate.

Wherefore I haue gathered a greate hooste and made shyppes of warre, that I may go thorowe the country, & be auenged of them which haue destroyed ourlande, and wasted manye cytyes in my realme. And therfore, nowe I make the free also from all the trubutes, whereof all kynges my progenytours haue discharged the: and from other customes (wher from they haue released the) whatsoeuer they be: yee, I geue the leaue to smyte mony of thyne owne wythin thy lande. As for Jerusalem, I wyll that it be holy and free: and all the weapons and houses of defence, whych thou haste buylded, and kepeste in thyne handes, shalbe thyne. Where as any thinge is or shalbe owynge vnto the kynge, I for geue it the, from thys tyme forth for euermore. And when we haue obtayned oure kyngdome we shal do the, thy people, and the temple great worshyp: so that your honour shalbe knowē throw out the whole world.

B In the .CLxxiiii. yeare went Antyochus into hys fathers lande, and al the men of warre came together vnto hym, so that fewe were left with Triphō. So the kyng Antyochus folowed vpon hym, but he fled vnto Dora, which lyeth by the see syde: for he sawe that ther was myschefe commynge vnto hym, and that hys hoolke had forsaken him. Then came Antiochus vnto Dora wyth an. C. & twentye thousande men of armes vponfoote, & eyght thousande horse men. So he compassed the cytye rounde about, and the shippes came by the see, ¶ Thus they vexed the cytye by land and by water, in so much that they suffred noman to go in or oute.

C In the meane season came *Numenius (and they that had bene with hym) from the cytye of Rome, hauynge letters wrytten vnto the kynges and prouynces, wherein were contayned these wordes: Lucius the Mayre of Rome sendeth greatynge vnto Ptolomy the kynge. The ambassadours of the Jewes oure frendes being sent from Symon the hye preast, and from the people of the Jewes, came vnto vs for to renue the olde frendshyp and bonde of loue, brought a shyld of golde weyinge a thousande pounde, whych we were contente to receaue of them. Wherfore we thought it good to wryte vnto the kynges and prouynces, to do them no harme, nor to take parte agaynst them, theyr cytees, nor countrye, neyther to mayntayne theyr enemyes agaynst them. Yf there be any wycked persons therfore fled frome theyr country vnto you, delyuer them vnto Symon the preaste that he may punysshe them accordynge to theyr owne lawe.

D The same wordes wrote the Romans also vnto Demetrius the kyng, to Attalus, Araba, Arsaces, and to all the regyons, as Samsanes to them of Sparta, Delo, Mido, Sidon, Caria, Samos, Pamphilia, Licia, Alicarnassum and to the Rhodes, to Faselis, Coo, Sida, Aradio, Gortina, Gnidū. to Cipres, and Ciren. And of euery peyce they sent a coppe to Symon the hye preaste and to the people of the Jewes: So Antyochus the kynge brought hys hooste vnto Dora the second tyme to take it: where he made diuers ordynaunce of warre, and kepte Tryphon in, that he shulde not come forth. Then sēt Symon to Antyochus two thousande chosen men to helpe hym wyth golde, syluer, and other plenteous gere: Neuertheles, he wold not receaue them, but brake all the couenaunt whyche he made w̄ Simō afore, & w̄ drew himself frō him

He sent

He sente Athenobius also a frend of his vn to Symon, for to reason wyth hym, sayinge: Ye wytholde from me Joppa and Gaza (wyth the castell that is at Jerusalem) whyche are cyties of my realme, whose borders ye haue destroyed and one great euell in the lande, haupnge the dompnacion in many other places of my kyngdome. Wherfore nowe delyuer the cyties which ye haue taken, wyth the trybutes of the places that ye haue rule vpon wythout the borders of Jewrye: Or els geue me fyue hundred talentes of syluer: yee, & for the harme that ye haue done in the cyties: and for the tributes of the same other fyue hundred talentes. Yf no, we shal come and fyght agaynst you.

E So Athenobius the kynges frende came to Jerusalem, and when he sawe the greate worshyppe and honoure of Symon in golde, syluer and so great plentye of ornamentes, he maruayled, and tolde Symon as the kynge commaunded hym: Then answered Symon and sayd vnto him: * As for vs, we haue nether taken other mens landes, nor wytholden them, but onelye oure fathers heritage, whych our enemyes had vnryghteouslye in possessyon a certayne tyme: Thys heritage of oure fathers haue we chalenged in processe of tyme. And where as thou complaynest concernynge Joppa & Gaza, they dyd greate harme to oure people and in oure lande, yet wyll we geue an hundred talentes for them.

Neuertheless, Athenobius answered hym not one worde, but turned agayne wrothfullye vnto the kyng and told him all these wordes, & the great dignitye of Symon, wyth al that he had sene, & the kynge was verye angrye. In the meane tyme fled Tryphon by shyppe vnto Dorthosadia. Then the kynge made Cendebeus captayne of the see coast, and gaue him an hoost of foremen and horsemen, commaundinge hym to remoue the hoost towarde Jewrye, and to buylde vp the cytie of Cedron, to make vp the portes, & to warre agaynst the people of the Jewes. As for the kynge himselfe: he folowed vpon Tryphon. So Cendebeus came vnto Jamnia, & began to vexe the people, to tread downe Jewry, to take the people prysoners, to slay thē

THē came Jhō vp from * Gaza, and tolde Symon hys father, what Cēdebeus had done amonge theyr people. In the mornynge they arose, and wente into the playne felde: and behold, a myghty greate hoost came agaynst them both of footemen and horsemen. Nowe was there a water broke betwyxt them, & Jhon remoued the hoost toward them. And when he saw that the people was afrayed to go ouer the water broke, he went ouer fyrst hymselfe, & the men seing this, folowed him

Then Jhon set hys horsemen and footemē in order, the one by the other, for theyr enemeys horsemen were verye manye. But when they blew vp ꝑ preastes trompettes. Cendebeus fled wyth hys hoste, whereof many were slayne, & the remnaunt gat them to theyr stronge holde Judas also Johns brother was wounded at the same tyme. And Jhon folowed styll vpon the enemyes, tyll he came to Cedron * which he buylded.

The enemyes fled also vnto the towers that were in the feldes of Azotus, and those did Jhon burne vp. Thus were there slayne two thousande men of them, and Jhon turned again peacyably to Jewrye.

And in the felde of Jericho was Ptolompe the sonne of Abobus made captayne, whych because he had aboundaunce of syluer and golde: (for he hadde maryed the daughter of Symon the hye preast) waxed proude in hys mynde, and thought to conquere the lande, ymagenyng falsched agaynst Symon and hys sōnes, to destroy them. Nowe as Symon was goinge aboute thorowe the cytyes, that were in the country of Jewrye, and carynge for them, he came downe to Jerycho wyth Mathathias and Judas hys sonnes, in the. Clxxvii. yeare in the. xi. moneth called * Sabat. Then Ptolomy the sonne of Abobus receaued them (but wyth dysceate) into a strōg house of hys, called Doch, whych he had buylded where he made them a banket.

So whē Symō and hys sōnes were merye and had dronken well, Ptolomy stode vp wyth hys men (whom he had hyd ther) and toke theyr weapons, entred into the banket house, & slewe Symon wyth hys two sonnes, and certayne of hys seruauntes. Suche greate vnkaythfulnesse dyd Ptolomy in Israel, & recompenced euel for good. Then wrote thys Ptolomy the same vnto the kynge Antyochus, requyrynge hym, that he shuld sende hym an hoste to helpe hym: and so shulde he delyuer hym the land, wyth the cytyes and tributes of the same. He sente other men also vnto Gaza, for to take Jhon, and wrote vnto the captaynes to come to hym, and he shulde geue them syluer, gold, and rewardes And to Jerusalem he sente other to take it, and the Sanctuarye.

Then ranne there one before, and told Jhō in Gaza, that hys father and his brethren were slayne, and howe that Ptolomy had sent to slay hym also. When Jhon heard thys he was sore abashed, and layde handes of them that were

It is wrytten also: howe the prophet (at the commaundemēt of God) charged them to take the tabernacle & the arke wyth them: & he wente forth vnto the mountayne, where Moses clymed vp, * & sawe the herytage of God. And whē Je= remy came there, he founde an open caue, where in he layed the tabernacle, the ark, and ỳ aulter of incense, & so stopped ỳ whole. There came cer tayne mē together also folowing him, to marke the place, but they coulde not fynde it. Whyche when Jeremy perceaued, he reproued them, say= inge: As for that place, it shalbe vnknowen, vn= tyll the tyme that God gather hys people to ge= ther agayne, & receaue them vnto mercy. Then shal God shewe them these thynges, & the ma= iestye of the Lord shall appere * & the cloude also lyke as it was shewed vnto Moses: and lyke as when Salomon desyred, that the place myghte be sanctifyed, and it was shewed hym.

We hope also, that the God (whych dely= uered hys people, & gaue them all the heryptage, kyngdome, presthode, & Sanctuarye, * that he promysed them in the lawe) shall shortely haue mercy vpon vs, and gather vs together frō vn= der the heauen into his holy place: for he hath sa ued vs frō great parels, & hath clensed ỳ place.

As concernyng Judas Machabeus and hys D brethren, the purifycacion of the greate temple, the dedycacion of the aulter: yea, & of the war= res that cōcerne noble Antiochus, & * Eupator hys sonne, of the chinynges ỳ came downe from heauen vpon those whyche manfully e defended the Jewes. For though they were but few, yet defended, they the whole lande, droue awaye the enemies hoost, recouered agayne the temple that was spoken of thorowoute all the world, delyuered the cytie, doynge theyr beste, that the lawe of the Lord which was put downe, myght wyth all tranquyllyte be restored agayne vnto the Lord, that was so mercyfull vnto them. As touchynge Jason also of Cyren, we haue vnder taken compendeously to bryng into one booke the thynges that were comprehended of hym in fyue. For we consyderynge the multitude of the bookes, and howe harde it shuld be for thē that wolde medle wyth storyes and actes (and that because of so diuers matters) haue vndertaken so to comprehende the storyes: that suche as are dysposed to read, might haue pleasur & pastime there in: and that they whyche are dyligente in such thynges, myghte the better thyncke vpon them: yee, & that whosoeuer reade them myghte haue profyt therby.

Neuertheles, we oure selues that haue med led wyth thys matter for the shortenynge of it haue taken no small laboure, but greate dyly= gence, watchynges and trauayle. Lyke as they that make a feast: wolde fayne do other mē plea sure: Euen so we also (for manye mens sakes) are very well contente to take the labour, wher as we maye shortlye comprehende, the thynges that other men haue truly wrytten.

For he that buyldeth an house a newe, must prouyde for manye thynges, to the whole buyl= dyng, but he that paynteth it afterward, seketh but onely what is comlye, mete and conuenyent to garnysh it wythall. Euen so doo we in lyke maner. And why? He that begynneth to wryte a story for the fyrst, muste wyth his vnderstan= dynge gather the matter together, set hys wor= des in order and dyligentlye seke oute of euerye parte. But he that afterwarde wyl shortē it, v= seth fewe wordes, and toucheth not the matter at the largest. Let thys be sufficyent for a Pro= loge. Now wyll we begynne to shewe the mat= ter, for it is but a foolysh thynge to make a lōge Prologe, & to be short, in the story it selfe.

¶ The. iii. Chapter.

¶ Of the honour done vnto the temple by the kynges of the Gentyles. Symon vttereth what treasure is in the temple. Helyodorus is sent to take the awaye. He is stryken of God and healed at the prayer of Onias.

What

A WHat tyme as the holy cytie was inhabyted in al peace & welth & when the lawes were yet very well kept (For so was it ordeyned by Onias the hye preaste and other godly mē that were enemyes to wyckednes) It came ther
i.mach.i.c to, *that euen the kynges and prynces them selues dyd the place greate worshyppe, and garnyshed the temple wyth great gyftes: In so moche that Selucus kynge of Asia of hys owne rentes, bare all the coastes belongynge to the ser-ii.mac.iii.a uyce of the offerynges. Then * Symon of the trybe of Ben Jamin, a ruler of the tēple, laboured to worcke some myschefe in the cytie, but ỹ hye preaste resysted hym.

Neuertheless, when he myght not ouer-
G.mac.iii.b come Onias, he gat hym to * Appolonius the sonne of Therla (which then was chefe Lord in Celocyria and Phenyces) and tolde hym that ỹ treasurye in Jerusalem was full of innumerable mony, & how that the comē goodes (whyche belonged not vnto the offeringes) were exceading great also: yee, & howe it were possible ỹ al these myght come vnder the kynges powre.

B Nowe when Appolonius had shewed the kynge of the money, as it was tolde hym: the kynge called for Helidorus hys stewarde, and sente hym wyth a commaundement, to bryng hym the same money. Immediatly Heliodorus toke hys iourney, but vnder a colour, as though he wolde go thorowe Celocyria and Phenyces to vyset the cyties, but his purpose was to fulfyll the kynges pleasure. So when he came to Jerusalem, and was louynglye receaued of the hye preast into the cytie: he tolde what was determyned concernynge the money, and shewed the cause of hys commynge, he asked also yf it were so in dede. Then the hye preast tolde hym that there was such monye layed vp for the vpholdynge of wyddowes and fatherles chyldren and howe that a certayne of it belonged vnto Hyrcanus Tobias a noble man, and that of all the monye (whych the wycked Symon had bewrayed) There were .iiii C. talentes of syluer, and two C. of gold: yee, and that it were vnpossyble for those mens meanynge to be dysceaued that had layed vp theyr money in the place and temple (whych is had in worshyppe thorow the whole worlde) for the mayntenaunce & honoure of the same. Wherunto Heliodorus answered, that the kynge had commaunded hym in anye wyse, to bryng hym in the money.

C So at the daye appoynted, Heliodorus entred into the temple to order thys matter. But there was no smal feare thorowoute the whole cytie. The preastes fell downe before the aulter in theyr vestymētes, & called vnto heauen vpon
Exo.xxii.b him *which had made a lawe concernyng stuffe geuen to kepe, that they shulde be safely preserued for such as commyt them vnto keppynge. Then whoso had loked the hie preast in the face it wolde haue greued hys herte. For hys countenaunce and the chaungynge of his coloure, declared the inwarde sorowe of hys mynde. The mā was al in heupnes, & his body in feare, wher by they that loked vpon hym, myght perceaue the grefe of hys herte, the other people came out of theyr houses by heapes vnto the comen prayer, because the place was lyke to come into confusyon. The wemen came together thorow the stretes, wt herp clothes aboute theyr breastes.

The vyrgyns also that were kepte in, ranne to Onias, some in the walles, other some loked out of the wyndowes: yee, they all held vp their handes towarde heauen, and prayed. A miserable thynge was it, to loke vpon the comen people, and the hye preast beynge in suche trouble. But they besought almyghty God that the godes whych were commytted vnto them, might be kept whole, for those that had delyuered thē vnto theyr keppyng. Neuertheless, the thyng ỹ Heliodorus was determyned to do, that performed he in the same place, he hym selfe personallye beynge aboute the treasurye wyth hys men of warre. But the spyrete of almighty God shewed him selfe openly, so ỹ al they which presumed to obeye Heliodorus, fell thorowe the power of God into a great fearfulnes and drede.

*For there appeared vnto thē an horse, with ii.mach.iii.b a terryble man syttynge vpō hym, deckt in goodlye araye, & the horse smote at Heliodorus wt hys forefete. Nowe he that sat vpon the horse had harnes of golde vpon hym.

Moreouer, there apeared two fayre & bewtyfull ponge men in goodly arraye, which stode by hym & scourged him on both ỹ sydes, & gaue hym manye stryppes wythoute ceassynge.
*Wyth that fell Heliodorus sodenlye vnto the ii.mach.iii.d
grounde. So they toke him vp (beynge compassed aboute wyth greate darcknesse) & bare hym out vpō a bare. Thus he that came with so many runners and men of warre into the sayde treasurye, was borne out, where as no man myght helpe hym: and so the power of God was manyfest and knowen. He laye styll domme also by ỹ power of God destytute of all hope & lyfe. And they praysed the Lorde that had shewed his power vpon hys place and temple, whych a lytle afore was full of feare and trouble: and that thorowe the reuelacyon of the Almyghtye Lorde it was fylled wyth ioye and gladnes.

Then certayne of Heliodorus frendes prayed Onias, that in all hast he wolde call vpon God to graunt hym hys lyfe, which was geuyng vp the ghoost. So the hye preast consyderyng the matter, and least the kynge shulde suspect that the Jewes had done Heliodorus some euell. He offered an healthy offerynge for hym. Now whē the hye preast had obtayned hys petycyon, the same yonge mē in the same clothynge appeared and stode besyde Heliodorus, saying: Thancke Onias the hye Preast, for * hys sake hath the Act.xxbiter
God hath scourged the, geue hym prayse & thākes, and shewe euery man his myght and power. And when they had spokē these wordes they appered no more.

So Helyodorus offered vnto God, made great vowes vnto hym, whyche had graunted hym his lyfe, thancked Onias, toke hys hoode and went agayne to the kynge. Then testyfyed he vnto euery man of the great worckes of God that he had sene wyth his eyes. And when the kynge asked Heliodorus who were mete to be sente yet once agayne to Jerusalem, he sayde: yf thou haste anye enemye or aduersarye vnto thy realme, sende hym thyther, and thou shalte haue hym punyshed, yf he escape wyth hys lyfe: for in that place (no doubte) there is a speciall power and worckynge of God. For he that dwelleth in heauen, vysiteth and defendeth that place, & all that come to do it harme, he punyscheth and plageth them. This is nowe the matter concernynge Heliodorus, and the keppynge of the treasurye at Jerusalem.

¶ The.iiii. Chapter.

A ii. mac. iiii. a

Thys Symon nowe  (of whom we spake afore) beynge a bewrayer of the money and of his owne natural countrye, reported the worste of Onias: as thoughe he had moued Heliodorus vnto thys, and as thoughe he had bene a brynger vp of euell. Thus was he not ashamed to call him an enemye of the realme: that was so faythfull an ouersear and defender of the cytie & of his people: yee, and so feruent in the lawe of God: But when the malyce of Symon encreased so ferre, that thorowe his frendes there were certayne menslaughters commytted: Onias cõsydered the parell that myghte come thorowe thys stryke, and howe that Appolonius (namelye the chefe Lorde in Celociria and Phenices) was all set vpon tyranny, and Symons malice increased the same. He gat hym to the kynge not as an accuser of the citezins, but as one that by him selfe intended the comen wealthe of the whole multitude.

B For he sawe it was not possyble to lyue in peace, nether Symon to leaue of from his koolyshnes: excepte the kynge dyd looke thereto But after the deathe of Selucus, when Antyochus (whych is called the noble) toke the kyngdome Jason the brother of Onias laboured to be hye preast: For he came vnto the kynge, and promysed him. iii. C. & lx talentes of syluer, & of the other rẽtes. lxxx. talẽtes Beysydes thys he promised him yet an. C. & l. Yf he might haue ỹ scole of the chyldren, and ỹ he myght call them of Jerusalem Antiochyãs. Which when they had graũted, & he had gotten the superpoynte, he begãne immediatlye to drawe hys kynsmen to the customs of the Heathen, put downe the thynges ỹ the Jewes had set vp of loue, by Jhon the father of Eupolemyus whych was sent ambassydour vnto Rome, for to make the bonde of frendshyp and loue. He put downe all the Jewes and lyberties of the Jewes and set vp the wycked statutes. He durste make a fyghtyng scole vnder the castell, and set fayre yonge men to learne the maners of whores and brothels.

¶ This was nowe the begynnynge of the Heathenyshe and straunge conuersacyon, brought in thorowe the vngracyous & vnheard wycked nes of Jason, whych shuld not be called a preest, but an vngodlye personne. In so moch that the preastes were nowe no more occupyed aboute ỹ seruice of the aulter, but dyspysed the temple, regarded not the offrynges: yee, gaue theyr delygence to learne to fyght, to wrastle, to leape, to daunce, and to put at the stone, not settyng by the honoure of theyr fathers, but lyked the glory of the Gretkes best of all: for the whyche they stroue parlously, & were gredy to folowe theyr statutes: ye, theyr luste was in all thynges to be lyke them, whych afore were their enemies, & destroyers. Howebeit to do wickedly against the lawe of God, shall not escape vnpunyshed, but of thys we shall speake hereafter.

D What tyme as the * Olimpiades sportes were playde at Tyrus (the kynge him selfe beynge presente) thys vngracyons Jason sent wicked mẽ, bearyng from them of Jerusalẽ (which now were called Antiochiãs.) iiii. C. dragmars of syluer for an offerynge to Hercules. These had they that caryed them desyred them vnder such a fashyon, as though they shulde not be offered but bestowed to other vses. Neuertheles he that sent them, sente them to the intente that they shulde be offred vnto Hercules. But because of those that were presente, they were geuen as to the makynge of shyppes. And Appolonius the sonne of Nestus was sent into Egipt because of the noblemen of kyng Ptolomy Philometor. Nowe when Antyochus perceaued, ỹ he was put oute from medlynge in the realme, he soughte hys owne profyte, departed from thence came to Joppa: and then to Jerusalem, where he was honourably receaued of Jason, & of the cytie, and was brought in with torch light and wyth greate prayse, and so he turned hys hooste vnto Phenices.

After. iii. yeare Jason sente Menelaus, the forsayd Symons brother, * to beare the money vnto the kynge, and to bynge hym answere of other necessary matters. But he (when he was praysed of the kynge for magnifyinge of hys power) turned the preasthod vnto him selfe layinge vp. iii. C. talentes of syluer for Jason. So when he had gotten the commaundementes frõ the kynge (he came haynge nothynge that becommeth a preaste) but bearynge the stomacke of a cruell tyraunte, and wrathe of a wylde brute beaste * Then Jason (whyche had dyscea- ued hys owne brother) seynge he hym selfe was begyled also, was fayne to flee into the lande of the Ammonytes, & Menelaus gat the dompnyon. But as for the money that he had promysed vnto the kynge, he dyd nothynge therein, when Sostratus the Ruler of the Castell requyred it of hym. For Sostratus was the man that gathered the customes, wherefore they were both called before the kynge. Thus was Menelaus put out of the preasthode, and Lysimachus hys brother came in hys stead. Sostratus also was made lorde of the Cyrians.

It happened in the meane season, that the Tharsians & Malacians made insurrecyon because they were geuẽ for a preasant vnto kyng Antyochus kynge Antiochus concubyne. Then came the kynge in all the haſt, to ſtyll thē agayne, & to pacify the matter, leauinge Andronicus therto be his debyte as one mete therfore. Now Menelaus ſuppoſynge ỳ he had gottē a ryght conuenyent tyme, ſtole certayn veſſels of gold out of ỳ tēple, & gaue thē to Andronicus for a preſent: & ſome he ſolde at Tirus and in the cities therby

Whych when Onias knew of a ſuerty, he reproued him: but he kept hym in a Sāctuary beſide Daphnis ỳ lieth by Antioch. Wherfor Menelaus gat him to Andronicus, & prayd him ỳ he wold ſlaye Onias: So whē he came to Onias, he counceled him craftely to come out of the Sāctuary geuyng him hys hand wyth an othe (howbeit he ſuſpect him) & then he ſlew Onias wythout any regard of ryghteouſnes. For ỳ which cauſe not only the Jewes but other nacions alſo toke indignaciō, and were diſpleaſed for ỳ vnrighteous death of ſo goodly a man.

G And whē the kynge was come agayne from Cycilia, the Jewes and certayne of the Gzekes went vnto hym, complaynynge for the vnrighteous death of Onias. Yee, Antiochus himſelf was ſory in hys mynd for Onias, ſo that it pitied hym, and he wept remembzinge his ſoberneſs & manerly behaueour. Wherfore he was ſo kyndled in hys mynd, ỳ he cōmaunded Andronicus to be ſtrypped out of his purple clothing, and ſo to be led thorowout the cytye: yee, & the vngratious man to be ſlayne in the ſame place wher he cōmytted thys wyckednes vpon Onias. Thus the lorde rewarded hym hys punyſhment, as he had deſerued. Nowe when Lyſymachus had done many wycked dedes in the tēple thorowe the counſel of Menelaus, and ỳ voyce came abzoade: the multytude gathered thē together agaynſte Lyſymachus: for he had caryed out now much gold.

So when the people aroſe, and were ful of diſpleaſure, Lyſymachus armed. iii. M. vnthyfftes to defende hym: a certayne tyzaunt beynge theyz captayne, whych was growē both in age and woodneſſe. But when ỳ people vnderſtode the purpoſe of Lyſymachus, ſome gat ſtones, ſome good ſtronge clubbes, & ſome caſte aſhes vpon Lyſymachus. Thus there were many of thē wounded, ſome beynge ſlayne, and al the other chaced away. But as for ỳ wicked church robber himſelfe, they kylled hym beſyde ỳ treaſury Of theſe matters therfore there was kept a courtt againſte Menelaus. Nowe when the kynge came to Tyrus, they made a complaynt

H vnto hym of Menelaus, concernynge this buſynes and ỳ ambaſſidours were. iii. But Menelaus wēt & promiſed Ptolomy to geue him much money, yf he wold perſwade ỳ kynge. So Ptolomy went to the kyng into a courte (where he was ſet to cole hym) & brought hym out of that mynde. In ſo muche that he diſcharged Menelaus from ỳ accuſacyōs, that not withſtanding was cauſe of al myſchefe: and thoſe poore men, whych yt they hadde tolde theyz cauſe: yee, before the Scithians, they ſhulde haue bene iudged innocent, them he condempned to death.

Thus where they ſoone punyſhed, whych followed vpon the matter for the cyty, for the people, and for the holye veſſell. Wherfore, they of Tyrus toke indignacion, and buryed thē honorably. And ſo thorow the couetouſnes of them that were in power. Menelaus remayned ſtyll in auctorite increaſynge in malyce, to the hurt of the cytezins.

¶ The. v. Chapter.

¶ Of the ſygnes and tokens ſene in Jeruſalem. Of the end and offence of Jaſon. The purſuet of Antiochus agaynſt ỳ Jewes. The ſpoylyng of the tēple.

A T ỳ ſame tyme Antiochus made him readye to go agayne into Egipt. Then were there ſene at Jeruſalem. xl. dayes longe, horſmē runnynge to and fro in the ayre, whych had rayment of golde, & ſpeares. There were ſene alſo whole hooſtes of men weapened, & horſes runnyng in an order, how they came together, how they helde forth theyr ſheldes, howe the harneſſed men drewe out theyr ſwerdes, & ſhote theyr dartes. The ſhyne of ỳ goldē weapōs was ſene & of all maner of armure. Wherfore euery man prayde, ỳ thoſe tokens myght turne to good. Nowe when there was gone forthe a falſe rumour, as though Antiochus had bene dead: Jaſon toke a. M. men, & came ſodenly vpō ỳ cyty. The citezins came vnto ỳ walles, at ỳ laſt was the cytie taken, & Menelaus fled, into ỳ caſtell.

As for Jaſon, he ſpared not hys owne cytezins in the ſlaughter, neyther cōſidered he what greate euell it were, to deſtroye the proſperyte of hys owne kynſmen: but dyd as one that had gotten the victory of hys enemyes, and not of hys frendes: For al this gate he not the ſuperiorite, but at the laſte receaued confuſion for hys malyce, * & fled agayne lyke a vagabounde into the land of the Ammonytes. 2 M. v.

Finally, for a rewarde of his wyckednes he was accuſed before Aretha the kynge of the Arabians. In ſo much that he was fayn to flee frō cytie to cytie, beynge deſpyſed of euery man as a forſaker of the lawes, and an abhompnable perſonne, And at the laſt (as an open enemy of his owne natural countre and of the cytezins) he was dryuen into Egypte.

Thus he that afore put manye oute of theyr owne natyue land, peryſhed frō home hymſelfe. He went to Lacedemō, thinckyng there to haue gotten ſoccoure by reaſon of kynred. And he ỳ afore had caſten many one out vnburyed, was throwen out hymſelfe, no man mournynge for hym nor puttyng hym in his graue: ſo that he nether enioyed the buryall of a ſtraunger, neyther was he partaker of hys fathers ſepulchre

Nowe when thys was done, the kynge ſuſ- C pecte, that the Jewes wolde haue fallen frome hym: wherfore he came in a greate diſpleaſure out of Egypt, * & toke the cyty by vyolence. He commaunded hys men of warre alſo: that they ſhuld kyl and not ſpare, but ſlay downe ſuch as withſtode thē, or clymed vp vpon the houſes. 1. mach. 1.

Thus was there a greate ſlaughter of yong men, old men, wemen, chyldrē, & virgins

In thre dayes were there slayne. lxxx. M. fourtye thousande put in prysón, and no lesse solde. Yet was he not content wyth thys, but durst go into the most holy temple (Menelaus that traytoure to the lawes and to his owne natural countre, being hys guyde) and wyth hys wycked hãdes toke the holy vessel, whych other kinges and cytyes had geuen thether for the garnyshynge & honoure of the place: them toke he in hys handes vnworthelye, and defyled them.

D So mad was Antiochus, that he consydered not, howe that God was a lytle wrothe for the synnes of them that dwelte in the cytye for the whyche suche confusyon came vpon that place.

*Judi.b.a *And whych yf it had not happened them to haue bene lapped in many sinnes, thys Antiochus (assone as he had come) had sodenly bene punyshed

1.mac.iii.d and shut out for hys presumpcyon, * lyke as Heliodorus was, whome Selucus the kynge sente to robbe the treasurye. Neuertheles, God hathe not chosen the people for the places sake, but the place for the peoples sake: & therfore is the place become partaker of the peoples trouble, but afterwarde shall it enioye the welth of them. And lyke as it is nowe forsaken in the wrathe of Almyghtye God, so when the greate God is reconcyled, it shalbe set vp in hye worshipe agayne

E So when Antiochus had taken a. M). and. viii hundred talentes oute of the temple, he gat hym to Antioch in al the hast, thynckyng in his pryde that he myght make mẽ sayle vpon the dry land and to go vpon the see, suche an hye mynde had he. He lefte debytes there, to vexe the people: At Jerusalem lefte he Pylyppe a Phrygian, in maners more cruel then hym selfe that set him there At Garisym he lefte Andronycus and Menelaus, whyche were more greuous to the cytyzyns

1.macha.i.a then other * Nowe as he was thus set in malyce agaynst the Jewes, he sente Appolonius an hated prynce, wyth. xxii. thousand, commaundyng him to slaye those that were of perfecte age, and to sell the wemen, maydens and children. When he came nowe to Jerusalem, he fayned peace, & kepte hym styll vntyll the Sabothe daye. And then he commaunded hys men to take them to theyr weapons (for the Jewes kepte holye day) and so he slewe all them that were gone forthe to the open playe, runnynge here and there thorow the cytye wyth hys men weapened, and murthe-

*1.mach,ic red a greate nombre * But Judas Machabeus whych was the tenthe, fled into the wyldernes, ledde hys lyfe there wyth hys company amonge wylde beastes, and vpon the mountaynes: dwellynge there and eatynge grasse, least they shulde be partakers of the fylthynes.

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

¶ The Jewes are compelled to leaue the lawe of God. The temple is defyled. The readers are monyshed that they shall not abhorre the aduersite wherwith the Lord afflycteth them. The greuous payne of Eleasarus.

A Not longe after thys, sent the kynge a messenger of Antyoch, for to compell the Jewes, to alter the ordynaũces of the fathers, & the lawe of God to defyle the temple that was at Jerusalem, and to call it the temple of Juppter Olympyus: and that they shulde be in Gazarym, as those whyche dwel at ỹ place of Juppter the herberous, Thys wycked sedycyon of the vngodlye was heauy vpon all the people, for the tẽple was full of voluptuousnes, bybbynge & bollynge of the heathen, of rybbaudes and harlots together. The wemen went into the holy place, & bare in, that was not lauful. The aulter also was full of vnlauful thynges, whiche the lawe forbyddeth to laye vpon it. The Sabbothes were not kept, the other solempne feastes of the lãd were not regarded: To be playne, ther durst no man be knowen that he was a Jewe. In the daye of the kynges byrthe they were compelled perforce to offre: and when the feaste of Baccus was kept, they were constrayned to were garlãdes of Juy, and so to go about to the honoure of Baccus. Moreouer thorowe the councel of Ptolomy, there went out a commaundemente in the next cytyes of the heathen, that they shulde intreate the Jewes in lyke maner, namely to compel them for to do sacrifice after the lawes of the Gentyles: and who so wolde not, to put them to death. A pyteous thynge was it to se. Ther were two wemen accused to haue circumsysed theyr sonnes, whom when they had led rounde aboute the cytye (the babes hangyng at theyr breastes) they cast them downe headlynges ouer the walles. Some that were crept in dennes, & had kept the Sabboth, were accused vnto Philyp, & brẽt in the fyre because that for ỹ feare of God they kept the commaundement so stykely, and wolde not defende them selues. Nowe I beseech al those whych reade thys booke, that they refuse it not for these falles of aduersytye, and iudge ỹ thynges (that are happened) for no destruccyon, but for a chastenynge of our people: And why? Whẽ God suffereth not synners longe to folowe theyr owne mynde, but shortelye punyscheth them *, it is a token of hys greate louynge kyndenes. For thys grace haue we of God more then other people, that he suffereth not vs longe to synne vnpunyshed lyke as other nacions, that when the day of iudgemene commeth, he maye punyshe them in the fulnes of theyr synnes. Yf we synne, he correcteth vs, but he neuer wyth draweth hys mercy from vs, and though he punysh wyth aduersytie, yet doth he neuer forsake hys people. But lett thys that we haue spoken nowe wyth fewe wordes be for a warnynge and exhortacyon of the heathen.

B Nowe wyll we come to the declarynge of the matter. Eleazar one of the pryncypall Scrybes an aged man & of a well fauored countenaunce, was constrayned to gape wyth an open mouth, *and to eate swynes flesh, But he desyrynge rather to dye gloryously then to lyue wyth shame offered hym selfe wyllyngly to the martyrdome Nowe when he sawe that he muste nedes go to it, he tooke it pacyentlye: for he was at a poynte wyth hym selfe, that he wolde consent to do no vnlawful thynge for any pleasure of lyfe. They that stode by being moued with pitie (but not a ryght) for the olde frendshyp of the mã, toke hym-

D he had eaten of the flesche of the sacrysyce lyke as the kynge commaunded: for so he myghte bedelyuered from death, and so for the old frendshyp of the man, they shewed hym thys kyndnes.

But he beganne to consider hys discrete and honourable age hys noble & worshipful stocke & howe ỹ from hys youth vp he had bene of an honest, & good conuersacyon, yee, & howe constantly he had kepte the ordynaunces lawes cõmaundedby God, wherfore he gaue thẽ thys answere and sayde: Yet had I rather fyrst be layde in my

For though I were now delyuered frõ the tormentes of men, yet shuld I not escape the hande of Almyghtye God nether

When he had sayde these wordes, immedyatly he was drawen to the tormente. Nowe they that led hym & were mylde a lytle afore, beganne to take displeasure: because of the wordes that he sayde: for they thoughte he had spoken them
1. of an hye mynde. But whenhe was in hys martyrdome, he mourned and sayd: Thou (O Lord) whych hast the holy knowlege: knowest openly that wher as I myght be delyuered from death I suffer these sore paynes of my body, but in my mynde I am well contente to suffre them because I feare the. Thus thys man dyed, leauyng the myrall of hys death for an example, not onlye vnto yonge men, but vnto all the people, to be steadfast and manly.

The.vii.Chapter

¶ The punyshement of the seuen brethren, and of theyr mother

A IT happened also that there were seuen brethren (wyth theyr mother) taken, and compelled by the kynge *a-Leuyt.xi.a. gaynst the lawe, to eate swynes flesh namelye wyth scourges and lethren whyppes. And one of them whych was the cheke sayd: What seketh thou and what requirest thou of vs? As for vs, we are readye rather to suffer death, then to offende the lawes of God and the fathers. Then was the kynge angrye and bad heate cauldrons and brasen pottes.

Whych when they were made hote, immedyatly he commaunded the tonge of hym that spake fyrst to be cut out, to pul the skinne ouer his head to pare of the edges of hys handes and fete: yee, & that in the syghte of hys mother, and the other of his brethren. Nowe when he was cleane marred, he cõmaũded a fyre to be made, and so (whyl there was anye breathe in hym) to be fryed in the cauldron. In the whyche when he hadde bene longe payned: the other brethren wyth theyr mother exhorted him to dye mankullye, sayinge: The Lorde God shall regarde the truthe: and cõforte vs, lyke as Moses teschyfyeth * and declareth in Deu.xxxii.c hys songe, sayinge, and he wyll haue compassyon hys seruauntes.

So when the fyrste was dead after thys maner, they brought the seconde, to haue him in derysyon, pulled the skynne, wyth ỹ heare ouer his
B heade, and asked hym yt he wolde eate swynes flesche, or he were payned in the other membres also thorowout hys body: But he answered boldlye, and sayde: I wyll not do it. And so was he tormented lyke as the fyrste, and when he was euen at the geuynge vp the ghost he sayd: Thou moost vngracyous personne puttest vs nowe to death, but the kynge of the worlde shal rayse vs vp (whych dye for hys lawes) in the resurreccyon of euerlastynge lyfe.

After hym, was the thyrde had in derysyon & when he was requyred he putte oute hys tonge, and that ryghte soone, holdynge forth hys handes mankullye, and spake with a steadfast fayth These haue I of heauen, but nowe for the law of God I desppce them: for my trust is that I shall receaue them, of hym agayne. In so much that ỹ kynge and they whyche were wyth hym, marueyled at the yonge mannes boldnes, that he nothynge regarded the paynes.

Nowe when he was dead also, they vexed the C fourthe wyth the tormentes in lyke maner. So when he was nowe at hys deathe, he sayde It is better that we beinge put to death of men, haue oure hoope and truste in God, for he shall rayse vs vp agayne. * As for the, thou shalte haue no *Thon.b.c resurreccyon to lyfe.

And when they had spoken to the fyfthe, they tormented hym. Then loked he vnto the kynge, and sayde: thou hast power among men for thou art a mortal man also thy selfe, to do what thou wylte, but thyncke not, that God hath forsaken oure generacyon. Abyde the, tary styll awhyle, and thou shalt se the great power of God, howe he wyll punyshe the and thy sede.

After hym they brought the tyrt, whyche beinge at the poynte of death, sayde: Be not dysceaued (O kynge) for thys we suffer for our owne sakes, because we haue offended oure God, and therefore meruelous thynges are shewed vpon vs. But thyncke not thou, whych takest in hand to strpue agaynste God, that thou shalte escape vnpunyshed.

Thys excellente mother (worthye to be well
D reported of, and had in remembraunce) sawe her seuen sonnes dye in one daye, and suffred it pacyentlye, because of the hoope that she had in God yee, she exhorted euerye one of them inespecyall and that boldly and steadfastly with perfect wisdome, wakynge vp her womanyshe thought wyth a manlye stomacke, and sayde vnto them: I cannot tell howe ye came in my whõbe, for I nether gaue you breth nor soule, no nor lyfe. It is not I ỹ ioyned the membres of youre bodyes together but the maker of the worlde, whyche fashioned the byrth of man, & beganne all thynges. Euen he also of hys owne mercye shall geue you breth & lyfe agayne lyke as ye nowe regarde not your owne selues for hys lawes sake.

Nowe thoughte Antiochus that she had despysed hym, therfore he let her go with her reproues, and beganne to exhorte the youngest sonne, (whyche yet was lefte) not onlye wyth wordes but swore vnto hym wyth an othe that he shuld make hym a ryche and a welthy man (yf he wold forsake the lawes of his fathers) yee, and that he shulde geue hym whatsoeuer were necessarie for hym. But when the younge man wolde not be moued, for all these thynges, he called hys mother, and counsayled her to saue her sonnes lyfe. And when he had exhorted her with many wordes, she prompted hym that she shulde speake vnto her sonne. So she turned her vnto hym (laughynge the cruell tyraunte to scorne) and spake wyth a bolde voyce. O my sonne, haue pytie vpon me, that bare the nyne monethes in my wõb that gaue the sucke, norysshed the and brought the vp vnto thys age

I beseche the (my sonne) loke vpon heauen and earthe and all that is therein, and consyder that God made them and mans generacio of naught so shalte thou not feare thys hangman, but suffre death steadfastlye, lyke as thy brethren haue doone: that I maye receaue the agayne in the same mercye wyth thy brethren.

Whyle she was yet speakynge these wordes, the ponge man sayde: whome loke ye for. Wherfore do ye tary? I wyll not obeye the kynges cõmaunemente, * but the lawe that God gaue vs by Moses. As for thou that ymagynest al mischefe agaynst the Jewes, thou shalte not escape the hande of God, for we suffre these thynges, because of oure synnes.

And thoughe God be angrye wyth vs a lytle whyle (for oure chastenynge and reformacyon) yet shall he be at one agayne wyth hys seruauntes. But thou (O shamefull and moost abhompnable personne.) Pryde not thy selfe thorowe vayne hoope, in beyngeso malycyous vpon the seruaũtes of God: for thou haste not yet escaped the iudgement of the God whych is Almyghtye and seyth all thynges. My brethren that haue suffered a lytle payne, are nowe vnder the couenaunt of euerlastynge lyfe: but thorowe the iudgement of God, thou shalte be punyshed ryghteously for thy pryde.

As for me (lyke as my brethren haue done) I offre my soule and my body for the lawes of our fathers, callynge vpon God, that he wyll soone be mercyfull vnto oure people: yee, & wyth payne and punyshement * to make the graunte, that he onely is God. In me nowe and in my brethren ỹ wrath of Almyghtye God is at an ende, whych ryghteously is fallen vpon oure people.

Then the kyng beynge kindled in anger was more cruell vpon hym then vpon all the other: & toke indygnacyon, that he was so lyghtelye regarded. So thys ponge man dyed vndefyled, & put hys truste styll in the Lorde. Laste of all after the sonnes, was the mother put to death also: Let thys nowe be ynough spokẽ, concernyng the offerynges, and extreme cruelnes.

¶ Judas gathereth together hys hoost. Nycanor is sente agaynste Judas, Judas exhorteth hys souldiars to constãnes. Nycanor is ouercome. The Jewes geue thankes after they haue put theyr enemyes to flyghte, deuydynge the spoyles vnto the fatherles and vnto the wyddowes. Nychanor flyeth vnto Antiochus.

WHen Judas Machabeus, and they that were wyth him, went pryuelye into the townes, called theyr kynsfolkes and frendes together, tooke vnto them all such as cõtynued yet in the fayth and lawe of the Jewes, and brought forth. vi. So they called vpon the Lord ỹ he wolde haue an eye vnto hys people whych was troden downe of euery man: to be gracious vnto the temple that was defyled of the vngodly: to haue compassyon vpon the destruccyon of the cytye, whyche was shortlye lyke to be layed waste, to heare the voyce of the bloude that cryed vnto hym: to remembre the most vnrighteous deathes of yonge innocent chyldren, the blaphemyes also done vnto hys name, & to punysh thẽ.

* Nowe when Machabeus had gathered this multytude together, he was to myghtye for the heathen (for the wrath of the Lord was turned into mercy) he fell vpon the townes and cytyes vnwares, brent them, toke the most commodyous places: & slewe manye of the enemyes. But specyallye he made suche chases by nyghte, in so muche that hys manlynesse was spoken of, euerye where. 1.mach.xi.a

So when Philippe sawe that the man increased by lytle and lytle, and that the matter prospered wyth hym for the most parte: he wrote vnto Ptolomy (whych was a captayne in Celocyrya and Phenyces) to helpe hym in the kynges busynes. When Judas knewe of thys, he tolde the Jewes that were with him of Nycanors comming Nowe were there somme of them fearefull, not trustynge vnto the ryghteousnesse of God, and fled theyr waye.

But the other that remayned, came together, and besoughte the Lorde, to delyuer them frome that wycked Nycanor, whyche had solde them or euer he came nye them: and thoughe he wolde not do it for theyr sakes, yet for the couenaute that he made wyth theyre fathers and because

Howe Antiochus then (that was called the noble) dyed: it is sufficyently tolde. Nowe wyll we speake of Eupatoꝛ the sonne of that wycked Antiochus, howe it happened wyth hym, and so wyth fewe woꝛdes to compꝛehende the aduersyte that chaunced in the warres. When he had taken in the kyngdom, he made one Lisias (which had bene captayne of the hoost in Phenyces and Siria) ruler ouer the matters of therealme. Foꝛ Ptolomy that was called Macron, beinge a ruler foꝛ the Iewes (and specyally, to syt in the iudgement foꝛ such wꝛong as was done vnto them) vndertoke to deale peacyablye wyth them. Nowe when Goꝛgias was gouernour of the same places, he toke straungers and vndertoke ofte tymes, to warre wyth the Iewes. ¶ Lisias goeth about to ouercome the Jewes. Socour is sente from heauen vnto the Jewes. The letter of Lisias vnto the Jewes. The letter of king Antiochus vnto Lisias. A letter of the same vnto the Jewes. A letter of the Romans to the Jewes.

A Not lōg after this, Lisias ẏ kīges steward & a kinsmā of his (which had ẏ gouernaūce of his matters) toke sore displeasure for ẏ thinges that had happened, & when he had gathered .lxxx.M. mē of fote with all the hoste of ẏ horsmen, he came against the Jewes, thynkyng to wyn ẏ citie, to make it an habytacyon of the heathen * & the temple wold Joh.ii.b he haue to be an house of lucre, lyke as the other gods houses of the heathē are, & to sel ẏ Preastes office euery yeare. Not cōsideryng ẏ power of God but was wild ī his mynd, * trustyng in esa.xxxvi.b the multytude of foote men, in thousandes of horsmen and in his foure score Elephantes.

So he came into Jewry & then to Bethsura (a castell of defence) lyeng in a narowe place. v furlonges from Jerusalem, and wāne it. Now B when Machabeus & his company knewe ẏ the ii.mac.x.c strōg holdes were takē, * they fel to theyr praiers wt weppyng & teares before ẏ Lord. And all the people in lyke maner besought him, that he wold send a good āgel to delyuer Israell. Machabeus himself was ẏ fyrst ẏ made hym ready to ẏ battail, exhorting ẏ other ẏ were wt him to ieoperde themselues, & to helpe theyr brethren. And when they were goyng forth of Jerusalem ii.mac.xiii.e together with a ready & willing mynde * there appeared before them vpon horsbacke a man in whyte clothyng wt harnesse of golde, shakynge his spere. Then they praised ẏ Lord altogether which had shewed them mercy, & were comforted in theyr mindes, in so much ẏ they were ready, not only to fight wt men, but wt ẏ most cruel beastes: yee, & runne thorow the walles of yron

Thus they went on wyllynglye hauyng an helper from heauen, & the Lorde mercyful vnto C them. They fell myghtely vpon theyr enemyes lyke Lyons, brought downe .xi.M. fotmen, xvi C. horsmen, put all the other to flyght many of them beyng wounded, & some gat away naked. Yee, Lisias hymselfe was fayne to flee shāfully and so to escape. But

B But the kynge was wood in hys mynd, & came to shew hymselfe more cruell vnto the Jewes, then hys father was, Whyche when Judas
ii.mac.xiid perceaued, * he commaũded ỹ people to cal vpõ the Lorde night & day: ỹ he wold now helpe thẽ also, lyke as he had done alway. For they were afrayed to be put from theyr lawe, from theyr natural countrey, & from ỹ holy temple: & not to suffre the people (whych alytle whyle afore began to recouer) to be subdued againe of the blasphemous nacions So when they had done this together, & besought the Lorde for mercy, with weping & fasting. iii. dayes long flat vpon the ground. Judas exhorted them, to make thẽ selues ready. But he & the elders together deuysed to go forth fyrst wt theyr people, afore the kinge brought hys hoost into Jewry, & afore he besieged the cyty, & commyt the matter vnto God,

Wherfore, he ascribed the power of althinges vnto God ỹ maker of ỹ world exhortig his people to fyght mãfully (yee, euen vnto death) for the lawes, the temple, the cytye, theyr owne natiue countrye, & to defend ỹ citezins: & set his hoost before. D Thus when they had brought a great feare & rumour among ỹ tentes of theyr enemyes, & all thinges went prosperously wt them, they departed in the breake of the daye, God beynge theyr helper & defender. Nowe when the kinge perceaued the manlynes of the Jewes, he went about to take the stronge places by crafte, & remoued ii.ma.xi. a hys hoost * vnto Bethsura which was a wel kept house of defence of ỹ Jewes: but they were chased away, hurt & dyscomfyted. And Judas sent vnto them ỹ were in it such thinges as were necessary. In the Jewes hoste also there was one Rhodochus which told the enemies their secretes: but they sought hym oute, & when they had gottẽ hym, they put hym in prealon, After this dyd the kyng commẽ with them ỹ wer in Bethsura, toke truce with them, departed and stroke battayle wyth Judas whyche ouercame hym.

E But when he vnderstode, that Philyppe (whome he had left to be ouer sear of his busines at Antioche) began to rebel agaynst hym he was astoyned in hys mynd: so that he yelded hymselfe to the Jewes, and made them an othe to do whatsoeuer they thought ryght.

Nowe when he was reconsyled wyth them he offered, made much of the temple, gaue great gyftes vnto it, embraced Machabeus, making hym acptayne and gouernoure from Ptolomays vnto the Gerrenes. Neuertheless, when he came to Ptolomays, the people of the city were not content wyth the bonde of frendshyppe, for they were afrayed, that he wolde breake the couenaunt Then wente Lysias vp into the seate and enfourmed the people, shewed them the cause why: and pacyfyed them. So he came againe vnto Antioch. This is nowe the matter concernyng the kynges iourney, and hys returne.

¶ By the mocyon of the Lorde. Demetrius sendeth Nycanor to kyll the Jewes, Nicanor maketh a cõpact with the Jewes, whych he yet breaketh through the mocyon of the kyng. Nycanor cõmaundeth Razia to be taken. The boldnes of Razia.

After thre yeres was Judas enfourmed how that Demetrius the sonne of Seleucus was come vp with a great power & shyppes, thorowe the hauen of Trapolys, to take certayne commodious places & coũtryes, against Antiochus and hys captayne Lisias. Now Alcimus (whych had bene hye preaste and wylfully defyled hymselfe, in the time of the mixting) seinge, ỹ by no meanes he coulde be helped, nor haue any more entraunce to the aulter: he came to kyng Demetrius in the. C. & li. peare, presenting vnto hym a crowne of gold, a palme and an Olyue tree: which (as mẽ thought) belõged to the temple, and that daye he held hys tonge But when he had gottẽ oportunite for his madnes, Demetrius called him to counsayle, and asked hym, what thynges or counsayles the Jewes leaned vnto. He answered: The Jewes that be called Assyde (whose captaine is Judas Machabeus) mayntayne warres, make insurrections, and wyll not let the realme be in peace.

B For I beinge depryued of my fathers honoure (I meane the hye preasthode) am come hether: partly because I was faythfull vnto the kyng and partely because I sought the profite of the cytyzins. And whi:al oure people, thorow the wyckednes of them, are not a lytle troubled. Wherefore, I beseche the (O kynge) consyder all these thynges diligẽtly, & thẽ make some prouision for the lande and the people, accordynge to the kyndnes that thou hast offered vnto them. For as longe as Judas hath the vpperhand, it is not possyble that men can lyue in peace.

When he had spoken these wordes, other frendes also haupnge euell wyl at Judas, set ỹ kyng Demetrius on fyre against him: * which i.mach.vii:e immediatly sent Nychanor (ruler of ỹ Elephãtes) a captayne into Jewry, cõmaundyng him to take Judas hymself alyue, but to slay them that were wyth hym, and to make Alcimus hye preast of the great Temple.

C Then the Heathen which fled out of Jewry from Judas, came to Nycanor by flockes, thynkynge the harme and decay of the Jewes to be theyr welfare. Nowe when ỹ Jewes heard of Nycanors commyng, and the gatherynge together of ỹ heathen, they sprynkled thẽ selues wt earth * besought hym whiche made them hys
i.mach.v.e people, and euer defẽded his owne porcion with euydent tokens, ỹ he wolde preserue them styll So at the commaundement of ỹ captaine, they remoued from thence, and came to a towne called Dessalan And Simon Judas brother fel in hand wyth Nycanor, but thorowe ỹ sodaine cõmynge of the enemyes, he was afrayed.

Neuertheless, Nicanor hearyng the manlynesse of them that were wyth Judas, and ỹ bolde stomackes that they had to fight for theyr naturall countrie, durste not proue the matter wt bloudsheddyng Wherfore, he sent Passidonius

Theodocius, and Mathias before; to geue and to take peace. So when they had taken long aduisemēt thereupon and the captayne shewed it vnto ỹ multitude, they were agreed in one minde: to haue peace. And they appoynted a daye to sytte vpon these matters quietly among themselues the stooles also were brought & set forth Neuertheles, Judas commaunded certayne mē of armes to wayte in conueniente places, least there shuld sodaynly aryse anye euell thorowe the enemies, And so they commauned reasonably together.

D Nycanor, whyle he abode at Jerusalem, ordred him self not vnreasonably, but sent away the people ỹ were gathered together. He loued Judas euer wyth hys herte, and fauored hym. He prayed hī also to take a wife, & to brīg forth childzen. So he maried, lyued in reast, & they led a comen lyfe, But Alcymus perceauyng ỹ loue that was betwyxte them, and howe they were agreed together, came to Demetrius and told hym that Nycanor had taken straūge matters in hand, and ordeyned Judas (an enemy of the realme) to be the kynges successour. Thē ỹ kynge was sore displeased, and thorow ỹ wycked accusacyons, whych Alcimus made of Nycanor, he was so prouoked, ỹ he wrote vnto Nicanor, sayenge: that he was very angry for the frendshippe & agrement, which he had made wt Machabeus. Neuertheles, he commaūded him in al the hast, that he shulde take Machabeus prysoner, and sende hym to Antyoche.

E Whych letters when Nychanor had sene, he was at his wittes end, and sore greued, that he shulde breake ỹ thīges wherin they had agreed specyally seing Machabeus was the man that neuer dyd hym harme. But because he myghte not wythstande the kynge he sought oportunyte to fulfyll hys commaundement. Notwithstāding when Machabeus sawe that Nicanor began to be churlysh vnto hym, and that he intreated hym more roughlye then he was wont, he perceaued ỹ such vnkyndnes came not of good and therfore he gathered a fewe of his men, and wythdrewe hymselfe from Nycanor. Whyche whē he knew that Machabeus had mankully preuented hym, he came into the great and most holy temple: & commaūded the preastes (which were doinge theyr vsual offerynges) to delyuer him the man. And whē they sware ỹ they could not tel where the man was, whom he soughte, 1.mac.viii.c he stretched out hys hand, * and made an othe, saying: Yf ye wil not deliuer me Judas captine I shal remone this temple of God into a playn felde, I shal breake downe the aulter, and consecrate thys temple vnto Baccus. After these wordes he departed.

F Then the preastes lyfte vp theyr handes toward heauen and besought him that was euer the defender of theyr people, sayinge: Thou O Lord of all, whych hast nede of nothynge woldest that the temple of thy habytacion shuld be amonge vs. Therfore nowe O most holy lord
1.mac.viii.c kepe thys house euer vndefyled * whych lately was clensed. Now was there accused vnto Nynor, one Razis an alderman of Jerusalem a louer of the holy cytye, and a man of good report whych for the kynde hert that he bare vnto the people, was called a father of the Jewes. This man oftymes, when the Jewes were mynded to kepe themselues vndefyled, defended and delyuered them, beinge content stedfastly to spende hys bodye and hys lyfe for hys people.

So Nycanor wyllynge to declare the hate ỹ he bare to the Jewes, sent. v. C. mē of warre to take hym: for he thought, if he gat him, he shuld bryngе ỹ Jewes in greate decaye. Now when ỹ people began to ruth in at his house, to breake the dores and to set fyre on it: he beinge now taken wold haue defended himselfe wt hys sweard chosynge rather to dye manfullye, then to yeld hī self to those wicked doers: & because of his noble stocke, he had rather to haue bene put to ỹ extreme cruelty. Notwythstandyng, what tyme as he myssed of hys stroke for hast, and the multytude fel in vyolently betwyxt ỹ dores he ran boldly to ỹ wall, and cast hymselfe downe manfully among ỹ heape of them, whych gaue sone place to hys fall, so that he fell vpon hys bellye. Neuertheless whyle there was yet breth within hym, he was kyndled in hys mynd, & whyle hys bloud gushed out exceadyngly (for he was verye sore woūded) he ran thorow the myddest of the people and gat him to the toppe of a rock So when his bloude was gone, he toke out his owne bowels wyth both his handes, and threw them vpon the people, callynge vpon the Lord of lyfe and spyrite to rewarde hym thys agayne and so he dyed.

¶ Nicanor goeth aboute to come vpon Judas on the Sabboth daye. The blasphemye of Nicanor. Machabeus expoundynge vnto the Jewes the vision boldeneth theyr hertes. The prayer of Machabeus After the hoost of Nicanor is ones ouercome. Machabeus commaundeth hys heed and hys handes to be cut of, and hys tonge to be geuen vnto the foules.

NOwe when * Nycanor knew that Judas was in the countrye of Samaria, he thought wyth al hys power to strycke a felde wyth hym, vpon a Sabboth daye. Neuertheles, ỹ Jewes that wer compelled to go wyth hym, sayd: O do not so cruelly and vnkyndly, but halowe the Sabboth daye, and worshyppe hym, that seeth all thynges. For al thys, yet sayd the vngracious person: * Is ther a myghty one in heauen, that commaunded the Sabboth day to be kept? And when they sayd yea, the lyuyng God, the myghtye Lord in heauen * commaunded the seuenth day to be kepte he sayd: And I am myghty vpon earthe to commaund them for to arme them selues & to performe ỹ kinges businesse. Notwythstandyng he myghte not haue his purpose.

Nicanor had deuised wyth greate pryde to ouercome Judas, and to bryngе awaye the wyctory: But Macheus had euer fast confydence and a perfecte hope in God, ỹ he wold helpe him and exhorted hys people, not to be afrayed at ỹ commyng of the Heathen: but alwaye to remeber the helpe ỹ had bene shewed vnto them frō heauen: yea, & to be sure now also, ỹ Almyghty

God

B God wolde geue them the victory. He spake vnto them out of the lawe & prophetes: putting thē in remembraūce of the battels ỳ they had stryckē afore and made them to be of a good corage

So when theyr hertes were plukte vp, he shewed them the disceatfulnes of the Heathen, and howe they wolde kepe no couenaunt wyth othe. Thus they weaponed them, not wt the armoure of shyld, and speare, but wyth wholsom wordes and exhortacions. He shewed them a dreme also wherthorow he made them all glad, which was thys: he thought that he saw Onias (whych had bene hye preaste, a vertevous and a louynge man lad, and of honest conuersacion, wel spoken, and one that had bene exercysed in godlynes frome a chylde, holdynge vp hys handes toward heauen, and prayinge for hys people. After thys ther appered vnto hym another man whyche was aged: honorable, and glorypous. And Onias sayd Thys is a louer of the brethren, and of the people of Israell. Thys is he that prayeth much for the people and for al the holy cytye: Jeremye the prophete of God. He thoughte also that Jeremy helde out hys ryght hand, and gaue vnto Judas a swerde of gold, saying: Take thys holy swerd a gyfte from God, wherewyth thou shalt smyte downe the enemyes of the people of Israell.

C And so they were well confortēd thorowe the wordes of Judas and toke courage vnto them so that the yonge men were determyned in their myndes to fyghte, and to byde stryfye at it: In so muche that the thynges whych they tooke in hande, they hardnesse shewed the same, because the holye cytye, and the temple were in perel: for the whych they tooke moare care, then for theyr wyues, chyldren, brethren, and kynsfolkes, Agayne they that were in the citie, were most carefull for those whyche were to fyghte. Nowe when they were all in a hoope, that the Judgemente of the matter was at hande, and the enemyes drewe nye, the hoste beinge sette in a raye, the Elephantes & horsemen euery one standyge in hys place: Machabeus consyderynge the commynge of the multytude, the ordynaunce of dyuers weapons, the cruelnes of the beastes, and helde vp hys handes towarde heauen, callynge vpon the Lorde that doth wonders, * whych geD uethnott the victorye after the multytude of the weapons and power of the hoost (but to thē that please him) accordynge to hys owne wyll. Ther fore in hys prayer he sayde these wordes.

O Lorde, * thou that dydest sende thyne Angell in tyme of Ezekyah kynge of Juda, and in the hooste of Sennacheryb slewest an.C.lxxx. and fyue thousande, sende nowe also thy good Aungell before vs (O Lorde of heauens) in the fearfulnesse and drede of thy myghte arme, that they whyche come agaynste thy holye people to blaspheme them, maye be afrayed. So he made an ende of hys wordes.

Then Nycanor and they ỳ were with hym, drewe nye wyth shawmes: and songes: but Judas and hys company with prayer and calling vpō God

Wyth theyr handes they smoote, but wyth theyr hertes they prayed vnto the Lorde, & slewe no lesse then. xxxv. M. men: For thorowe the present helpe of God they were gloriously cōforted

Nowe when they lefte of, and were turnynge agayne wyth ioye they vnderstoode that Nycanor hym selfe was slayne wyth the other. Then they gaue a greate shoute and a crye, prayesynge the Almyghtye Lorde wyth a loude voyce. And Judas (whyche was euer readye to spende hys bodye and lyfe for hys cytyzyns) commaunded to smyte of Nycanors head, wyth hys arme and hande, and to be broughte to Jerusalem. When he came there, he called al the people, and the prestes to the aulter wyth those that were in the castell, and shewed them Nychanors head, and his wycked hande whyche he had presumpteously holden vp agaynst the Temple of God. He caused the tonge also of the vngodly Nycanor to be cut in lytle peces, and to be caste vnto the foules and the cruell mans hande to be hanged vp before the temple.

E So euery man gaue thankes vnto the Lorde sayinge: blessed be he, that hath kepte hys place vndefyled. As for Nycanors heade, he hanged it vpon the hye castell, for an euydente and playne token of the helpe of God. And so they agreed al together, to kepe that daye holye, namelye the thyrtene daye of the moneth Adar whych in the Syryans language is called the nexte day before Mardocheus day. Thus was Nycanor slayne, and frome that time forth the Jewes had the city in possessyon. And here wyll I nowe make an ende.

And so al the generations from Abraham to Dauid, are fourtene generations. And frō Dauid vnto the captyuite of Babylō, are fourtene generations. And frō the captiuyte of Babylō vnto Christ, are fourtene generations.

¶ The byrth of Jesus Christ was on this wyse. ✠ Whē his mother Mary was maryed to Joseph (before they came to dwell together) she was founde wyth chylde by the holy goost. Thē Joseph her husbande (because he was a ryghteous man, and wolde not put her to shame) he was mynded, preauelye to departe from her. But whyle he thus thought: beholde, the Aungell of the Lorde appeared vnto hym in a slepe, sayeng: Joseph, thou sonne of Dauid: feare not to take vnto the Marye thy wyfe. For that whyche is conceaued in her, commeth of the holye goost. She shall bringe forthe a sonne, and thou shalt cal his name *Jesus. For he shal saue hys people from theyr synnes. Phil.ii.b Acte.iiii.b

All this was done that it myght be fulfylled whych was spoken of the Lorde by the prophet sayeng: *Beholde, a mayde shal be wyth chyld, and shall bringe forth a sonne, and they shal cal hys name Emanuel, which yf a man interprete, it is as muche to saye, as God wyth vs. ✠ Esay.vii.c

And Joseph as sone as he awoke out of slepe, dyd as the angell of the Lorde had bydden hym: and he toke hys wyfe vnto hym, and knewe her not, tyll she had brought forth *her fyrst begotten sonne, and called his name Jesus. Luke.ii.a

¶ The tyme and place of Christes byrth, The wyse men offre theyr presētes. Christ flyeth into Egypte, ꝑ yonge chyldren are slayne. Christ turneth into Galile.

When ✠ Jesus was borne at Bethlem a cytie of Jewrye, in the tyme of Herode the kynge: Beholde, there came wyse men from the east to Jerusalē, sayenge: Where is he that is borne kynge of Jewes? For we haue sene hys *starre in the east, & are come to worshyp hym. Nu.xxiiii.a

When Herode the kynge had herde these thynges, he was troubled, and all the cytie of Jerusalem with hym. And whan he had gathered al the cheke prestes and scrybes of the people together, he demaunded of them, where Christ shuld be borne. And they sayd vnto hym: At Bethleē in Jewrye. For thus it is wrytten by the Prophete: *And thou Bethleem in the lande of Juda, art not the leest amōge the princes of Juda. For *out of the shall there come vnto me the captayne, that shall gouerne my people Israel. Mich. v.a Joh.vii.b.

Then Herode (when he had preuely called the wyse mē) he enquyred of them diligently what time the starre appeared, and he bad them go to Bethleem, and sayde: Go youre waye thyther, and searche dilygently for the chyld. And when ye haue founde hym, bringe me worde agayne that I maye come and worshyppe hym also.

✠ When they had hearde the kynge, they departed: and lo, the starre whyche they sawe in the easte, wente before them, tyll it came, and stode ouer the place, wherein the chylde was. When they sawe the starre, they were exceadynge glad: and went into the house, and found the chylde wyth Mary hys mother, *and fell downe flat and worshypped hym, and opened theyr treasures, and offered vnto hym gyftes, golde, frankynsense, and myrre. And after they were warned of God in slepe (that they shoulde not go agayne to Herode) they returned into theyr owne countre another waye. ✠ Isa.lxxi.a Esa.lx.b

Whē they were departed, beholde the angell of ꝯ Lorde appeared to Joseph in slepe, sayenge: aryse, & take the chylde & his mother, and flye into Egypt: & be thou there tyll I bryng ꝯ worde. ¶ For it wyll come to passe that Herode shall seke the chylde to destroye hym. So when he awoke he toke the childe and his mother by nyght, and departed into Egypte, and was there vnto the death of Herode, ꝯ it myght be fulfylled, whych was spoken of the Lorde by ꝯ prophet, sayinge: Osee.xi.a *out of Egypte haue I called my sonne. Mat.ii.c

Then Herode when he sawe that he was mocked of the wyse men, he was exceadynge wroth, and sent forth men of warre, and slue al the chyldren that were in Bethleem, and in all the coastes (as many as were two yeare olde or vnder) accordynge to the tyme, whych he had dilygently knowne of the wyse men.

Then was fulfylled that, which was spoken by the prophete Jerempe: where as he sayde: in Iere.xxxi.c Rama was there a voyce herde, *lamentation, weppynge, & great mournynge. Rachel weppyng for her chyldren, and wolde not be conforted be- D cause they were not. ✠ But when Herode was deade: beholde, ✠ an angel of the Lorde appeared in a slepe to Joseph, in Egypt, sayeng: aryse, and take the chylde and his mother, and go into Mar.i.b Luke.iii.d. Joh.i.d the lande of Israel, * for they are dead whyche sought the chyldes lyfe. And he arose, and toke the chylde and hys mother, and came into the lande of Israel. But when he herde that Archelaus dydraygne in Jewrye, in the rowme of his father Herode, he was afrayde to go thyther. Notwithstandynge, after he was warned of God in a slepe, he turned aside into the parties of Galile, and wente and dwelte in a cytie whych is called Nazareth: that it myght be fulfylled whyche was spoken by the Prophetes: he shalbe called a Nazaryte. ✠

A Mar.i.a. Luke.iii.a. John.iii.d ‡Mar.iiic *John.i.b In those dayes came Jhon the *Baptyst, preachynge in the wyldernes of Jewrye, and sayenge: ‡ Repente of the lyfe that is past, for the kyngdome of heauen is at hande. * For thys is he of whome the prophete Esaye spake, Esa.xl.a. whyche sayeth: * The voyce of a cryer in the wyldernes, prepare the waye of the Lorde: and make his pathes straycht. 25 ✠ But when he sawe many of the Pharyses and Saduces come to his baptyme, he sayd vnto them: * O generation of vypers, who hath Luke.iii.b taught you to flee frō the vengeaunce to come? Bryng forth therfore the frutes that belōge to repentaunce. And be not of such mynde that ye wolde saye with in your selues: we haue Abraham to oure father. For I saye to you, that God is able to bryng to passe, that of these stones ther shall ryse vp childrē vnto Abraham. Euē nowe is the axe also put vnto the rote of the trees: so ꝯ *euery tree which bringeth not forth good frute Mat.vii.c Luke.iii.b. is hewen downe, and cast into the fyre.

The.xiii. Chapter.

¶ The parable of the sede, of the tares, of the mustarde sede, of the leuen, of the treasure hyd in the felde, of the perles, and of the nette.

THe same daye went Jesus oute of A the house, * and sat by the see syde, Mar.iii.a and much people were gathered together vnto him, so greatly that he went, and sat in a shyppe, and al the people stode on the shore. And he spake many thynges to them by symplytudes, sayenge: Beholde, the sower went forth to sowe. And whan he sowed, some sedes fell by the wayes syde, and the fowles came and deuoured them vp. Some fel vpon stony places, where they had not much earth, and anone they spronge vp, because they had no depnesse of earthe: and when the sunne

was vp they caught heat, and because they had no rote, they wyddred awaye. Agayne, some fel amonge thornes, and the thornes spronge vp & choaked thē. But some fell into good ground, and brought forth frute: some an hundred folde, some sixtye folde, some thyrtye folde. Whosoeuer hath eares to heare, let hym heare.

B And the disciples came, and sayde vnto him: Why speakest thou to thē by parables? He answered and sayde vnto them: * it is geuen vnto you to knowe the secretes of the kyngdome of heauen, but vnto them it is not geuen. * For whosoeuer hath, to hym shall be geuen: and he shall haue aboundaunce. But whosoeuer hathe not: from hym shalbe taken awaye euen that also wyych he hath. Therfore speake I to thē by symilitudes: for they seyng, se not: and hearyng they heare not: nother do they vnderstand. And in them is fulfylled the Prophecye of Esayas, wyych sayeth: * wyth the eares ye shall heare, & shall not vnderstande: and seynge ye shal se, and shall not perceaue. For these peoples heartes is wexed grosse, & theyr eares are dull of hearynge and theyr eyes haue they closed, lest at any time they shulde se wyth theyr eyes, and heare wyth theyr eares, & shuld vnderstand with theyr hert and be conuerted, that I also myght heale thē.

* But blessed are youre eyes, for they se: and C youre eares, for they heare. Verely I saye vnto you, * that many Prophetes and rygteous mē haue desyred to se those thynges, wyche ye se, & haue not sene them: and to heare those thynges which ye heare, and haue not heard thē. * Heare ye therfore the symplytude of the sower. Whan one heareth the word of the kyngdome, and vnderstandeth it not, then commeth the eupll man and taketh awaye that wyche was sowen in hys herte: thys is he, wyche was sowen by the waye syde. But he that receaued the sede which was cast into stonye places, the same is he that heareth the worde, and anone wyth ioye receaueth it, yet hath he no roote in hym selfe, but dureth for a season: for whan trybulacyon or persecucyon happeneth because of the word, by and by he falleth. He also that receaueth sede into ꝑ thornes, is he that heareth the worde: and ꝑ care of thys worlde, and the dysceytfulnes of ryches choke vp the worde, and so is he made vnfrutefull. But he that receaueth sede into the good grounde is he that heareth the worde, and vnderstandeth it: wyche also beareth frute, and bryngeth forthe, some an hundreth folde, some sixtye folde, some thyrtye folde.

D Another symilytude put he forth vnto them, sayinge: ✠ * The kyngdome of heauen is lykened vnto a man, wyych sowed good seed in hys felde. But whyle men slepte, hys enemye came, and sowed tares amonge the wheate, and went hys waye. But when the blade was sprong vp and had brought forth frute, there appeared the tares also. So the seruauntes of the housholder came, and sayd vnto him. Syr dyddest not thou sowe good seed in thy felde? from whence then hath it tares? He sayd vnto thē, the enuious mā hath done this. The seruaūtes sayd vnto hym: wylt thou then that we go, and wede them vp? But he sayde: naye, lest whyle ye gather vp the tares ye plucke vp also the wheate wyth them, let both growe together vntyll the harueste, and in tyme of haruest, I wyl saye to the repers gather ye fyrst the tares, and bynde them together in sheues to be brent: but gather the wheate into my barne. ✠ Another parable put he forth vnto them, sayinge: * The kyngdome of heuē is lyke to a grayne of mustard seed, wyych a man toke and sowed in his felde, wyych is the leest of all the seedes. But when it is growne, it is the greatest amonge herbes, and is a tree: so that the byrdes of ꝑ ayer come, and make theyr nestes in the braunches therof.

E Another similitude spake he vnto thē: * The kyngdome of heauen is lyke vnto leuen, wyych a woman taketh and hydeth in thre peckes of meale, tyll all be leuened. * All these thynges spake Jesus vnto the people by symylytudes & wythout a parable spake he nothynge vnto thē: that it myght be fulfylled, wyche was spoken by the Prophet, that sayeth: * I wyll open my mouth in parables: I wyll speake forth thinges wyych haue bene kepte secrete from the begynnynge of the worlde. ✠ When the people were sent awaye, then came Jesus into the house.

✠ * And hys disciples came vnto hym, sayinge: declare vnto vs the parable of the tares of the felde. He answered, and sayde vnto them. He that soweth the good seed is the sonne of man. The felde is the worlde. And the chyldren of the kingdome they are the good seed: the tares are the chyldren of the wycked, the enemy that soweth them, is the deuyll. The haruest is the ende of the world: the reapers be the angels. Euen as the tares therfore are gathered & brent in the fyre: so shall it be in ꝑ ende of thys worlde. * The sonne of man shall sende forthe hys Angels, and they shal gather out of hys kyngdome F all thynges that offende, and them which do iniquite: and shall cast them into a furnes of fyre. There shalbe waylynge & gnaschynge of teth. * Then shal the ryghteous shyne as the Sunne in the kyngdome of theyr father. Whosoeuer hath eares to heare, let hym heare. ✠

✠ Agayne, ꝑ kyngdome of heauē is lyke vnto a treasure hyd in the felde the wyche a man hath founde and hyd: and for ioye therof goeth and selleth all that he hath, and byeth the felde.

Agayne the kyngdome of heauen is lyke vnto a marchaunt man sekynge goodly pearles, wyche (when he founde one precyous pearle) went and solde all that he had, and bought it.

Agayne the kyngdome of heauen is lyke vnto a net, ꝑ was cast into ꝑ see and gathered of al kynde * (of kyndes) wyche when it was full, men drewe to lād, & sat downe & gathered ꝑ good into vessels, but cast ꝑ bad awaye. So shal it be at G the ende of the worlde. The angels shall come & seuer the bad frō amonge ꝑ good, & shal cast thē into a furnace of fyre: * there shalbe waylyng & gnasching of teth. Jesus sayth vnto thē: haue ye vnderstande all these thynges? They saye vnto hym: yee Lorde. Then sayde he vnto thē. Therfore

¶ Joh̃ is taken and headed. Chzyſt fedeth fyue thouſande men with fyue loues and two fiſſhes, and appereth hym ſelfe vnto his diſcyples vpon the ſee.

A Mar.vi.b. Luke.ix.a. T that tyme *Herode the Tetrarcha heard of the fame of Jeſu, and ſayde vnto hys ſeruauntes: thys is John the baptiſt. He is ryſen from the deade, and therfoze are miracles Mark.vi.c wzought by hym. Foz Herode *had taken John Luke.iii.d. and bounde hym, and put hym in pziſon becauſe of Herodias, his bzother Philyppes wyfe. Foz Leu.xviii.c John ſayde vnto hym: *it is not lawfull foz the to haue her. And when he wolde haue put hym Mat.xxi.b to death, he feared ẏ people, *becauſe they counted hym as a Pzophete. But when Herodes Gene.xl.d *byzth daye was kepte, the doughter of Herodias daunſed befoze them, and pleaſed Herode. Mar.vi.c. *Wherfoze he pzomyſed wyth an othe, that he wolde geue her whatſoeuer ſhe wolde aſke.

And ſhe beinge inſtruct of her mother befoze ſayde: geue me here John Baptyſtes heade in a platter. And the kynge was ſozy. Neuertheles, foz the othes ſake, and them whyche ſat alſo at the table, he commaunded it to be geuẽ her: and ſent tozmentours, and behedded John in ẏ pzeſon, and his head was bzought in a platter, and geuen to ẏ damſel, and ſhe bzought it to her mother. And his diſciples cam and toke vp his bo- B dy, and buryed it: went, and tolde Jeſus.

Mar.vi.d When Jeſus hearde of it, he *departed thence Luke.ix.b in a ſhyppe vnto a deſert place, out of the waye. Joh.vii.a And when the people had herde therof, they folowed hym on fote and left the cyties. And Jeſus went fozth, and ſawe much people, and was moued wyth mercye towarde them, and he healed of them thoſe that were ſycke. And whẽ the euen dzewe on, his dyſcyples came to hym, ſayenge: thys is a deſerte place, and ẏ houre is now paſt, let the people depart, that they maye go into the townes, and bye thẽ vytaylles. But Je- ¶ ſus ſayde vnto thẽ. They haue no nede to go awaye. Geue ye thẽ to eate. They ſayd vnto him we haue here but .v. loues and two fyſches. He ſayd: bzyng thẽ hyther to me. And he cõmaunded the people to ſyt downe on the graſſe, & he toke the .v. loues & the .ii. fyſches, and lift vp his eyes towarde heauen and bleſſed. And whan he had broken them, he gaue the loaues to hys dyſciples, and his diſciples gaue them to ẏ people. And they dyd al eate, & were ſuffyſed. And when the people were ſent awaye, he *wẽt Luke.vi.e vp into a moũtayne to pzaye alone. And when nyght was come, he was there him ſelfe alone. But the ſhyp was nowe in the myddes of ẏ ſee, and was toſſe with waues, foz it was a cõtrary wynde. And in the fourth watche of the nyghte, Jeſus went vnto thẽ walkynge on the ſee. And whẽ the diſciples ſawe him walkynge on ẏ ſee, they were troubled, ſayinge: it is ſome ſpzete, & they cryed out foz feare. But ſtreyght waye, Jeſus ſpake vnto thẽ, ſaying: be of good cheare, it is I: be not afrayed. Peter anſwered hym, and ſayd: Lozde, yf it be thou, byd me come vnto the on the water. And he ſayd: come. And when Peter was come downe out of ẏ ſhyppe, he walked on the water, to go to Jeſus. But whẽ he ſawe a myghtye wynde, he was afrayed. And whẽ he beganne to ſyncke, he cryed, ſaying: Lozde ſaue me. And immediatly Jeſus ſtretched fozth hys hande, & caught hym, & ſayd vnto hym. O thou of lytell fayth, wherefoze dyddeſt thou doubte? Mark.vi.g *And whan they were come into the ſhyppe, ẏ D wynde ceaſed. Then they that were in ẏ ſhyppe came and wozſhypped him, ſayinge: of a truthe thou art the ſonne of God. And when they were gone ouer, they came into ẏ land of Geneſareth And when the men of the place had knowledge of hym, they ſent out meſſaungers into al ẏ coũtrey rounde about ẏ cooſt, & bzought vnto hym all that were ſycke, & beſought hym, that they myght touche the hemme of hys veſture onlye. And as many as touched it were made ſake.

¶ Chziſt excuſeth his diſcyples, & rebuketh the Scrybes and Pharyſes foz tranſgreſſynge Gods commaundemẽt, thozowe theyr owne tradycyons. The thynge that goeth into the mouth defyleth not the man. B And he called the people to hym, & sayd vnto thē, heare and vnderstande. That whiche goeth into ỹ mouth, defyleth not the mā: but ỹ whych commeth out of the mouth, defyleth the man.

Then came his disciples, and sayd vnto him: knowest thou not, that the Pharyses were offēded at thys sayenge? But he answered & sayde: Enery plante whyche my heauenly father hath not planted, shalbe plucked vp by the rootes. Let them alone, they be the blynd leaders of the blynde. Yf the blynde leade the blynde, bothe shall fall into the dytche. Then answered Peter and sayd vnto hym: declare vnto vs this parable. Jesus sayd: are ye also yet without vnderstandynge? do not ye yet vnderstand, that what soeuer entreth in at the mouthe, goeth into the bely, & is cast oute into the draught? But those thynges whych procede out of the mouth, come forth from the herte, and they defyle ỹ man. For out of ỹ hert procede euell thoughtes, murders, breaking of wedlocke, whordoms, thefftes, false wytnesse, blasphemyes. These are the thynges whych defyle a man. But to take meate wyth vnwaschen handes, defyleth not a man. ✠

C ✠ And Jesus went thence, & departed into ỹ coastes of Tyre and Sydon, and beholde a woman of Canaan (whyche came oute of the same coastes) cryed vnto hym sayeng: haue mercy on me O Lorde, thou sonne of Dauid: My doughter is pyteously vexed with a deuell. But he answered her nothynge at al, & his disciples came and besought him, sayenge: sende her away, for she cryeth after vs: But he answered, and sayd:

He answered and sayd: it is not mete, to take the chyldrens breade, and to cast it to dogges. She answered and sayde: truthe Lorde, for the dogges eate of the crommes, which fal from theyr masters table. Then Jesus answered and sayd vnto her: O woman, greate is thy fayth, be it vnto the, euen as thou wylt. And her doughter was made whole euen at that same tyme. ✠

D And Jesus went a waye frō thence, and came nye vnto the see of Galile, and wente vp into a mountayne, and sat downe there. And muche people came vnto hym, bryngynge wyth them those that were lame, blynde, deafe, maymed, and other many: and cast them downe at Jesus Esa.xxxv.d fete. * And he healed them: in so muche, that the people wondered, whan they sawe the domme speake, the maymed to be whole, the lame to walke, and the blynde to se. And they glorifyed the God of Israel.

Mar.viii.a * Then Jesus called his disciples vnto hym, and sayd: I haue compassiō on ỹ people, because they contynue wyth me nowe thre dayes, and haue nothynge to eate: and I wyll not let them departe fastynge, lest they myscary by ỹ waye. And hys dysciples sayde vnto hym: Whence shulde we get so muche breade in the wyldernes as to suffyce so greate a multytude? And Jesus sayeth vnto them: howe many loaues haue ye? And they saye: * seuen, and a fewe lytle fyshes. Mat.xv.b And he commaunded the people to syt downe on the grounde: and toke the seuen loaues, and the fyshes: and after that he had geuen thankes he brake them, and gaue to hys dysciples, and the disciples gaue them to the people. And they dyd all eate, and were suffyced. And they toke vp (of the broken meate that was lefte) seuen basketes full. And yet they that dyd eate were iiii. M. men, besyde women and chyldren. And he sent awaye the people, and toke shyppe, and came into the partes of Magdala.

¶ Mar. ix. a *And he went agayn vnto the see, and all the people resorted vnto hym, and he taught them. And as Jesus passed by, he sawe Leui the sonne of Alphe, syttyng at the receyte of custome, and sayd vnto hym: folowe me. And he arose, and folowed hym. And it came to passe that whan Jesus sate at meate in hys house, many publycans and synners sat also together at meate with Jesus and his disciples. For ther were many, that folowed hym. And whē the Scrybes and Pharyses sawe hym eate wyth publycans and synners, they sayd vnto hys dyscypples: howe happeneth it, that he eateth, & drynketh wyth publycans and synners? When Jesus heard that, he sayde vnto them: They that be whole, haue no nede of the Physycyon, but they that are sycke. * I came not to call the ryghteous, but synners to repentaunce.

And in those dayes dyd he eate nothynge. And when they were ended, he afterwarde hongred. And the deuell sayd vnto hym: yf thou be the sonne of God, commaunde thys stone that it be bread. And Jesus answered him Deut.viii.a Mat.iiii.a sayenge: It is wrytten, * man shall not lyue by bread only, but by euery worde of God.

And the deuell toke hym into an hye mountayne, and shewed hym all the kyngdoms of the worlde, euen in the twyncklynge of an eye. And the deuell sayde vnto hym: all thys power wyll B I geue the euery whyte, and the glory of them: for they are delyuered vnto me, and to whom so euer I wyll, I geue it. Yf thou therfore wylt fal downe before me and worshyp me, they shalbe all thyne. Jesus answered and sayde vnto hym: hence from me Sathan. For it is wrytten: Deut.vi.c and.x.d. Mat.iiii.b * Thou shalt worshyp the Lorde thy God, and hym onely shalt thou serue.

And he caryed hym to Jerusalem, and set him on a pynacle of the temple, and sayd vnto hym: yf thou be ỹ sonne of God, caste thy selfe downe Psa.xci.c Mat.iiii.a from hens. For it is wrytten: * he shall geue his angels charge ouer the, to kepe the, and in theyr handes they shall beare the vp, that thou daschest not thy fote agaynst a stone. And Jesus answered, and sayde vnto hym, it is sayde: * thou shalt Deut.vi.c Mat.iiii.b not tempte the Lorde thy God. And as sone as all the tẽptacyon was ended, the deuell departed from hym, for a season.

C ✠ And Jesus returned by the power of the spyrete, into Galile, & there wente a fame of hym thorowe out all the regyon. And he taughte in theyr Synagoges, & was commended of al mē.

Mat.xiii.g Mar.vi.a * And he came to Nazareth, where he was noursed and (as hys custome was) he went into the Synagoge on the Sabboth daye, and stode vp for to reade. And there was delyuered vnto Is.lxi.viii.b hym the booke of the Prophete Esaye. * And when he had opened the booke, he founde the ‡Esa.lxi.a place, where it was wrytten. ‡ The spyrete of the Lorde vpon me, because he hath anoynted me: to preache the Gospell to the poore, he hath sent me: to heale the broken herted, to preach delyueraunce to the captyue, and syghte to the blynde: frely to set at lyberty them that are bruised, and to preache the acceptable yeare of the Lorde.

D And he closed the booke, and gaue it agayne to the mynyster, and sat downe. And the eyes of al them that were in the Synagoge were fastened on him. And immediatly she arose and mynystred vnto them.

When the Sunne was downe, all they that G had sycke, taken wyth dyuers dyseases, brought them vnto hym: and he layd hys handes on euery one of them, and healed them. * And deuels Mar.i.a and.iii.d also came out of many, crycge and sayeng: thou art Christ the sonne of God. And he rebuked them, and suffred them not to speake: for they knewe that he was Christ.

As sone as it was daye, he departed, & wente into a deserte place, and the people sought hym and came to hym, and kepte hym that he shulde not departe from them. And he sayd vnto them I must preache the kyngdome of Gōd to other cyties also: ✠ for therfore am I sent. And he preached in the Synagoges of Galyle.

A IT came to passe that (when the people preassed vpon hym, to heare the worde of God) he stode by the lake
Mar. iiii. a of Genezareth: * & sawe two shyppes stande by the lake syde, but the fyshermē were gone out of them, and were washynge theyr nettes. And he entred into one of ỹ shyppes (whych pertayned to Symon) & prayed hym that he wolde thrust oute a lytell from the lande. And he sat downe and taught ỹ people oute of the shyppe. When he had lefte speakynge, he sayd vnto Symon: Launche out into the depe, and let slyppe youre nettes to make a draught. And Symon answered and sayde vnto him: Master, we haue laboured al nyght, and
B haue taken nothynge. Neuertheless, at thy commaundemente I wyll lose forth the nette. And when they had thys done, they inclosed a greate multytude of fysches. But theyr nette brake, & they beckened to theyr felowes (whyche were in the other shyppe) that they shulde come, & helpe them. And they came, and fylled both the shyppes that they soncke agayne.

Whē Symon Peter sawe this, he fell downe at Jesus knees, sayenge: Lorde, go from me, for I am a synfull man. For he was astonyed, and all that were wyth hym, at the draught of fysches, whych they had takē: & so was also James and Jhon the sonnes of Zebede, which were parteners wyth Symō. And Jesus sayd vnto Symon: feare not, from hencforth thou shalt catch men. And they brought the shyppes to lande,
Mat. iiii. d *and forsoke all and folowed hym.

C *And it fortuned that when he was in a cer-

Mar. i. d prosye, and when he had spyed Jesus, he fell flat on hys face, and besought hym, sayenge: Lorde yf thou wilt thou canst make me cleane. And he stretched forth hys hand, and touched hym, sayenge: I wyll, be thou cleane. And immediatly ỹ leprosy departed frō hym. And he charged hym, Leui. xiii. a that he shulde tell no man: but go (sayeth he) * & shewe thy selfe to the preaste, and offer thy clensynge accordynge as Moses commaunded, for a wytnes vnto them.

But so much the more wente there a fame abrode of hym, and muche people came together to heare, and to be healed of hym of theyr infyrmyties. And he kept him out of the waye in the wyldernesse, and gaue hym selfe to prayer.

D ✠ And it happened on a certayne daye: that he taught, and there sat the Pharyses and doctoures of the lawe, whyche were come out of all the townes of Galile and Jewrye, and Jerusalem. And the power of the Lorde was presente,
Mat. ix. a to heale them. * And beholde, men brought in a
Mar. ii. a bed, a man whych was taken wyth a palsy, and they sought meanes to bringe hym in, & to laye hym before hym. And when they could not fynd on what syde they myghte bringe hym in (because of the preasse) they went vpō the toppe of the house and let hym downe thorowe ỹ tylyng bed and all, euen in the myddes before Jesus.

E When he sawe theyr fayth, he sayde vnto hym: man thy synnes are forgeuen the. And ỹ Scribes and Pharyses began to thynke, sayeng: What felowe is thys, which speaketh blasphemye? * who can forgeue synnes but God only? Mar. ii. e Esa. xliii. c and. xliiii. d

But when Jesus perceaued theyr thoughtes he answered, and sayd vnto thē: What thynke ye in youre hertes? Whether is easyer to saye: thy synnes be forgeuen the, or to saye: ryse vp, and walke? * But that ye maye knowe that the Mat. ix. a sonne of man hath power to forgeue synnes on Mar. ii. c. earth, he sayde to the sycke of the palsye: I saye Actes. iii. a vnto the: aryse, take vp thy bedde, and go vnto and. iv. c thy house. And immedyatlye he rose vp before them, and toke vp hys bed (wheron he laye) and departed to hys owne house, prayesynge God. And they were all amased, & they gaue the glory vnto God. And were fylled wt feare, sayeng: We haue sene straunge thynges to daye. ✠

* And after thys, he went forthe, and sawe a F
Publycane named Leui, syttyng at the receyte Math. ix. a of custome, and he sayde vnto hym: folowe me. Mar. ii. b And he lefte all, and rose vp, and folowed hym: And Leuy made hym a great feast in his owne house. And there was a great company of Publycans and of other that sate at meate with thē. * And ỹ Scrybes and Pharyses murmured a- Math. ix. a gaynst hys dysciples, sayenge: Why do ye eate Mar. ii. b and drynke with Publycans and synners? And Luke. vii. c Jesus answered & sayd vnto them: They that and. xv. a are whole, nede not the Physicion: but they that are sycke. I came not to call the ryghteous, but synners to repentaunce.

And they sayd vnto hym: * Why do the disci- G
ples of Jhon fast often, and praye, and the disci- Math. ix. b ples of ỹ Pharyses also, but thyne eat & drynke Mar. ii. c he sayde vnto them: * Can ye make the chyldrē Math. ix. b of the weddynge fast, whyle the brydegrome is Mar. ii. c wyth thē? The dayes wyl come, whē the brydegrome also shalbe taken awaye from thē: then shall they fast in those dayes.

He spake also vnto thē a similitude. No man putteth a pece of a newe garmente, into an olde vesture, for yf he do, then breaketh he the newe, and the pece that was taken out of the newe, agreeth not with the olde. And no man powreth newe wyne into olde bottels. For yf he do, the newe wyne wyll burste the bottels, & runne out it selfe, and the bottels shall perysshe. But newe wyne must be put into newe bottels, and bothe are preserued. No man also that drynketh olde wyne, straycht waye can away wyth newe: for he sayeth: the olde is better.

¶ He healeth the captaynes seruaunt, rayseth ꝑ widowes sonne, enkourmeth the dysciples, whome Jhon Baptiste sent vnto hym, cõmendeth Jhon, reproueth the Jewes & eateth wyth the Pharyse. The woman washeth hys fete wyth her teares, and he forgeueth her, her synnes.

A Mat. viii a Joh. iiii. f

When he had ended all hys sayenges in the audyence of the people, * he entred into Capernaum. And a certayne Centurions seruaunt whych was deare vnto hym, laye sycke, & was in parell of death. And when he herde of Jesu, he sent vnto hym the elders of the Jewes, beseechynge hym that he wolde come, and heale his seruaunt. And when they came Jesus, they besought hym instantlye, sayenge: He is worthy that thou shouldest do thys for hym. For he loueth our nacyon, and hath buylt vs a synagoge And Jesus went wyth them.

And when he was nowe, not farre from the house, the Centurion sent frendes to hym, sayenge vnto him: * Lord, trouble not thy selfe: for Mat. viii a B I am not worthy that thou shouldest enter vnder my rooke. Wherfore I thought not my selfe worthy to come vnto the: but saye thou ꝑ word and my seruaunt shalbe whole. For I also am a man set vnder power, and haue vnder me soudyers, and I saye vnto one go, and he goeth, and to another, come and he cometh: and to my seruaunt, do thys, and he doth it. Whē Jesus herd thys, he maruayled at hym, and turned hym aboute and sayd to the people that folowed hym: I say vnto you, I haue not foũde so great fayth no, not in Israel. And they ꝑ were sente, turned backe home agayne, and founde the seruaunte whole that had bene sycke.

C ✠ And it fortuned after thys, that he wente into a cytie, whych is called Naim, and many of hys disciples went with him, and much people. B And Zache stode forthe, and sayde vnto the Lorde: beholde Lord, the halfe of my goodes I geue to the poore, and yf I haue done any man wronge, I restore hym fourefolde. Jesus sayde vnto hym: thys daye is healthy happened vnto thys house, because that he also is become the *mat.xv.b chylde of Abraham. * For the sonne of man is come to seke, & to saue that whych was lost.

And as they herde these thynges he added therto a parable, because he was nye to Jerusalem, and because they thought, that the kyngedome of God shulde shortly appeare. He sayde therfore: *a certayne noble man went into a *mat.xx.b Mar.xiii.b farre countre, to receaue hym a kyngdome, and to come agayne. And he called hys ten seruauntes, and deliuered them ten pounde, sayeng vnto them: Occuppye tyl I come. But his citesyns hated hym, & sent a message after hym, sayeng: we wyll not haue thys man to raygne ouer vs.

C And it came to passe, that whan he had receaued his kyngdome, he returned, & commaunded these seruauntes to be called vnto hym (to whō he had geuen the money) to wyt howe muche euery man had done. Thē came the fyrst, sayeng Lord, thy pound hath gayned ten pounde. And another came sayenge: Lorde, thy pounde hath made fyue poūde. And to the same he said be thou also ruler ouer fyue cyties.

D And another came sayeng: Lord, beholde here is thy pounde, whych I haue kept in a napkin: for I feared the, because thou art a strayt mā: thou takest vp that thou laydeste not downe, & reapest that thou dyddest not sowe. The sycke man answered hym: Syr, I haue no man when the water is troubled, to put me into the pole: But in ỹ meane tyme, whyle I am aboute to come, another steppeth downe before me.

Jesus sayth vnto hym: * ryse, take vp thy bed and walke. And immediatlye the mā was made whole, and toke vp hys bed, and walked. And ỹ same daye was the Sabboth. The Jewes therfore sayde vnto hym, that was made whole: It is the Sabboth daye, it is not lawfull for the to carye thy bed. He answered them: he that made me whole, sayde vnto me: Take vp thy bed, and walke. Then asked they hym: What man is that, whyche sayde vnto the: take vp thy bedde and walke. And he that was healed, wyste not who it was. For Jesus had gotten hym selfe awaye, because that ther was preasse of people in that place.

But we beleue, that thorowe the grace of the Lorde Jesu Chryste, we shalbe saued, as they do. Then all the multitude was pesed and gaue audience to Barnabas and Paul, whyche tolde what signes and wondres God had shewed amonge the Gentyls by them.

C And when they held theyr peace, James answered, sayinge: Men and brethren, herken vnto me. Simeon tolde, howe God at ỹ begynning dyd visyt the gētyles, to receaue of thē a people in hys name. And to this agree the wordes of ỹ prophetes, as it is wrytten: *After thys I wyl Amos.ix.d returne, and wyll buylde agayne the tabernacle of Dauid, whyche is fallen downe and that whych is fallen in decaye of it, wyll I buylde agayne, and I wyll set it vp, that the residue of men myghte seke after the Lorde and also the Gentyles vpō whom my name is named, sayth the Lorde, whych doth al these thynges: knowē vnto God are all hys workes from the begynnynge of the worlde. Wherfore my sentence is that we trouble not them: whyche from among the Gentyles, are turned to God: but that we wryte vnto them, that they abstayne them selues * from fylthynes of ymages, and from for- *Exo.xx.b nicacyon, and from straungled, and ‡frō bloude ‡Gen.ix.a Leu.iii.c For Moses of olde tyme hath in euery cyty thē and.xvii.d that preache hym, in the synagoges, when he is red euery Sabboth daye. Then pleased it the Apostles and elders with the whole congregacion, to sende chosen men of theyr owne compayne to Antioche wyth Paul and Barnabas. They sent *Judas (whose syr- *Jo.xiii.a name was Barsabas) and Sylas, which were chefe men amonge the brethren, and gaue them letters in theyr handes after thys maner.

The Apostles, and elders and brethren sende gretinges vnto the brethren whyche are of the Gentyles in Antioche, Syria and Cilicia. For as moche as we haue heard, ỹ certayne whyche E departed from vs, haue troubled you with wordes, and combred your myndes, saying: Ye muste be circumcised, and kepe the lawe, to whom we gaue no suche commaundement: It semed therfore to vs a good thinge, when we were come together wyth one accorde, to sende chosen men vnto you, wyth oure beloued Barnabas and Paule, men that haue ieoparded their liues for the name of our Lorde Jesus Chryst. We haue sent therfore Judas and Sylas, which shall also tell you the same thynges by mouthe. For it semed good to the holy goost & to vs, to charge you with no more, then these necessarye thinges that is to saye, that ye abstayne from thynges offered to ymages, and from bloude, and from stragled, & frō fornicaciō. Frō whych yf ye kepe your selues, ye shall do well. So feare ye wel.

When they therfore were departed, they F came to Antioche and gathered the multitude together, and deliuered the epystle. Which whē they hadde red, they reioyced of the consolacyon. And Judas and Sylas beynge Prophetes, exhorted the brethrē wt much preaching, and strēgthed them. And after they hadde taryed there a space, they were let go in peace of the brethren vnto the Apostles. But after a certayne space, Paule sayde vn- G to Barnabas: let vs go agayne, and visite our brethren in euery cyte where we haue shewed the worde of the Lorde, and se howe they do.

And the contencyon was so sharp betwene thē, that they departed asunder one from the other and so Barnabas toke Marcke, & sayled vnto Cypers. And Paul chose Silas, and departed beynge committed of ỹ brethren vnto the grace of God. And he went thorow Cilicia and Cilicia ✠ stablyshyng the congregacyons:✠(commaundyng to kepe the preceptes of the Apostles and elders.)

¶ Timothy is circumcysed. Paul preacheth at Philippos, and there is he put in prison.

THen came he to Derba and to Listra And beholde, a certayn disciple was there named Timotheus a womans sonne which was a Jewesse and beleued: but hys father was a Greke. Of whome reported well the brethren that were at Lystra and Iconium. Hym wolde Paul that he shulde go forth wyth hym, and toke and circumcysed hym, because of the Jewes which were in those quarters: for they knewe all, that hys father was a Greke. As they went thorowe the cities they delyuered them ỹ decrees for to kepe, that Actes.xv.e were * ordeyned of the Apostles and elders, whyche were at Jerusalē. And so were the congregacyons stablysshed in the fayth, and encreased in nombre dayly.

¶ Whē they had gone thorow out Phrigia: and Roma.i.c the region of Galacia, and * were forbydden of the holy goost to preache the worde in Asia, they came to Mysya, and soughte to goo into Bethynia. But the spyrite suffred them not: but whan they had gone thorow Mysya, they came Act.xviii.e downe to * Troada. And a vision appeared to Paule in the nyght. Ther stode a man of Macedonia and prayed hym, sayenge: come into ¶ Macedonia, and helpe vs. After he had sene the vision, immediatly we prepared to go into Macedonia, beynge certifyed that the Lorde hadde called vs, for to preache the Gospell vnto them. Whan we lowsed forthe then from Troada, we came with a straite course to Samothracia & the nexte day to Neapolin, and from thence to Philippos whyche is ỹ cheke cytie in the partes of Macedonia, and a fre cytie. We were in that citie abydyng certayne dayes. And on the Sabboth dayes we went oute of the cytie besydes a ryuer, where men were woynt to praye. And we sate downe, and spake vnto the wemen whiche resorted thyther. And a certayn womā (named Lidia) a seller of purple, of the cytye of Thyatria, whych worshypped God, gaue vs audiēce. Whose hert the Lorde opened, that she attēded vnto the thynges, whyche Paul spake. The same folowed Paule and vs and cryed, sayenge: * these men are the Marke.v.a. seruauntes of the moost hye God, whych shew vnto vs the waye of saluacyon. And thys dyd she many dayes, But Paule not contēt, turned aboute, and sayd to the spyrete. I cōmaunde the *in ỹ name of Jesu Christ, that thou come oute Mat.xvi.d of her. And he came out the same houre.

And when her master and mastres sawe that *ỹ hope of their gaynes was gone, they caught *Act.xix.e Paule and Sylas, and drewe thē into the market place vnto the rulers and brought them to the offycers sayenge. These men trouble oure ℰ cytie seynge they are Jewes and preache ordinances, whych are not lawfull for vs to receaue, neyther to obserue, seynge we are Romaynes. And the people ranne agaynst them, and the offycers rente theyr clothes, and commaūded thē to * be beaten with roddes. And when they had 2.Cor.xi.e beaten them sore, they cast thē into prysон, commaundynge the iayler of the prison to kepe thē diligently: Whyche when he had receaued such cōmaundement, thrust them into the inner prison, and made theyr fete fast in the stockes.

At mydnyght Paule and Sylas prayed, and ℳ lauded God. And the prisoners hearde them. And sodenly ther was a greate earthquake, so that the foundaciō of the prison was shaken, & *immediatly al the dores opened & euery mans Actes.b.b bandes were loosed. When the keper of the pri- and.xii.b son waked out of hys slepe and sawe the prison dores opē, he drewe out hys swerd & wold haue kylled him selfe supposynge that the prisoners had bene fled. But Paul cried with a loud voice sayinge: do thy selfe no harme, for we are al here Then he called for a lyght, & sprang in, and came trembling vnto Paule, & fell downe at the fete of Paul, and Sylas, & brought thē out, & sayde Syrs *what muste I do to be saued? And they *Luk.xv.a sayd: ‡beleue on the Lord Jesus and thou shalt Actes.xi.f be saued & thy housholde. And when it was daye, the officers sent the ministers, sayenge: let those men go. The keper of the prison tolde thys sayinge to Paule, the offycers haue sent worde to loose you. Nowe therefore, get you hence and go in peace. Then sayd Paule vnto them: they haue beaten vs openlye vncondemned, for all that we are Romaynes, and haue cast vs into prison: and now wolde they sende vs away preuely? ¶The.xvii.Chapter.

¶Paul cōmeth to Thessalonica, where the Jewes set the cytie on a roze. Paule escapeth & cōmeth to Athens wher he preacheth the true and vnknowen God.

NOw they made their iourney thorow Amphipolis: and Apollonia, they came to Thessalonica, where was a Synagoge of the Jewes. And Paule (as hys maner was) wente in vnto them, and thre Saboth dayes declared out of the scripture vnto them, openyng and allegynge, that *Christe must nedes haue suffred, and rise agayne from deathe, & that thys Jesus was Christ, whome (sayde he) I preache to you. And *some of them beleued, and came and companyed wyth Paule and Sylas, & of the deuōte Gzekes a greate multitude, and of the chefe wemen not a fewe.

But the Jewes whych beleued not, had indygnacyon and toke vnto thē euell men, whych were vagabondes, and gathered a cōpanye, and set all the cytie on a roare, & made assaute vnto ỹ house of Jason, & sought to brynge them out to the people. And when they fouude thē not, they drewe Jason, & certayne bretheren vnto the heades of the cytie, crienge: these that trouble the worlde, are come hyther also, whom Jason hath receaued prevely. *And these all do contrarye to the decrees of Cesar, affirmynge another kynge one Jesus. And they troubled the people, and the officers of the cytie, whē they hearde these thynges. And whē they were sufficientlye answered of Jason, & of the other, they let them go.

And the bretheren immediatlye sent awaye Paul & Sylas by nyght vnto Berrea. Whyche when they were come thyther, they entred into the Synagoge of the Jewes. These were the noblest of byrth amōge thē of Thessalonica, which receaued the word with all dylygence of mynd, and searched *ỹ scriptures dayly, whether those thinges were euen so. And many of thē beleued: also of worshypful wemē whych were Gzekes, and of men not a fewe. Whē the Jewes of Thessalonica had knowledge ỹ the word of God was preached of Paul at Berrea: they came & moued the people there. And then immediatly the bretheren sent away Paul to go as it were to the see but *Sylas and Tymotheus abode there styll.

And they ỹ guyde Paul, brought hym vnto Athens & receaued a cōmaundement vnto Sylas and Timotheus, for to come to hym with spede & came theyr way. Whyle Paul wayted for thē at Athēs, hys spryte was moued in hym, whē he sawe the cytie geuē to worshipping of ymages. Then dysputed he in the synagoge wyth the Jewes, and wyth the deuout personnes: and in the market daylye wyth them that came vnto hym by chaunce: Certayne Philosophers of the Epicures & of the Stoyckes, dysputed wyth hym. And some ther were which sayd: what wyl this babler saye? Other sayde: he semeth to be a tydynges bringer of newe deuels, because he preacheth vnto thē Jesus and the resurrection. And they toke hym, & brought him into Marce strete sayenge: maye we not knowe what thys newe doctryne wherof thou speakest, is? For ỹ bryngest straunge tydynges to our eares. We wolde know therfore, what these thynges meane. For all the Athenians and straungers which where there, gaue thē selues to nothynge els, but ether to tell, or to heare some newe thynge.

Paule stode in the myddes of Marce strete, & sayde: ye men of Athens, I perceaue that in all thynges ye are superstycyous. For as I passed by, and behelde the maner howe ye worshyppe youre goddes, I founde an aulter wherein was wrytten: vnto the vnknowen God. Whome ye then ignorantelye worshyp, hym shewe I vnto you: *God that made the worlde and al that are in it (seynge that he is Lorde of heauen & earth) ‡dwelleth not in temples made with handes, neither is worshypped wyth mennes handes, as though he neded of any thyng, seyng he himselfe *geueth lyfe and brethe to all men euery where and hath made of one bloude all nacions of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath assygned before, howe longe tyme, and also the endes of theyr inhabytacyon, that they shoulde seke God, yf they myghte fele and fynde hym, thoughe he be not farre from euerye one of vs. For in hym we lyue, moue, and haue our beyng, as certayne of youre owne Poetes sayde: For we are also hys generacyon. For as muche then as we are the generacion of God, we ought not to thynke that the Godhead is lyke vnto golde, syluer, or stone, grauen by crafte and ymagynacyon of man.

*And the tyme of this ignorannce God regarded not. * But nowe byddeth all men euerye where repente because he hath appoynted a day in the whyche he wyll iudge the worlde wyth ryghteousnesse, by that man by whome he hath appoynted, and hathe offered fayth to all men, after that he had rayled hym from death.

When they hearde of the resurrecyon from death, some mocked, & other sayd: we wyll heare the agayne of this matter. So Paule departed from amonge thē. Howebeit certayne men claue vnto hym and beleued: amonge the whyche was Dyonysyus a senatoure, and a woman named Damaris, and other wyth them.

¶Paule preacheth at Corinthum continuyng there a yeare and a halfe, goeth agayne into Syria, commeth to Ephesus Cesarea and Antioche. Of Apollos Aquila and Priscilla.

AFter this, Paul departed frō Athens and came to Corinthū, & founde a certayne Jewe named *Aquila, borne in Pōthus, lately come frō Italie, wyth his wyfe Priscilla (because that the Emperoure Claudius had cōmaunded all Jewes to departe from Rome) and he drewe vnto them, because he was of the same crafte, he abode wyth them, and wrought: theyr crafte was to make tētes.

iudgemente seate, sayenge: thys felowe counce-leth men to worshyp God contrary to the lawe.
And when Paule nowe was aboute to open his

*Mar.i.a And many that beleued, came, and *confessed and shewed theyr workes. Many of them whyche vsed curyous craftes: brought theyr bokes, and burned them before all men, and they counted the pryce of them, and founde it fyftye thousande sylueringes. So myghtely grewe the worde of God and preuayled. After these thinges were ended, Paule purposed in ỹ spryte (whā he had passed ouer Macedonia & Achaia) to go to Jerusalem, sayinge: after I haue bene ther I must also se Rome. So sent he into Macedonia two of them that mynistred vnto hym euen Timotheus and Erastus: but he him selfe remayned in Asia for a season.

The same tyme there arose no lytel adoo about that way. For a certayne man named Demetrius, a syluer smyth (whyche made syluer shrynes, for Diana) was not a lytel beneficiall vnto the craftes mē. Whom he called together with the workemen of lyke occupaciō, and said Syrs, ye know that by thys craft * we haue aduantage. So that not onely thys our crafte cometh into parel to be set at nought: but also that the temple of the greate goddesse Diana shuld be despysed, and her magnificence shulde be destroyed, whom all Asia and the worlde worshyppeth.

When they hearde these sayenges they were full of wrath, and cryed out, sayinge: Greate is Diana of the Ephesians: And all the cytie was on a roze, and they rushed into the comen hall wyth one assent, and caught Gaius & Aristarcus men of Macedonia, Paules companions.

When Paule wold haue entred in vnto the people, the disciples suffred him not. But certayne of the chefe of Asia (which were his frendes) sēt vnto hym, desyrynge hym, that he wolde not preasse into the comē hall. Some therfore cryed one thyng and some another, and the congregacyon was all out of quyete, and the more parte knewe not wherfore they were come together.

Some of the company drue for the Alexander, the Jewes thrustynge hym forwardes, Alexander *beckened wyth the hande, and wolde haue geuen the people an answere. When they knew that he was a Jewe, there arose a shoute almoste for the space of two houres, of al men, cryenge: greate is Diana of the Ephesians.

*Act.xix.g

When the towne clarke had ceased the people, he sayde: ye men of Ephesus, what man is it that knoweth not that the cytie of the Ephesyans is a worshypper of the great goddesse Diana, of the ymage whyche came from heauen. Seinge then that no man saith here against, ye ought to be content, and to do nothynge rashly for ye haue brought hyther these men: whyche are nether robbers of churches nor yet despisers of your goddesse. Wherfore, yf Demetrius and the craftes men whyche are wyth hym, haue a matter agaynst any man, the lawe is open, and there are rulers, lette them accuse one another. But yf ye go aboute any other thynge, it shalbe determined in a lawful congregacyon. For we are in ieopardy to be accused of thys dayes vproure, for as moche as there is no cause, wherby we maye geue a reckenynge of thys concourse of people. And when he hadde thus spoken, he let the congregacyon departe.

The.xx. Chapter.

After that ỹ rage was ceased, Paule called the disciples vnto hym, and toke his leaue of them, and departed for to go into Macedonia. And whē he hadde gone ouer those partyes, and hadde geuen them a longe exhortacyon, he came into Grece and there abode. iii. monethes, And when the Jewes layd wayt for hym as he was about to sayle into Syria, he purposed to returne thorow Macedonia. ged. To the Iewes haue I no harme done, as thou very well knowest: Yf I haue hurte them, or commytted any thynge worthy of deathe, I refuse not to dye. Yf none of these thynges are, wherof they accuse me, no man may delyuer me to them. I appeale vnto Cesar. Then spake Fe-

C The.xxvi.Chapter.

C Kynge Agryppa heareth Paul, which telleth hym hys callynge from the begynnynge.

AGrippa sayd vnto Paule: thou art permytted to speake for thy selfe. Thē Paul stretched forth the hand, and answered for him selfe: I thynke my selfe happye kynge Agrippa, because I shal answere thys daye before the,
of all thothynges wherof I am accused of the Iewes: namely because thou arte expert in all customes and questions whych are amonge the Iewes. Wherfore I beseche the, to heare me pacyently.

My lyuynge that I haue leade of a chylde cyon at Ierusalem) knowe all the Iewes which knewe me from the begynnynge, yf they wolde testifye. *For after the moost strayteste secte of our relygyon, I lyued a Pharysey. And nowe I stande and *am iudged for the hope of the promes made of God vnto our fathers: vnto which promes our twelue trybes (instantly seruynge

Iewes. Why shulde it be thoughte a thynge incredyble vnto you, that God shuld rayse agayne the dead? I also verely thought in my selfe that I ought to do many contrarye thynges, cleane agaynst the name of Iesus of Nazareth *which thynge I also dyd in Ierusalē. And many of the sayntes dyd I shut vp in prison, and had recea-ued auctholite of the hye prestes. And when they were put to death, I gaue the sentēce. And I punysshed them oft in euery Synagoge, and com-

Wherfore (O kynge Agrippa) I was not dysobedyent vnto the heauenlye vysyon: but
E shewed fyrst vnto them of Damasco, and at Ierusalem, and thorow out all the coastes of Iewrye, and then to the Gentyles that they shulde repent and turne to God, and do suche workes as become them that repent. For this cause the Iewes caughte me in the temple, and wente aboute to kyll me. Seynge therfore that I haue obtayned helpe of God: I continue vnto thys daye, wytnessynge both to small and to greate, sayeng none other thinges, thā those which the prophetes and Moses dyd say shuld come: that Chryste shulde suffer, and that he shulde be the fyrst that shuld ryse from death and shuld shewe lyghte vnto the people, and to the Gentyles,

F much learnyng doth make the made. And Paul sayde: I am not mad (moost deare Festus) but speake forth the wordes of trueth and sobernes For the kyng knoweth of these thinges, before whom also I speake frely: neyther thynke I ỳ any of these thynges are hydden from hym. For thys thynge was not done in a corner. Kynge Agrippa beleuest thou the Prophetes? I wote wel ỳ thou beleuest. Agrippa sayde vnto Paul: Somewhat thou bryngest me in mynde for to become Christen. And Paule sayde: I wolde to God ỳ not onely thou: but also al that heare me
G to daye were, not somwhat onely but all together, suche as I am, excepte these bondes. And when he hadde thus spoken, the kynge rose vp, and the debite, and Bernice, and they that sat wyth them. And when they were gone aparte, they talked betwene them selues, sayinge. This man doth nothynge worthy of death, or of bondes, Then sayde Agrippa vnto Festus: Thys man myght haue bene let loose, yf he hadde not appealed vnto Cesar.

When it was cōcluded, that we shulde sayle into Italye, they delyuered both Paul, and certayne other prysoners, vnto one named Julius, an vnder captayne of Cesars soudyers And we entred into a shyp of Adramicium, and loosed from lande, apointed to sayle by the coa-
Coll.xiii.a stes of Asia, one * Aristarcus oute of Macedonia of the countre of Thessalonia tarynge styl wyth vs. And the nexte daye we came to Sidō. And Julius * courteously entreated Paul and gaue him lybertye, to go vnto hys frendes, and to refresh him selfe. And when we had launched from thence, we sayled harde by Cypers bycause the wyndes were contrarye. And when we had sayled ouer the see of Celicia and Pamphilia, we came to Myra which is in Lycia. Ie.xxxix.c Act.xxvij.c

And there the vnder captayne founde a shyp B of Alexandria ready, that sayled into Italye, & he put vs therin. And when we had sayled slowly many daies, & scarce were come ouer against Cupdon (because the wynde wythstode vs) we sayled hard by the coast of Candy, ouer against Salmo, and with muche worke sayled beyonde it, and came vnto a place which is called ỳ faire hauens. Nye wherunto was the cytye of Lasea When much tyme was spent, and whē sayling was nowe ieopardus, because also ỳ they hadde ouerlong fasted, Paul put them in remēbraūce, & sayde vnto them: Syrs I perceaue, that this vyage wyl be with hurte and damage, not of ỳ layding and shyp onely, but also of your lyues. C Neuertheles the vnder captayne beleued the gouerner and the mayster of the shyppe more then those thinges which were spoken of Paul. And because ỳ hauen was not cōmodious to wynter in, many toke counsel to depart thēce, yf by any meanes they myghte attayne to Phenices and there to wynter, which is an hauen of Cā-dy, and lyeth towarde the southwest and northweste wynde. When ỳ southwynde blewe, they supposynge to obtayne theyr purpose, loosed vnto Asson, and sayled paste all Candye.

But not longe after, there arose agaynste D their purpose a flawe of wynd out of the northeast. And when the shyp was caught and colde not resyst the wynde, we let her go, and drawe wyth the wether. But we were carryed into an yle which is named Clauda, & had much worke to come by a bote, which they toke vp and vsed helpe, and made faste ỳ shyp, fearynge, lest they shuld fall into ỳ Syrtes And so they let downe a vessel, and were caryed. The nexte daye (whē we were tossed wt an exceadynge tempest) they lyghtened the shyppe, and the thyrde daye we cast out wyth our owne handes the takelyng of the shyppe. When at the laste, nether the Sūne nor starres in many dayes appeared & no small tempeste laye vpon vs, all hope that we shulde escape, was then taken awaye. But after long abstinence, Paule stode forth in the myddes of them and sayde: Syrs, ye shuld haue herkened to me, & not to haue loosed from Candye, nether to haue brought vnto vs thys harme and losse And nowe I exhorte you to be of good chere. For there shalbe no losse of any mans lyfe amōg you, saue of the shyp onely. For there stode by me thys nyght ỳ angel of God, whose I am and whome I serue, sayenge: feare not Paule
* thou muste be brought before Cesar. And lo Act.xxvi.c God hath geuen the al them that sayle wyth ỳ Wherfore syrs be of good chere: for I beleue God, ỳ it shalbe euen as it was told me. Howbeit we must be cast into * a certayne ylande. Act.xxviii.a

But when the fourtenethnyght was come E

(as we were saylynge in Aria, aboute mydnyght) the shypmen demed, that there appeared some countre vnto them: and sounded, & founde it. xx. faddoms. And whē they had gone a lytell further, they sounded agayne, and founde. xv. faddoms. Then fearynge lest they should haue fallen on some rocke, they cast foure ancres out of the sterne, and wyshed for the daye. As the shypmen were about to flee out of the shyp (whē they had let downe the bote into the see, vnder a couloure, as though they wolde haue cast ancres out of the forshyppe) Paul sayd vnto ỹ vndercaptayne & to the soudyers: excepte these abyde in the shyp ye cannot be safe. Then ỹ soudyers cut of the rope of ỹ bote, & let it fall away.

F And when the daye began to appeare, Paule besought them all to take meate, sayenge thys is the fourtenth daye, that ye haue tarryed, and continued fastynge, receauynge nothynge at al Wherfore I praye you to take meate: for thys no doute is for youre health: for *there shal not an hear fall frō the head of any of you. And whē he had thus spoken, he toke bread ‡ & gaue thankes to God in presence of them all, and when he had broken it, he began to eate. Then were they al of good cheare, and they also toke meate. We were altogether in the shyppe, two hūdred thre score and syxtene soules. And when they hadde eaten ynough, they lyghtened the shyp, and cast out the wheate into the see.

G When it was day, they knewe not the land but they spyed a certayne hauen wyth a banke, into the which they were minded (yf it were possyble) to thrust in the shyp: And when they had taken vp the ancres, they commytted them selues vnto the see, and loosed the rudder bondes and hoysed vp the mayne sayle to the wynde, & drewe to lande. And when they chaunced on a place, whyche hadde the see on both sydes, they thruste in the shyppe, And the fore parte stucke fast and moued not, but the hynder parte brake wyth the violence of the waues.

The soudyars counsell was to kyll the presoners, lest any of them, whē he had swome out shulde runne awaye. But the vnder captayne, wyllynge to saue Paule, kepte them fro theyr purpose, and commaunded that they whyche coulde swymme, shulde caste them selues fyrste into the see, and scape to land. And the other he commaunded to go, some on bordes, and some on broken peces of the shyp. And so it came to passe, that they escaped all safe to lande.

The. xxviii. Chapter.

The vyper burteth not Pauls hande, he healeth Publius father, and preacheth Christ at Rome.

A Act. xxvii. c AND whē they were scaped, then they knewe, ỹ * the yle was called Milete. And the straūgers shewed vs no litel kindnes: for they kyndled a fyre, & receaued vs euery one, because of ỹ present rayne, and because of the colde. And whan Paule hadde gathered a bondel of styckes, and layde them on the fyre, there came a vyper oute of the heate, and caught him by the hand. Whē the straungers sawe the beast hange on his hād they sayde amonge them selues: no doute thys man is a murtherer: Whome (though he haue escaped the see) yet vengeaunce suffreth not to lyue. And he shouke of the vyper into the fyre, & *felt no harme. Howbeit they wayted when he shuld haue swolne, or fallen downe dead sodēly But after they had loked a greate whyle, and sawe no harme come to him, they chaūged their myndes, and sayde * that he was a God.

Sō whē thys was done, other also whych had diseases in the yle, came and were healed: whyche also dyd vs great honoure. And when we departed they laded vs wyth suche thynges as were necessary.

After thre monethes we departed in a shyppe of Alexandrye, whych had wyntered in the yle, whose badge was Castor and Pollux. And whē we came to Syracusa, we tarryed there thre dayes. And from thence we fet a compasse, & came to Regium. And after one day the south wynd blewe, and we came the next daye to Putiolus: where we founde brethren, and were desyred to tary wyth them seuen dayes, and so came we to Rome. And frō thence, when the brethren herde of vs, they came to mete vs at Apiphorum, and at the thre tauernes. When Paul sawe them he thanked God, and wexed bolde. And when we came to Rome, the vnder captayne delyuered the prisoners to the chefe captayne of the hoost: but Paule was suffred to dwell by hym selfe wyth a soudyer that kept hym.

D And after thre dayes, Paule called the chefe of ỹ Iewes together. And whā they were come, he sayde vnto them: Men and brethren though * I haue commytted nothynge against the people or lawes of the elders, ‡ yet was I delyuered prisoner from Ierusalem into the handes of the Romaynes. Whych when they had examyned me, wolde haue let me go, because there was no cause of death in me. But when the Iewes spake contrarye I was constrayned to appeale vnto Cesar: not ỹ I had oughte to accuse my people of. For this cause then haue I called for you, euen to se you, and to speake with you: * because that for the hope of Israel I am boūd wyth thys cheyne.

And the gyfte is not ouer one synne: as death came thorow one synne of one that synned. For dampnacīō came of one synne vnto condempnacyon: but the gyfte came to iustifye from many synnes. For yf by ỳ synne of one, death rayned by the meanes of one: much more they (whyche receaue aboūdaunce of grace and of the gyfte of ryghteousnes) shall raygne in lyfe by ỳ meanes of one (that is to saye) Jesus Christ.

✠ Lykewyse then as by the synne of one there sprange vp euel on all men to condempnacyon: euen so by the ryghteousnes of one springeth good vpon al men to the ryghteousnes of lyfe. For as by one mannes dysobedyence, many became synners: so by the obedīēce of one shal many be made ryghteous. But * the lawe in the meane tyme entred in, that sinne shuld encrease Neuerthelater where aboundaūce of synne was there was more plenteousnes of grace. C For so much as we be delyuered thorowe Christ from synne, we must fashion our selues to lyue as the seruauntes of God, and not after our owne lustes. The vnlykely rewarde of ryghteousnes and synne.

A What shal we saye then? Shal we cōtynue in synne, that there maye be aboundaunce of grace? God forbyd How shal we that are dead as touchynge synne, lyue any lenger therin? ✠ Knowe ye not that *all we whych are baptysed into Jesu Christe are baptysed to dye wh hym? We are buryed thē with him by baptyme for to dye: that lykewyse as Christe was raysed vp from death by the glory of the father, euen so *we also shuld walke in a newe lyfe. For yf we be grafte in death lyke vnto hym, euen so shall we be partakers of the resurrecpon: knowyng thys, that our olde man is crucyfyed wyth hym also, that the bodye of synne myght vtterlye be destroyed, that hencefoorth we shoulde not be seruauntes vnto synne. For he that is deade, is iustyfyed from synne. Wherfore * yf we be deade wyth Christe, we beleue, that we shall also lyue wyth hym: knowynge, that Christ beynge raysed from death, *dyeth nomore. Death hath no more power ouer hym. For as touchynge that he dyed, he dyed concernynge synne once. And as touchynge that he lyueth, he lyueth vnto God. Lyke wyse consydre ye also, that ye are dead as touchynge synne, but are alyue vnto God thorowe Jesus Christ oure Lorde. ✠ Let not synne raygne therfore in youre mortall bodye, that ye shulde therunto obey by the lustes of it. Neither geue ye youre membres as instrumentes of vnryghteousnes vnto synne: but geue ouer youre selues vnto God as they that of dead, are alyue And geue ouer your membres as instrumentes of ryghteousnes vnto God. For synne shall not haue power ouer you. Because ye are not vnder the lawe, but vnder grace,

What then? Shall we synne, because we are not vnder ỳ lawe: but vnder grace? God forbyd. ✠ Knowe ye not, howe that * to whomesoeuer ye commyt youre selues as seruauntes to obeye hys seruaūtes ye are to whō ye obey: whether it be of synne vnto death, or of obedyence vnto ryghteousnes? God be thanked, that though ye were the seruaūtes of synne, ye haue yet obeyed wyth hert vnto the rule of the doctryne, that ye be broughte vnto. * Ye are then made free from synne, and are become the seruauntes of ryghteousnes. ✠ I speake grosly, because of the infyrmytie of your flesshe. As ye haue geuen youre members seruauntes to vnclennes and to iniquytye, (from one iniquytie to another) euen so nowe geue ouer your members seruaūtes vnto ryghteousnes, that ye maye be sanctyfyed. For when ye were the seruauntes of synne, ye were voyde of righteousnes. What frute had ye then in those thynges, wherof ye are nowe ashamed? For ỳ ende of those thinges is death. But nowe are ye delyuered from synne, and made the seruaūtes of God, and haue your frute to be sanctifyed, & the ende euer lastyng lyfe. D The.vii. Chapter.

C Christ hath delyuered vs from the lawe and death. Paul sheweth what the flesshe and outwarde man is, and calleth it the lawe of the membres.

A Knowe ye not brethren (I speake to them that knowe the lawe) howe ỳ the lawe hath power ouer a mā, as longe as it endureth? For *the woman whych is in subiection to a mā is bounde by the lawe to the man, as longe as he lyueth. But yf the man be dead: she is loset frō the lawe of the man. So then *yf whyle the mā lyueth she couple her selfe wyth another mā she shalbe counted a wedlocke breaker. But yf the

the man be deade, she is fre from the lawe of the husbande, so that she is no wedlocke breaker, though she couple her selfe wyth another man.

Euen so ye also (my brethrē) are dead concerninge the lawe, by the body of Christ: ý ye should be coupled to another (I meane to him ý is rysen agayne frō death) ý we should bringe forth frute vnto God. For whā we were in the flesh the lustes of synne which were stered vp by the lawe, rayned in our membres, to bringe forthe frute vnto deathe. But nowe are we delyuered from the lawe, and dead vnto it, wherunto we were in bondage, that we should serue in a newe conuersacīō of the spirite, and not in the olde cōuersacion of the letter.

What shall we saye then? is the lawe synne? God forbyd, neuertheles, * I knewe not synne, but by ý lawe. For I had not knowē what lust had meante, except the lawe hadde sayd: thou shalt not lust. But synne toke an occasyon by ý meanes of the commaundemente and wrought in me all maner of concupyscence. For verely wythoute the lawe, synne was deade. I once liued wythout law: But when the commaundement came, synne reuyued, and I was deade. ℂ And the verye same commaundemente, whych was ordeyned vnto lyfe, was found to be vnto me an occasyon of death. For synne toke occasyon by the meanes of the commaundemente, & so disceaued me, & by the same slewe me. Wherfore * the lawe is holy, and the commaundemēt holy and iust & good. Was that thē which was good made death vnto me? God forbyd. Naye it was synne: that synne myght appeare (by it which was good) to worke death in me: ý sinne by the commaundement might be oute of measure synful. For we knowe that the lawe is spiritual: but I am carnal * solde vnder synne, because I alowe not that which I do. For what I wold, that do I not: but what I hate, that do I. Yf I do nowe that which I wold not, I cōsent vnto the lawe that it is good. So then now, it is not I that do it, but synne ý dwelleth in me. For I knowe, that in me (that is to saye: in my * flesshe) dwelleth no good thing. For to wyl is present wyth me: but I fynd no meanes to performe that which is good. For the good that I wolde, do I not: but the euel which I wold not that do I. Yf I do that I wolde not, then is it not I that do it, but synne that dwelleth in me. I fynd then by the lawe, that when I wolde do good, euel is present with me. For I delyte in ý lawe of God, after the inwarde man: But I se another lawe in my mēbres, rebellyng against the lawe of my mynde, and subduyng me vnto the lawe of synne, whych is in my members. O wretched man that I am: who shall deliuer me from thys body subdued vnto death? I thanke God thorowe Iesus Christ our Lord. So then wyth the mynde I serue the lawe of God, but with the flesshe the lawe of synne.

ℂ The. viii. Chapiter.

ℂ The lawe of the spirite geueth lyfe. The spirite of God maketh vs Gods chyldren & heires with Christ. The abundaunt loue of God, can not be separated.

There is then no dampnacion to them whyche are in Christe Iesu, whyche walk not after the flesh but after the spirite. For the lawe of the spirite, of lyfe thorowe Iesus Christ, hath made me * fre from the lawe of synne, and deathe. † For what the lawe coulde not do (in as muche as it was weake because of the flesh) that performed god and * sent his sonne in the symilitude of synfull flesshe, and by synne damned synne in the flesshe, that the ryghteousnes of the law, might be fulfylled in vs, whych walke not after the flesshe, but after the spirite.

For they that are carnal, are carnally mynded. But they that are spirituall, are ghostely mynded. To be carnally minded, is deathe. But to be spyrytually mynded, is lyfe and peace. ✠ Because that the fleshly mynde is enemye agaynste God, for it is not obedient to the lawe of God, nether can be. So then they that are in the flesshe, can not please God.

But ye are not in the flesshe, but in the spirite yf so be that the spirite of God dwell in you. Yf any mā haue not the spirite of Christ, ý same is none of his. Yf Christ be in you, the bodye is dead because of synne, but the spirite is lyfe for righteousnes sake. Wherfore, yf the spyrite of hym that raysed vp Iesus from death, dwell in you: euen he that raysed vp Christe from death shall quycken your mortall bodyes, because of his spirite that dwelleth in you.

✠ Therfore brethren, we are detters, not to the flesh, to liue after the flesh. For yf we liue after the flesshe, ye shal dye: But yf ye thorowe the spirite) do mortifye the dedes of the bodye, ye shall lyue: For as many as are led by ý spirite of God, they are the sōnes of God. For ye haue not receaued the spirite of bondage to feare any more, but * ye haue receaued the spirite of adopcion, wherby we crye: Abba father. † The same spirite certifyeth our spirite that we are the sonnes of God. Yf we be sonnes, then are we also heyres I meane of God, & heires annexed with Christ. yf so be that we suffer with hī, that we maye be also glorifyed together wyth hym. ✠

✠ For I suppose that the afflyctyons of this lyfe, are not worthye of the glorye, whiche shalbe shewed vpon vs. * For the feruēt desyre of the creature abydeth lokynge when the sonnes of God shal appere, because the creature is subdued to vanytye, agaynst the wyll thereof, but for his wyll which hath subdewed the same in hope. For the same creature shalbe delyuered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious lyberty of the sōnes of God. For we know that euerye creature groneth with vs also, and trauayleth in payne euen vnto this tyme.

Not onely it, but we also whyche haue the fyrste frutes of the spirite, morne in oure selues also, and wayte for the adopcion * (of the chyldren of God.) Euen the deliueraunce of our body. ✠

✠ For we are saued by hope. But hope that is sene, is no hope, For how can a man hope for that whiche he seeth? But and yf we hope for ý we se not, then do we with pacience abide for it

Lykewyse, the spyrete also helpeth our infyrmities. For we know not what to desyre as we ought: but the spyrete maketh intercessiō for vs wyth groninges whyche can not be expressed. And * he that searcheth the heartes ‡knoweth, what is the meaninge of the spyrte, for he maketh intercessyon for the sayntes, accordyng to the pleasure of God. ✠

Moreouer, whom he appointed before, them also he called. And whom he hath called, them also he iustified: and whom he iustifyed, them he also glorifyed.

A BRethren, my hertes desyre & prayer to God for Israel is, that they myght be saued. For I beare them recorde, ỹ they haue a feruente mynde to Godwarde, but not accordynge to knowledge. For they beynge ignorannt of Gods ryghteousnes, and goyng about to stablyshe theyr owne ryghteousnes, haue not bene obedient vnto the ryghteousnes of God. ✠ For *Christe is the fulfyllynge of the lawe, to iustifye all that beleue. Math.b.c

Leu.xviii.a Gala.iii.b For *Moses wryteth of the ryghteousnes whych commeth of the lawe, howe that the man whych doth ỹ thynges of ỹ lawe, shall lyue therby. B But the ryghteousnes whyche commeth of fayth, speaketh on thys wyse: Saye not thou in thyne herte, who shall ascende into heauē? (that is euen to fetch Christ downe from aboue.) Eyther who shall descende into the depe? (that is euen to fetche vp Christe agayne from death.) Deut.xxx.c But what sayth he? *The worde is nye the, euen in thy mouth and in thyne herte.

Thys same is the worde of fayth, whych we preach. For yf thou knowledge with thy mouth that Jesus is the Lord, and beleue in thyne hert that God raysed hym vp from death, thou shalt be sake. ✠ For to beleue with the herte iustyfyeth: & to knowledge wyth the mouth maketh a esa.xxviii.d man sake. For the scrypture sayth: *whosoeuer beleueth on hym, shall not be confounded.

C There is no differēce betwene the Jewe and the gentyl. For one is Lord of al, whych is rych joel.ii.g. actes.ii.c and.xvii.c vnto al that cal vpō him. For *whosoeuer doth call on the name of the Lorde, shalbe sake. Howe then shall they call on hym, on whom they haue not beleued? howe shall they beleue on hym, of whō they haue not heard? howe shall the heare, wythout a preacher? And howe shal they preach except they be sent? As it is wrytte: howe beautyfull are the fete of them whych bryng tydynges of peace, and bryng tydynges of good thynges? D But they haue not al obeyed to the Gospel Esay.liii.a For Esay sayth: *Lorde, who hath beleued our Joh.xii.a sayenges? So then fayth commeth by hearyng and hearynge cōmeth by the worde of God. But Psal.xix.a I aske: haue they not harde? No doubte *theyr sounde went out into all landes, and theyr wordes into the endes of the worlde. ✠

¶ Al the Jewes are not cast awaye, therfore Paul warneth the gentyles ỹ be called, not to be hye mynded nor to despyse the Jewes, for the iudgementes of God are deps & secrete.

I Saye then, hath God cast awaye his people? God forbyd. For euen I also am an Israelyte, of ỹ seed of Abrahā of the trybe of Benjamin God hath not cast awaye hys people whych he knewe before. Wote ye not, what the scrypture sayth of Helias, howe he maketh intercession to God against Israel, sayēg: *Lorde, they haue kylled thy prophetes, and dygged downe thyne alters: and I am lefte alone, and they seke my lyfe. But what sayeth the answere of God vnto hym? *I haue reserued vnto my selfe seuē thousande men, whych haue not bowed the knee to ỹ ymage of Baal. Euen so also at thys tyme is there a remnaunt left, accordynge to the electiō of grace. Yf it be of grace, then is it not nowe of workes. For then grace is nomore grace. But yf it be of workes, then is it nowe no grace. For then were deseruyng nomore deseruyng. What then? Israel hath not obtayned that whyche he seketh: but the election hathe obtayned it. The remnaūte are blynded, accordynge as it is wrytten. *God hath geuen them the spryte of vnquietnes: eyes that they shulde not se, & eares that they shulde not heare, euen vnto this day. ‡ And Dauid sayeth: Let theyr table be made a snare to take them wyth all, and an occasyon to fal, & a reward vnto them. Let theyr eyes be blynded that they se not: & bowe thou downe theyr backe alwaye. B

I saye then: haue they therfore stombled, that they shulde vtterly fal away together? God forbyd: but thorowe theyr fall is saluacyon happened vnto the Gentyles, for to prouoke thē wyth all. Wherfore yf the fall of thē be the ryches of the worlde & the mynyshynge of thē ỹ ryches of the Gentyles: howe muche more theyr perfectnesse? I speake to you Gentyles, in as muche as *I am the Apostle of the Gentyles, I wyl magnyfye myne office, yf by any meane I may prouoke them which are my flesshe, and myght saue some of them. For yf the castynge awaye of thē be the reconcylynge of the worlde: what shal the receauynge of them be, but lyfe agayne from death? For yf one pece be holye, the whole heape is holy. And yf the roote be holye, the braunches shalbe holy also. Esay.lvi.e Mat.xiii.b John.xii.e Act.xxviii.f ‡psa.lxix.e Roma.i.a i.Tim.ii.a. ii.Tim.i.c.

Though some of the braunches be broken of, C and thou beynge a wylde olyuetree, wast grafte in amonge them, and made partaker of the rote and fatnes of the *olyue tree, boast not thy selfe agaynste the braunches. Be not hye mynded, but feare: for yf God spared not the naturall braunches, take hede, lest it come to passe that he spare not the also. Jere.xi.c.

Beholde therfore the kyndnes and rygorousnes of God: on them whyche fell, rygorousnes: but towarde the, kyndnes: yf thou contynue in his kyndnes. Or els thou shalt be hewen of, and they agayne *yf they byde not styll in vnbeleue, D ii.Cor.iii.a shalbe graffed in agayne. For God is of power to grafte them in agayne. For yf thou waste cut out of a natural wylde olyue tree, and was graffed contrary to nature in a true olyue tree howe much more shall the natural braunches be graffed in theyr owne olyue tree agayne.

I wolde not that thys secrete shoulde be hyd from you my brethren (lest ye shulde be wyse in your owne conceytes) that partlye blyndnes is happened in Israel, vntyll the fulnes of the gentyles be come in: and so all Israel shalbe saued. And this is my couenaunt vnto them, when I shall take awaye theyr synnes. As concernynge the Gospell they are enemyes for youre sakes: but as touchynge the election they are loued for theyr fathers sakes.

For verelye, the gyftes and callynge of God are such, that it can not repente hym of them: for loke, as ye in tyme passed haue not beleued God yet haue nowe obtayned mercye thorowe theyr vnbelefe: euen so nowe haue they not beleued the mercye whych is happened vnto you: that they also maye obtayne mercy. For God hath wrapped all nacions in vnbelefe, that he myght haue mercy on all.

¶ It is no eloquence and gloryous paynted wordes of worldly wysedome, that can edyfye and conuert soules vnto Christ, but the playne wordes of the scripture for ther make mencyon of hym and hys crosse.

AND I brethren (whē I cam to you) came not in glorysnes of wordes or of wysdome, shewynge vnto you the testymony of God. Nether shewed I my selfe that I knewe any thynge amonge you, saue Jesus Christ, euen the same that was crucyfyed. And I was amonge you in weakenes, and in feare, and in muche trēblynge. And my wordes and my preachynge was not wyth entysynge wordes of mans wysdome: but in shewynge of ꝑ spyrete and of power, that your fayth shuld not stande in the wysdom of men, but in the power of God.

We speake of wysedome amonge them that are perfecte: not the wysdome of this worlde, nether of the rulers of thys worlde (whyche go to nought) but we speake of ꝑ wysedome of God, whych is in secrete and lyeth hyd, which God ordeyned before the worlde vnto our glory, which wysdome *none of ꝑ rulers of this worlde knewe For had they had knowledge, they wolde not haue crucyfyed the Lorde of glorye. But (as it is wrytten:) *The eye hathe not sene, and the eare hath not harde, nether haue entred into the herte of man, the thynges whych God hath prepared for them that loue hym.

But God hath opened them vnto vs by hys spyrete. For *the spyrete searcheth al thynges, yee the bottome of Goddes secretes. For what man knoweth the thynges of a man: saue the spyrete of man whych is wythin hym? Euē so the thynges of God knoweth no man, but the spyrete of God. And we haue not receaued the spyrete of the worlde: but the spyrete whych commeth of God. for to knowe the thynges that are geuen to vs

C To the remnaunt speake I, not the Lorde. Yf any brother haue a wyfe that beleueth not, yf she be cōtent to dwell wyth him, let him not put her awaye. And the woman whyche hath to her husbande an infydele, & consente to dwell wyth her, let her not put hym awaye. For the vnbeleuynge husbande is sanctifyed by the wyfe, & the vnbeleuynge wyfe is sanctifyed by the husbāde Or els were your chyldren vncleane: but now are they holye. But and yf the vnbeleuynge departe, let hym departe. A brother or a syster is not in subiection to such. But God hathe called vs in peace. For howe knowest thou (o woman) whether thou shalt saue thy husband or no? Eyther howe knoweste thou (o man) whether thou shalt saue thy wyfe or no? but euen as God hath dystributed to euery man.

Ephe. iiii. a * As the Lord hath called euery mā, so let him walke: & so ordeyne I in all congregacyons. Yf any man be called beynge cyrcumcysed, let hym not adde vncircūcysiō. Yf any man be called vncircūcised, let hym not be cyrcūcysed. Circūcysiō is nothynge, and vncircūcision is nothynge: but the kepynge of the cōmaundementes of God.

1. Tim. vi. a wherein he was called. * Arte thou called a seruaunt? care not for it. Neuertheles yf thou mayest be free, vse it rather. For he that is called in the Lorde, beynge a seruaunt, is the Lordes freeman Lykewyse he that is called beynge free, is Christes seruaūt. Ye are dearely bought, be not ye the seruauntes of men. Brethren, let euerye man wherein he is called, therein abyde wyth God. ✠ As concernynge virgyns, I haue no cōmaundement of the Lorde: yet geue I councell, as one that hath obtayned mercye of the Lorde, to be faythfull. I suppose therfore yt it is good for the present necessyte. For it is good for a mā so to be. Arte thou bounde vnto a wyfe? seke not to be loosed. Arte thou loosed from a wyfe? seke not a wyfe. * Gene.i.d

For * ꝑ man is not of the woman: but ꝑ womã of the man. Nether was the man created for the womans sake: but the woman for the mannes sake. For this cause ought the woman to haue power on her heade, for the aungels sakes: Nevertheless, nether is the man without the woman, nether the womã without the man, in the Lord. For as the woman is of the man, euen so is the man: by the woman: but all of God.

Judge in youre selues, whether it be comly that a woman praye vnto God bareheaded Doth not nature it selfe teache you, that it is a shame for a man, yf he haue longe heare and a prayse to a woman: yf she haue long heare? vnto God. For no man heareth hym. Howbeit in the spyrete he speaketh misteries. But he that prophesyeth, speaketh vnto men for theyr edyyf I com vnto you speaking with tōges: what shal I profet you, except I speake to you, ether

Many

C Many kyndes of voyces are in the worlde, and none of them are without signification. Yf I knowe not what the voyce meaneth, I shalbe vnto him ꝑ speaketh, an aliēt: and he that speaketh, shalbe an alient vnto me. Euen so ye, (for as muche as ye couet spyretual gyftes) seke, that ye may excel, vnto the edifyeng of ꝑ cōgregaciō

Wherfor, let him ꝑ speaketh with tōge, pray, that he may interpret also. For yf I pray with tong, my spret prayeth, but my vnderstandyng dothe no good. What is it then? I wyll praye with the spyrete, & wyl pray with the vnderstandynge. I wyll synge with ꝑ spyrete, & wyl synge wyth the vnderstandynge. For els, when thou blessest with the spyrete, howe shall he that occupiety the rowme of the vnlearned, say: Amen at thy geuyng of thankes, seyng he vnderstandeth not what thou sayest? Thou verely geuest thankes well, but the other is not edifyed. I thanke my God ꝑ I speake wyth tonges more then ye al: Yet had I leuer in the congregacyō to speake fyue wordes with my vnderstandyng to the informacion of other, rather then ten thousande wordes with the tonge.

D Brethren, be not ye chyldren in wytte. Howbeit, as concernyng malycyousnes, be chyldren: but in wytte be perfect. In the lawe it is writtē

Esa.xxviii.c *wyth sondrye tonges, & wyth sondrye lyppes wyll I speake vnto thys people, and yet for all that, wyll they not heare me, sayeth the Lorde. Wherfore tonges are for a sygne, not to them that beleue: but to them ꝑ beleue not. Contrary wyse, prophesyenge serueth not for them ꝑ beleue not: but for them which beleue. Yf therfore, when all the congregacyon is come together, & all speake wyth tonges, there come in they that are vnlearned, or they whyche beleue not: wyll they not saye, that ye are out of youre wyttes? But and yf all prophesye, and there come in one that beleueth not, or one vnlearned, he is rebu-

How is it then brethrē? As oft as ye come together, euery one of you hath a songe, hath a doctrine, hath a reuelacyon an interpretacyon.

Let all thynges be done vnto edyfyeng. Yf any mā speake with tonge, let it be by two or at the most by thre, & that by course, & let another in-

He sheweth them, that the daye of the Lorde shal not come tyll the departynge from the fayth come fyrst, and therfore he exhorteth them not to be dysceaued but to stande stedfaste in the thynges that he hath taught them.

WE beseech you (brethren) by the commynge of our Lorde Jesu Christ, & in that we shall assemble vnto him that ye be not sodenly moued from youre mynde, nor be troubled, neyther by spyrite, neyther by wordes, nor yet by letter, which shuld seme to come frō vs, as though the daye of Christ were at hande. Let no man deceaue you by any meanes, for the Lorde shal not come except ther come * a departynge fyrste, and that y synfull man be opened, the sonne of perdycion, whych is an aduersarye: & is exalted aboue all, that is called God, or that is worshypped: so that he doth syt * in the tēple of God, boastynge hym selfe to be God.

Remember ye not, that whē I was yet with you, I tolde you these thynges? And nowe ye knowe what witholdeth: euen that he myght be vttered at hys tyme. * For y mystery of y iniquitye doth already worke: tyl he which nowe onelye letteth, be taken oute of the waye. And then shall that wycked be vttered, * whom the Lorde shal consume wyth the spyrite of hys mouth, and shall destroye wyth the apperaunce of hys commynge: ✠ euen hym whose commynge is after the workynge of Sathan, wyth all lyenge power * sygnes and wonders and with al deceauablenes of vnryghteousnesse, amonge them that perysh: because they receaued not the loue of the truth, that they myght be saued. * And therfore God shall sende them strōge delusion, that they shulde beleue lyes: that all they myght be damned: which beleued not the truthe: but had pleasure in vnryghteousnes.

1.John.ii.c Apoc.xi.a mat.xxiiii.c Rom.i.b C

But we are bounde to geue thankes alwaye to God for you (brethren beloued of the Lorde) for because that God hath from the begynnynge chosen you to saluacyon, thorowe sanctifyenge of the spyrite, and thorowe beleuyng of y trueth, whereunto he called you by oure Gospell to obtayne the glorye of our Lorde Jesu Christ.

✠ Therfore brethren stande faste, and kepe y ordynaunces which ye haue learned: whether it were by oure preachynge, or by Epystle. Oure

Lorde Jesu Christ hym selfe, and God and oure father (whych hath loued vs, and hathe geuē vs euerlastynge consolacyon, and good hope thorowe grace) comforte your hertes and stablyshe you in all good sayenge and doynge.

The seconde Epistle of the Apostle saynt Paule vnto Timothe.

¶ Paule exhorteth Timothe to stedfastnesse and patience in persecution, & to continue in the doctrine that he had taught hym. A commendacion of Onesiphorus.

A PAul an Apostle of Jesus Christe by the wyll of God, accordynge to the promyse of lyfe whyche is in Christe Jesu. To Timothe hys beloued sonne. Grace, mercy, and peace, from God ꝑ father, and from Jesu Christ our Lorde.

Actu.xxii.a Rom.i.a Phil.iii.a I thanke God, *whom I serue from myne elders wyth pure conscience, ꝑ wythout any ceasyng I make mencion of ꝑ in my prayers nyght and daye, desyring to se the, myndful of thy teares: so that I am fylled wyth ioye, whē I cal to remembraunce ꝑ vnfayned fayth that is in the, which dwelt fyrst in thy graūde mother Lois, and in thy mother Eunica: & I am assured that it dwelleth in the also.

B 1.Tim.iiii.d Rom.viii.c Wherfore I warne ꝑ that thou stere vp the gyft of God which is in the, *by the putting on of my handes. *For God hath not gyuē to vs ꝑ spyrite of feare: but of power, and of loue, and of sobrenes. *Be not thou therfore ashamed of the Roma.i.b testimony of our Lord, nether be ashamed of me Ephe.iii.a *whych am hys prisoner: but suffre thou aduersite wt the Gospell, accordynge to the power of Titus.iii.b God, whych *saued vs, & called vs with an holy calling, not accordyng to our dedis, but accordyng to his owne purpose & grace: whych was Ephe.i.a geuē vs thorow Christ Jesu (before the worlde begāne) but is now declared openly by the appearynge of our sauioure Jesu Christ, *whyche C 1.Cor.xv.g Hebr.ii.d hath put awaye death, & hath brought lyfe and immortalite vnto lyghte thorowe the Gospell: Roma.i.a and.xi.c 1.Tim.ii.b *wherunto I am appointed a preacher & Apostle, and a teacher of the Gentyls: for the whych cause I also suffre these thynges: Neuertheles, I am not ashamed. For I knowe and am sure, that he (in whome I haue put my truste) is able to kepe that which I haue commytted to his kepynge agaynst that daye.

D 1.Ti.iiii.b Titus.ii.b 1.Pet.b.c *Se that thou haue ꝑ ensample of ꝑ holsom wordes, which ꝑ hast herde of me wyth fayth & loue that is in Christ Jesu. That good thynge which was cōmytted to thy keppynge, hold fast thorowe the holy goost, whych dwelleth in vs. This ꝑ knowest, how that al they which are in Asia, be turned frōme: of which sorte are Phigelus & Hermogenes. The Lord gyue mercy vnto the housholde of Onesyphorus for he oft refreshed me, *& was not ashamed of my chaine: but Mat.xxv.c Roma.i.b when he was at Rome, he sought me out verye diligently, & founde me. The Lord graunt vnto him that he may fynde mercy wyth ꝑ Lord at ꝑ day. And in how many thinges he ministred vnto me at Ephesus, thou knowest very well.

For when God made promes to Abraham, because he had no greater to sweare by, he sware by hym selfe, sayinge. Surely I wyll blesse the and multiply ye in dede. But he whose kynred is not counted amonge them, receyued tythes of Abraham, & blessed him that had the promysses. And noman denyeth, but that he which is lesse, receyueth blessyng of him which is greater. And here men that dye receyue tythes. But there he receyueth tythes, of whom it is wytnessed that he lyueth. But nowe hath he obtayned a preasthoode B so moche the more excellente, as he is the mediatoure of a better Testamente, whyche was confirmed in better promysses. For if the fyrst testamēt had ben such, yt no fault could haue ben foūd in it, then shuld no place haue ben sought for the seconde. For in rebukynge them, he sayeth vnto them: *Behold the dayes com (sayth the Lord) and I wyll fynysshe vpon the house of Israel, and vpon the house of Juda, a newe testament, not lyke the testament that I made with theyr fathers in that daye, when I toke them by the handes, to leade them out of the lande of Egypt For they continued not in my testament, and I regarded them not, sayth the Lorde.

For this is the testament that I wyll make with the house of Israel: After those dayes (sayeth the Lorde) I wyl put my lawes in their myndes and in theyr hertes I wyll wryte them and I wyll be theyr God, and they shalbe my people And they shall not teache euery man his neyghbour, and euery man his brother, saying: know the Lorde: for they shall knowe me, from yᵗ least vnto the moost of them: For I wyll be mercyful ouer theyr vnrighteousnesse and theyr synnes & theyr iniquities wyll I thynke vpon nomore. In that he sayeth a newe Testament, he hathe worne out the olde. For that whiche is worne out and waxed olde, is readye to vanysh awaye.

THe olde testament then had verely ordinaunces and seruynges of God and worldly holynes. ✠ For there was a fore tabernacle made, where in was the lyght, and the table and the shewbreed which is called holy. But within the second vayle was there a tabernacle, which is called holyest of all: which had the golden censer, and the arke of ỹ testament ouerlayed rounde about with golde, wherein was the golden pot with* Manna, and ‡ Arons rodde, that sprange and* the tables of the testament. Ouer the arke were the Cherubyns of glory, shadowynge the seate of grace. Of whyche thynges we can not now speake perticularlye.

When these thynges were thus ordeyned, the preastes went alwayes into the fyrst tabernacle which executed the seruyce of the holy thynges. But into the seconde went the hye preest alone, *ones euery yere: not without bloude, + whiche he offred for hym selfe, and for the ignorawnces of the people. ¶ Wherwith the holy ghost this signifyed, that the way of holy thynges was not yet opened, while as yet the fyrst tabernacle was standyng, which was a similitude for the tyme then present, in which were offred gyftes and sacrifyces that coulde not make the mynystre perfecte as pertaynynge to the conscience, with only meates and drynkes and dyuers washynges and iustifyinges of the flesh, whiche were ordeyned vntyll the tyme of refformation.

✠ But* Christ being an hye preest of good thinges to come, came by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hãdes: that is to say: not of this buyldynge, neyther by the bloude of gootes and calues: but* by his owne bloude, he entred in ones into the holy place, and founde eternall redemption. ✠

For yf the * bloude of oxen and of gootes, & the asshes of a yonge cowe when it was sprynkled, purifyeth the vncleane as touching the purifying of the flesshe: how moche more shall the bloude of Christe (whiche thorowe the eternall spyrite offred hym selfe without spot to God) to pourge your conscience from deed workes, for to serue the lyuynge God?

And for this cause is he the * medyatour of the newe testament, that thorow death whiche chaunced, for the redemption of those transgressours that were vnder the fyrst testament they which are called myght receyue the promysse of eternall inheritaunce: ✠ For where as is a Testamẽt, there must also (of necessite) be the death of him that maketh the Testament. For the Testamẽt taketh auctorite whẽ men are deed: for it is yet of no value, as longe as he ỹ maketh ỹ testamẽt is alyue: for which cause also neyther the fyrst testament was ordeyned without bloude. For when Moses had declared all the cõmaundement to all the people accordyng to the lawe he toke the bloude of calues and of gootes, with water and purple, wol and yslope, and sprynkled both the booke and all the people, sayng: *this is the bloude of the Testament which God hath appointed vnto you: Moreouer, he sprinkled the tabernacle with bloude also, and all the mynystrynge vessels. And almoost all thynges are by the lawe pourged with bloude, and without sheddynge of bloude is no remyssion.

It is nede then that the similitudes of heauenly thynges be purifyed with suche thynges, but that the heauenly thinges them selues be purifyed with better sacrifyces then are those.

For Christ is not entred into the holy places ỹ are made with handes (whyche are symilitudes of true thinges) but is entred into very heauen for to appeare now in the syght of God for vs not to offre hym selfe often* as the hye preest entreth into ỹ holy place, euery yere with straũge bloude, for then must he haue often suffred syns the worlde beganne. But now in the ende of the worlde hath he appeared ones, to putte synne to flyght by the offrynge vp of hym selfe.

And as it is appoynted vnto all men, that they shal ones dye, and then commeth the iudgement: *euen so was Christ ones offred, to take awaye the synnes of many, and vnto them that loke for hym, shall he appeare agayne without synne vnto saluacyon.

¶ The olde lawe had no power to clense awaye synne, but Christ dyd it with offrynge his body ones for all. An exhortation to receyue this goodnesse of God thankfully with pacyence and stedfast fayth.

FOr the lawe (hauyng the shadow of good thynges to come, and not ỹ verye fassyon of the thynges them selues) can neuer with those sacrifyces which they offre, yere by yere cõtynually make the commers therevnto perfect. For wolde not then those sacrifyces haue ceased to haue bene offered, because that the offerers ones pourged shoulde haue had nomore cõscience of synnes? Neuertheles, in those sacrifyces, is there mencyon made of synnes euery yere. For the bloude of oxen and of gootes can not take awaye synnes.

Wherfore, when he commeth into the worlde he sayeth: * Sacrifyce and offrynge thou woldest not haue: but a body hast thou ordeyned me Burntoffrynges also for synne hast thou not alowed: Then sayd I: lo, I am here. In the beginnyng of the bõke it is writtẽ of me that I shulde do thy wyl, O God. Aboue, when he sayeth: sacrifyce and offryng, & burntsacrifices and synne offrynges thou woldest not haue, neyther hast thou alowed them (whiche yet are offred by the lawe, then sayd he: lo, I am here to do thy wyll, O God: he taketh awaye the fyrste to stablysh the latter, by the which wyl we are made holye, euen by the offrynge of the body of Jesu Christ ones for all.

¶ And euery preest is redy dayly mynistrynge and offrynge often tymes one maner of oblacyon, whyche can neuer take awaye synnes. But this man after he hath offred one sacrifyce for synnes, is set downe for euer *on the ryght hãd of God, and from hence forthe tarpeth tyll hys foes

¶ Dyfference of spyretes and howe the spyrete of God maye be knowen from the spyrete of erroure. Of the loue of God, and of oure neyghboures.

DEarlye beloued * beleue not euerye spyrete: but proue the spyretes, wether they are of God or not, for many false prophetes are gone out into the worlde. Herby shal ye knowe ỹ spyret of God. Euery spyrete that confesseth that Jesus Chryst is come in the flesh, is of God. And euery spyret that confesseth not that Jesus Chryst is come in the flesh is not of God. And thys is ỹ spyret of Antichryst, of whome ye haue hearde, howe ỹ he shuld come: & euẽ nowe alredy is he in ỹ world

Lytle chyldren, ye are of God, and haue ouercome them: for greater is he that is in you, then he that is in the worlde. They are of the worlde, therfore speake they of the world, and the world heareth them. We are of God. He that knoweth God, heareth vs: he that is not of God, heareth vs not. Hereby knowe we the spyrete of veryte and the spyrete of erroure.

Of the tribe of Ben Jamin were sealed.xii.M.

C After this I behelde, & lo a greate multytude (which no mā coulde nōbre) of all nacions and people, & tōges, stode before ẏ seate, & before the lambe, clothed with lōge whit garmētes, & palmes in theyr handes, & cried with a loude voice sayenge: saluacyon be ascrybed to hym ẏ sytteth vpon the seate of our God & vnto ẏ lambe. And all the aūgels stode in the cōpase of ẏ seat, and of the elders & of the foure beastes, & fell before ẏ seat on theyr faces, and worshiped God, sayeng: Amen. Blessing & glory & wysdō and thankes, and honour, and power, and mygbt, be vnto our God for euermore. Amen. ✠

D And one of ẏ elders answered, sayenge vnto me, what are these whiche are arayed in longe whyt garmētes, and whence came they? And I sayd vnto hym: Lorde thou wotest. And he said to me: these are they, which cam out of greate tribulacyon, and made theyr garmentes large, and made them white by the bloud of the lābe: therfore are they in the presence of the seate of God & serue hym day and nyght in his temple, and he ẏ sytteth in the seate wyll dwell amōge thē. They shall honger nomore, nether thyrst, nether shall the Sonne lyght on them, nether any heate. For the lambe whiche is in the mydes of the seate shall fede them, and shall leade thē, vnto foūtaynes of lyuing water, and God shall wype awaye all teares from theyr eyes.

¶The seauenth seale is opened, there is sylence in heauen, the foure aungels blowe theyr trompettes, and great plages folowe vpon the earth.

A AND whē he had opened ẏ vii. seale, there was sylence in heauen aboute the space of an halfhour. And I sawe vii. aungels standyng before god and to them were geuen trompettes. And another aungell came and stode before the aulter, hauynge a golden censer, and muche of odoures was geuen vnto hym, that he shulde offre of the prayers of all sayntes vpon the golden aulter, whyche was before the seate. And ẏ smoke of the odours which came of ẏ prayers of al saintes, ascēded vp before God out of the aungels hand. And the aungell toke the censer, and fylled it with fyre of the aulter, and caste it into the earth, and voices were made, and thondrynges and lyghtenynges, and earthquakes.

The fyrst aungel blew, & there was made hayle & fyre, which were myngled wt bloud, and they were caste into the earthe: and the thyrde parte of (of the erth was set on fyre, & the thyrd parte) of trees was burnt, and al grene grasse was brent. And ẏ secōde aungel blewe: & as it were a great moūtayne burning with fyre was cast into the see, and, the thyrde parte of the see turned to bloude and the thyrde part of the creatures which had lyfe dyed, and the thyrd part of shyppes were destroyed. And the thyrde aungel blew, & ther fell a great starre from heauen, burnyng as it were a lampe, & it fell into the thyrde parte of the ryuers, & into fountaines of waters & the name of the starre is called Wormwod. And the thyrde parte was turned to wormwod. And many mē dyed of the waters, because they were made bytter. And the fourth aungell blewe, & the thyrde part of the sunne was smytten, & the thyrd part of ẏ mone, and ẏ thyrd part of starres: so that ẏ thyrd part of thē was darkened. And the daye was smittē, ẏ the third part of it shuld not shyne and lykewyse the nyght. And I beheld and herd an aungel flyenge thorow the myddes of heauē, saieng with a loude voice: Woo, woo, to ẏ inhabyters of ẏ earth, because of the voyces to come of ẏ trōpe of ẏ thre aungels, whych were yet to blowe.

¶The first and fyft aungel blowe theyr trompettes the starre falleth from heauen: the locustes come out of the smoke. The fyrst wo is past/the four aungels that were bound are losed & the thyrd part of men is kylled.

A AND the fyfte aungell blewe and I sawe a starre fall from heauen vnto the earth. And to hym was geuen the keye of the botomlesse pyt And he opened the botomlesse pyt, & the smoke of ẏ pit arose as ẏ smoke of a great fornace. And ẏ sunne, & the ayer were darkened by the reasō of ẏ smoke of ẏ pit. And there came out of ẏ smoke locustes vpō ẏ earth, & vnto thē was geuē power, as ẏ scorpiōs of ẏ earthe haue power. And it was cōmaūded thē, ẏ they shulde not hurt ẏ grasse of ẏ erth nether any grene thīg nether any tree: but onely those mē which haue not ẏ seale in theyr foreheades. And to thē was cōmaunded, ẏ they shuld not kyl thē, but ẏ they shulde be vexed. v. monethes, and theyr payne was as the payne that commethe of a scorpion when he hathe stonge a man. * And in those, dayes shall men seke death & shall not fynde it, and shall desyre to dye, & death shal fle frō thē.

Apoc.ix.b Osee.x.c Luk.xxiii.d

B And the similitude of the locustes was lyke vnto horses prepared vnto batayll, & on theyr heades weare as it were crownes, lyke vnto golde, and theyr faces were as it had ben the faces of men. And they had heere as the heere of women. And theyr teeth were as the teeth of lyons. And they had habbergyons, as it were habbergyons of yron. And the sounde of theyr wynges, was as ỳ sounde of charrettes, when many horses runne together to battayll. And they had tayles lyke vnto scorpiōs, & ther were stynges in theyr tayles. And theyr power was to hurte mē. v. monethes. And they had a king ouer them which is the aūgel of ỳ bottōles pyt, whose name in ỳ Hebrewe tōge is Abadō, but in the Greke tonge, Apollion, that is to saye: a destroyer. One wo is past, and beholde, two wooes come yet after this. And ỳ syxte aūgell blewe, & I herde a voice from ỳ foure corners of the golden aulter, which is before God, sayeng to ỳ syxte aūgel, which had the trōpe: Lose the foure aungels which are bounde in ỳ great ryuer Euphrates. And ỳ foure aūgels were losed: which were prepared for an hour, for a daye, for a moneth, & for a yeare, for to slaye ỳ. iii. part of men. And the nomber of horsmē of warre were xx. thousand tymes. x. M. And I herde ỳ nōbre of them: & thus I sawe ỳ horses in a vision, and them ỳ sate on them, hauyng fyrye habbergyons of a Jacinct colour, & brimstone, & the heades of the horses were as the heades of lyons.
D And out of theyr mouthes went forth fyre and smoke, & brimstone. And of these thre was the thyrde part of mē kylled: that is to say, of fyre, smoke, & brimstone: which proceded oute of the mouthes of thē: For theyr power was in theyr mouthes & in their tailes, for theyr tailes were lyke vnto serpentes, & had heades, & with them they dyd hurt: And ỳ remnaūt of ỳ men: whiche were not kylled by these plages, repented not of the dedes of theyr handes ỳ they shulde not worshyp deuyls, & ymages of gold & siluer, and brasse, and stone, & of wode, which neyther can se, nether heare, nether go. Also they repented not of their murther, & of theyr sorcery, nether of theyr fornicacyon, nether of theyr thefte.

The. x. Chapter.

The Aungell hath the boke open: he sweareth there shalbe non more tyme: he geueth the boke vnto Iohn, which eateth it vp.

A AND I sawe another myghtie angel come downe frō heauē clothed with a cloud, & the rain bow vpō his heed And his face as it were ỳ sūne, & his fete as it were pyllers of fyre and he had in his hande a lyttel boke open, and he put his ryght fote vppon the see, and his lyfte fote on the earthe. And cryed with a loude voyce, as when a lyon roreth. And when he had cryed, seuen thonders spake theyr voices. And when the. vii. thōders had spokē theyr voyces: I was about to wryte: And I herd a voyce frō heauen, sayeng vnto me, seale vp those thinges whych the. vii. thonders spake, & wryte thē not
B And the aungell whych I sawe stōde vpon the see, and vpon the earth, lyft vp his hande to heauen, & sweare by hym, that lyueth for euermore which created he auē, and the thinges that ther in are (And the erth: and the thynges that therin are) and the see, and the thynges which therin are: ỳ ther shuld be no lenger tyme but in the dayes of the voyce of the seuenthe aungell, when he shall begyn to blowe, euen the mynisterye of God shalbe fynyshed, as he preached by hys seruauntes the prophetes.

And the voyce which I herde from heauen, spake vnto me agayne, & sayd: * go & take the lytle boke which is open in the hande of the aungell whych standeth vpō the see, and vpon the earth. And I went vnto the aungel & sayde to him: geue me the lytel boke, and he sayde vnto me: takt it, & eate it vp, & it shal make thy belly bytter, but it shalbe in thy mouth as swete as hony. * And I toke the lytel boke out of his hād & eate it vp, and it was in my mouth as swete as hony: & as sone as I had eaten it, my bellye was bytter. And he sayde vnto me: thou muste prophesy agayne among the people, and nacīōs and tonges, and to many kynges.

The. xi. Chapter.

The temple is measured. The second wo is past.

AND then was geuen me a rede lyke vnto a rod, & it was sayd vnto me. Ryse and meate the temple of God, & ỳ aulter and them that worshyppe therin, & the quyer which is within the tēple, cast out and meate it not, for it is geuen vnto the Gētyles, & the holy cytye shal they treade vnder foote. xlii. monethes. And I wyll geue power vnto my two wytnesses, and they shall prophecy a thousand, two hundred & lx. dayes clothed in sacke cloth. These are two olyue trees, & two candelstyckes, standing before the God of the earth.

And yf any man wyll hurte thē, fyre shall procede out of theyr mouthes, & consume theyr enemyes. And yf any man wyll hurt them, this wyse must he be kylled. These haue power to shut heauen, ỳ it rayne not in the dayes of theyr prophesyenge: and haue power ouer waters to turne them to bloud, & to smyte the earth wyth al maner plages, as often as they wyll.

And when they haue fynyshed theyr testimony, the beast that came out of the bottōlesse pyt, shal make warre agaynst them, & shal ouercome them, & kyl them. And theyr bodyes shall lye in the stretes of the great cytye, which spirituali is called Sodome and Egypt, where oure Lorde was crucifyed. And they of the people & kynredes, & tonges, & they of ỳ nacions, shall se theyr bodyes. iii. dayes and an halfe, and shall not suffre theyr bodyes to be put in graues.
And they ỳ dwel vpō ỳ earth, shal reioyce ouer thē & beglad, & shal send gyftes one to another for these two prophetes vexed thē ỳ dwelt on ỳ earth. And after. iii. dayes & an halfe, the spyrete of life from God entred into thē. And they stode vp vpon theyr fete, and great fearecam vppon them which sawe them. And they herde a great voyce frō heauē, sayeng vnto them: Come vp hyther. And they ascended vp into heauen in a cloude, and theyr enemyes sawe them. And the same houre was there a great earthquake, and the tenth parte of the cytie fell, and in ꝑ earthquake were slayne names of men seuē .M. and the rēnaunt were feared, and gaue glory to the God of heauen. The seconde woo is paste, and beholde, the thyrde woo wyll come anone.

D And the seuenth aungel blewe, and ther were made great voyces in heauen, saieng: ꝑ kingedomes of this worlde are oure Lordes, and his ✻ Christes, & he shal reigne for euer more ✻(Amen) And the .xxiiii. elders, whiche syt before God on theyr seates, fell vpon theyr faces, and worshypped God sayeng: we geue the thankes O Lorde God almyghty: which art & wast, and art to come, for thou haste receaued thy great myght, and hast raygned. And the naciōs were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the tyme of the deade ꝑ they shulde be iudged and that thou shuldest geue rewarde vnto thy seruauntes the Prophetes and sayncte, and to thē ꝑ feare thy name small and great and shuldest destroy thē, which destroy ꝑ earth. And the temple of God was opened in heauen, and there were sene in his temple, ꝑ arke of his testament, and there folowed lyghtenynges, and voyces, and thondrynges, and earthquake, and moche hayle.

A AND there apered a great wōder in heauen: A womā clothed with the sunne and ꝑ mone vnder her fete, and vpon her head a crowne of .xii. starres. And she was with childe, and cryed trauelynge in byrth, and payned redy to be delyuered. And there appeared another wonder in heauen, for beholde, a great red dragon hauyng .vii. heades and ten hornes and seuen crownes vppon his heades: and his tayle ✻ drue the thyrd part of the starres ✻(of heauen) B and caste them to the earth. And the dragon stode before the woman which was ready to be delyuered: for to deuoure her childe as soone as it were borne. And she broughte forth a man childe, whiche shulde rule all nacyons with a rod of yron. And her sonne was taken vp vnto God, and to his seate. And the woman fledde into wyldernesse, where she had a place, prepared of God, that they shulde fede her there a. M. ii. hundred and .lx. dayes. And ther was a great battayll in heauen, Michael and his anngels fought with ꝑ dragō, & the dragon fought and his aūgels & preuayled not, nether was theyre place foūde any more in heauen. And the great dragon, ꝑ olde serpent, called the deuyll & Sathanas, was cast out. Which deceaueth al the ¶ world. And he was cast into ꝑ earth & his āgels were cast out also (with hym) And I heard a loud voyce, sayenge: in heauen is nowe made salua-cyon & strenghe & the kyngdome of oure God, and the power of hys Christ. For ✻(the accuser of our brethren) is cast downe which accused them before (our) God daie & night. And they ouercame hym by the bloude of the Lābe, & by the worde of theyr testimonye, and they loued not theyre lyues vnto ꝑ death. Therfore reioyce heuens, and ye ꝑ dwell in them. Woo to the inhabyters of the earth, and of the see: for the deuyl is come downe vnto you whiche hathe great wrath, because he knoweth ꝑ he hath but a shorte tyme.

And whē the dragon saw ꝑ he was caste vnto the earth, he persecuted the woman, whiche brought forth the mā chylde. And to the womā were geuen two wynges of a great Egle, that she migh flye into the wyldernes into her place, where she is norysshed for a tyme, tymes, & halfe a tyme, frō the presence of the serpente. And the dragō cast out of hys mouth water after the woman as it had bene a ryuer, because she shulde haue ben caught of ꝑ floude. And ꝑ earth holped the womā and ꝑ earth opened her mouth & swalowed vp the ryuer, whych ꝑ dragon cast out of his mouth. And the dragon was wrath with ꝑ woman, and wente, and made warre wt the rēnaunt of her seede, whych kepe the cōmaūdemētes of God, & haue the testimony of Jesus christ And he stode on the see sand.

ND I sawe a beaste ryse oute of the see, haupnge seuen heades, and ten hornes, and vpon his hornes ten crownes, and vpon hys heade, the name of blasphemy. And the beast whych I saw, was lyke a catte of the mountayne, and hys fete were as the fete of a beare, & his mouth as ꝑ mouth of a lyon. And the dragon gaue hym hys power and hys seate, and greate auctorite: and I sawe one of hys heades as it were woūded to deathe, & his deedly woūde was healed And al ꝑ world wōdred at ꝑ beast, & they worshypped the dragon, whych gaue power vnto the beast, and they worshipped the beast, sayeng: who is lyke vnto the beaste? who is able to warre wyth hym?

And there was geuen vnto hym a mouthe, B that spake great thynges & blasphemyes, & power was geuē vnto hym, to do .xlii. monethes. And he opened hys mouth vnto blasphemye agaynst God, to blaspheme his name and hys tabernacle, & them that dwelt in heeuen. And it was geuē vnto him to make warre wt the saintes, & to ouercome them And power was geuen him ouer al kynred, and people, and tonge and naciō, and al ꝑ dwel vpon the earth worshipped him: whose names are not writtē in the boke of lyfe of ꝑ lābe, whych was kylled frō the begynning of the world. Yf any man haue an eare let hym heare. He that leadeth into captiuite shall go into captiuite: * he that kylleth wt a sweard must be kylled wyth a sweard. Here is the pacience, and the fayth of the sayntes. *Gen. ix. a mat. xxvi. t out of the earth, and had two hornes like a lãbe, and he spake as dyd the dragon. And he dyd al ꝑ the fyrst beaste coulde do in hys presence, and he caused the earthe, & them whych dwelt therin, to worshyp the fyrst beaste whose dedlye wounde was healed. And he dyd great wonders, so that he made fyre come downe from heauẽ in ꝑ sight of men. And deceaued thẽ ꝑ dwelt on the earthe, by the meanes of those sygnes whych he had power to do in the syght of the beast, saying to thẽ ꝑ dwelt on the earth: that they shulde makẽ an ymage vnto the beast, whych had the wounde of a swearde, and dyd lyue.

D And he had power to geue a spyrete vnto the ymage of the beste & that the ymage of the beast shulde speake, and shuld cause that as many as wolde not worshyppe the ymage of the beaste, shulde be kylled. And he made all, both smal and great, rych and poore, fre and bonde: to receaue a marke in theyr ryghte handes or in theyr foreheddes. And that no man might bye or sell, saue he that had the marke or the name of the beaste, other the nombre of hys name. Here is wysdom. Let him that hath wyt, count the nombre of the beast. For it is the nombre of a man, and his nõbre is syxe hundred, threscore and syxe.

¶ The lambe standeth vpõ the mounte Syon, & the vndefyled congregacyon wyth hym. The aungell exhorteth he to the feare of God, and telleth of the fall of Babylon.

A AND I loked, & lo, a lambe stode on the mount Syon, & wyth him an C. & xliii. thousande haupng his ✻ (name & hys) fathers name wrytten in theyr foreheades And I herd a voyce from heauen, as ꝑ sound of many waters, & as ꝑ voyce of a great thonder. And I herd ꝑ voyce of harpers harpynge wyth theyr harpes. And they songe as it were a newe songe, before the seat, and before the foure beastes, and the elders & no man man coulde learne the songe, but the hũdred and xliii. M. whyche were redemed from the earthe. These are they, whyche were not defyled wyth B wemen, for they are vyrgyns. These folow the lambe whyther soeuer he goeth. These were redemed frõ mẽ, beyng fyrst frutes vnto God & to ꝑ lãbe, & in theyr mouthes was found no gyle. For they are wout spot before ꝑ throne of God

And I sawe another aungel flye in the myddes of heauẽ hauinge ꝑ euerlastyng Gospell, to preache vnto them that syt and dwel on ꝑ earth, and to all nacions, kynredes, and tonges & people, saying wyth a loude voyce: ✻ Feare God, & Acte.xiiii.e geue honour to hym, for ꝑ houre of hys iudgemẽt is come: & worshyp hym ꝑ made heauen and earth, the see, & fountaynes of water: And ther followed an other aungel saying ✻ Babylõ is fallẽ ✻Esa.xxi.c Jere.li.a is fallen ꝑ great cytie, for she made all nacyons drynck of the wyne of her fornicacion.

And the thyrde aũgel folowed them saying ¶ wyth a loude voyce: Yf anye man worshyp the beast & hys ymage, & receaue hys mark in his forehead, or in his hãd, the same shal drynke ꝑ wine of ꝑ wrath of God, which is powred in ꝑ cup of hys wrathe, And he shalbe punysched in fyre and brymstone, before the holy aungels, & before the lambe.

And the smoke of theyr torment ascende the vp euermore. And they haue no reste daye nor nyght, whych worshyp the beast and his ymage and whosoeuer receaueth the prynt of his name Here is the pacyence of saintes. Here are they ꝑ kepe the commaundementes and the faythe of Jesu. And I herde a voyce from heauen sayeng vnto me, wryte: Blessed are the dead, whiche hereafter dye in the Lorde, euen so sayth the spirite: that they rest frõ theyr labours, but theyr workes folowe them.

D And I loked, and beholde a whyte cloude and vpon the cloude one sytting lyke vnto the sonne of man, hauinge on hys heade a golden crowne, and in his hande a sharpe sykel. And an other angell came out of the temple, crying wt a loud voyce to him ꝑ sat on the cloud. ✻ Thrust in thy sickle & repe, for thy tyme is come to repe for the corne of the earth is rype. And he ꝑ sate on the cloud thrust in his syckel on the earth, & the earth was reped. Joel. iii.e

And another aungell came out of the temple, whyche is in heauen, haupnge also a sharpe syckle: And another aũgell came oute from the aulter, whiche had power ouer fyre, and cryed wyth a loud crye to hym that hadde the sharpe syckle, and sayd: thruste in thy sharpe syckle, & gather the clusters of the earthe, for her grapes are rype. And the aungell thruste in hys sharpe syckle on ꝑ earth, & cut down the grapes of the vyneparde of the earth: and caste them into the greate wynefat of the wrathe of God, and the wynefat was troden without the cytye, & bloud came out of the fatt, euen vnto ꝑ horse bridles, by ꝑ space of a thousand, and. vi. C. furlonges.

¶ He seeth seuen aungels: haupng seuen vyalles full of wrathe

A AND I sawe another sygne in heauen great and merueylous, seuen Aungels, haupnge the seuen laste plages, for in them is fulfylled the wrath of God. And I sawe as it were a glassye see, myngled wyth fyre, & them ꝑ had gotten victory of the beast, and hys ymage and of the nombre of hys name, stande on the glassy see, haupnge the harpes of God and they sange the song of Moses the seruaunte of God and the songe of the Lambe, saying: Great, and marueylous are thy workes: ✻ Lorde God al- ✻Esa.lxvi.c Jerem.li.a myghtye, iuste and true are thy wayes, thou kynge of sayntes. Who shal not feare o Lorde, & glorifye thy name? For thou onely arte holy & al gentyles shal come and worshyp before the for thy iudgementes are made manyfest.

And after that, I loked, and beholde, the tẽ B ple of the tabernacle of testymonye was open in heauen, and the seuen Aungels came oute of the temple whyche hadde the seuen plages, clothed in pure and bryghte lynnen, and haupnge theyr brestes gyrded wyth golden gerdles. And one of the foure beastes gaue vnto the seuen aũgels seuen golden vyalles full of the wrathe of God, whyche lyuethe for euermore. And the tẽple was full of the smoke of the glory of God and of his power, and no man was able to entre into the temple, tyll the seuen plages of the seuẽ aungels were fulfylled.

AND I herde a greate voyce out of ỹ temple sayeng to the seuẽ aũgels: go your wayes, poure out your vialles of wrath vpon the earth. And the fyrst angell wente and powred out his vyall vpon the earthe, & there fell a noysome, and a sore botch vpon the men whych had the marke of the beaste, & vpon thẽ whiche worshypped hys ymage. And the secõde aungel shed out his vyall vpon the see, & it turned as it were into the bloude of a dead man: and euery lyuing thynge dyed in the see. And ỹ thyrd aungel shed out hys vyall vpon the ryuers & fountaynes of
B waters, and they turned to bloude. And I herde an aungell say: Lord, whyche art & waste, thou art ryghteous and holy, because thou hast geuẽ suche iudgementes, for they shed out the bloude of saynctes, and prophetes, and therfore haste ỹ geuen them bloude to dryncke: for they are worthy. And I heard another say: euen so Lord God almyghty: true & ryghteous are thy iudgemẽtes

And the fourth aungel powred out hys vyal on the sunne, & power was geuen vnto hym to vexe men wyth heat of fyre, & the men raged in great heat: & spake euell of ỹ name of God, whyche hathe powre ouer those plages, & they repẽted not of their euel dedes, to geue him glorye. And ỹ fyfte aungel powred out his vyall vpõ ỹ seate of the beast, & his kyngdõ wexed darcke, & they gnewe their tonges for sorowe, & blasphemed ỹ God of heauẽ for sorowe & payne of their sores, and repented not of theyr dedes.

C vpon the greate ryuer Euphrates, & the water dryed vp, that the wayes of the kinges of ỹ east shuld be prepared. And I sawe there vncleane spretes lyke frogges come oute of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the the mouth of ỹ beast, & out of the mouth of ỹ false Prophet. For they are the spretes of deuels worckynge myracles to go out vnto the kynges of the earth & of the whole worlde, to gather them to the battayll of mat.xxiiij.d ti,pet.iii.c & Tes,b.a that great daye of God almyghtye. *Beholde, I come as a theefe. Happy is he that watcheth, & kepeth his garmẽtes, lest he walke naked, & mẽ se hys fylthynes. And he gathered thẽ together into a place called in ỹ Hebrue tõge Armagedõ.

And the seuenth aũgel powred out hys vyall into the ayre. And there came a great voyce out of heauẽ frõ the seate, sayinge: it is done. And there folowed voyces, thondrynges, and lyghtenynges, & there was a great earthquake, such as was not sence men were vpon the earthe, so mighty an erthquake and so great. And ỹ great cytie was deuyded into thre partes, and the cyties of all nacyons fel. And great Babylõ came in remembraũce before God, to geue vnto her the cup of the wyne of ỹ fearsenes of his wrath Euery yle also fled awaye, and the mountaynes were not founde. And there fell a greate hayle (as it had ben talẽtes) out of heauen vpon the men, and the men blasphemed God: because of the plage of the hayle, for it was greate, and the plage of it, sore.

AND ther came one of the aungels, A which had ỹ seuen vyalles: & talked wyth me, sayinge vnto me: come, I wyll shewe vnto the, the iudgement of the greate whore ỹ sytteth vpõ many waters, with whom haue commytted fornicacion the kinges of the earthe, & the inhabyters of the earthe, are dronke wyth the wyne of her fornicacyon. And the spyrete caryed me awaye into the wyldernes. And I sawe a woman syt vpon a roose colored beast, full of names of blasphemye, whyche had seuen heades and ten hornes. And the woman was arayed in purple and rose coloure, and decked wyth golde, precyous stone, and pearles, & had a cup of golde in her hande, full of abhominacyons and fylthynes of her fornycacion. And B in her forehead was a name wrytten, a mistery, great Babylon the mother of whordome & abhominacions of the earthe. And I sawe the woman droncken wyth the bloude of saynctes, and wyth the bloude of the wytnesses of Jesu. And when I sawe her: I wondred wyth greate merueyle.

And the aungel sayd vnto me: wherfore marueylest thou? I wyll shewe the the mistery of ỹ womã, & of the beast ỹ beareth her, whych hath seuen heades and ten hornes. The beaste ỹ thou seest, was, and is not, & shal ascende out of ỹ bot tomlesse pyt, and shall go into perdicyon, & they that dwell on the earth shall wonder (whose names are not wrytten in the booke of lyfe frome the begynninge of the world) when they behold the beaste that was and is not. And here is a mynde that hath wysdome.

whych the woman sytteth, they are also seuen kynges. Fyue are fallẽ, and one is, and another is not yet come. And when he commeth, he must contynue a shorte space. And the beaste ỹ was, and is not, is euen the eyght, and is one of the seuen, and shall go into destruccyon. And the ten hornes whych thou sawest are ten kynges whiche haue receaued no kyngdom as yet, but shall receaue power as kynges at one houre wyth ỹ beast. These haue one mynde, & shall geue their power and strength vnto the beast. These shall fyght wyth the lambe, and the lambe shal ouercome them. *For he is Lord of lordes, & kyng of 1.Tim.vi.c kinges, and they that are on his syde, are called, and chosen, and faythfull.

sawest, wher ỹ whore sitteth, are people & folcke, and nacyõs, & tõges. And the ten hornes, whiche thou sawest vpon the beaste, are they that shall hate the whore, & shall make her desolate & naked, and shall eate her flesshe, & burne her wt fyre.

For

For God hath put in theyr hertes to fulfyll hys wyll, & to do wyth one consent, for to geue theyr kyngedome vnto the beast, vntyl the wordes of God be fulfylled. And the woman whyche thou sawest, is that great cyty, which raygneth ouer the kyngs of the earth

The.viii.Chapter.

The louers of the worlde are sorye for the fall of Babylon, but they that be of God haue cause to reioyce for her destruction.

A AND after that, I sawe another Aungell come frō heauen, hauyng great power, and the earth was lightened wyth hys bryghtenes. And he cryed myghtely wyth a strong voyce, sayinge: *Greate Babylon is fallen, is fallen, and Esay.xxi.e. Jeremy.l.a. is become the habitacyon of dyuels, and the hold of all foule spretes, and a cage of al vncleane and hatefull bydes, for all nacyons haue dronken of the wyne of the wrath of her fornycacyon. And the kynges of the earth haue commytted fornycacyon wyth her, & the marchauntes of the earth are wexed rich of ꝑ aboūdaunce of her pleasures

B And I hearde another voyce from heauen saye, come awaye frome her my people, that ye be not partakers of her sinnes, and that ye receaue not of her plages. For her sinnes are gone vp to heauen, and God hath remembred her wyckednes. Reward her euen as she rewarded you, and geue her double accordynge to her worckes And powre in double to her in the same cup which she fylled vnto you. And as much as she glorifyed her selfe & lyueth wantonly, so much sorowe ye

C in: for her punyshement & sorowe, for she sayd in Esa.xlviii.d her selfe: *I sytt beinge a quene, and am no wyddowe, and shall se no sorowe. Therfore shall her plages come in one daye, death, and sorowe, and hunger, & she shalbe brent wyth fyre: for strōge is the Lorde God whych shall Judge her. And the kynges of the earth shall bewepe her & waylher, whyche haue commytted fornycacyon wō her and haue lyued wantonlye wyth her, when they shall se the smoke of her burnynge, and shall stande afarre of, for feare of her punyshement, saye-

Jerem.li.a ing: *Alas Alas, that greate cyty Babylon, ꝑ

D myghty cytye: for at one houre is thy Judgemēt come. And the marchauntes of ꝑ earth shal wepe and wayle in themselues, for no man wyll bye theyr ware any more, the ware of golde and syluer, and precyous stones, nether of pearle, & raynes, and purple, and skarlet, and all thyne wodd and all maner vessels of yuerye, & all maner vessels of most precyous wod, & of brasse, and yron

* *(and marble,) & synamon, and odours, and oynte mentes, and frankensence, and wyne, & oyle: and fyne floure, and wheate, beastes, and shepe, & horses and charettes, and bodyes, and soules of men

And the apples ꝑ thy soule lusteth after, are departed from the. And al thynges whych were deynty e: and bad in pryce, are departed from the and ꝑ shalte fynde them nomore. The marchauntes of these thynges whyche were wexed ryche, shall stande afarre of from her, for feare of the punyshemente of her, weaypnge and waylynge and sainge:

Jerem.li.b * Alas, Alas, that great cytye: ꝑ was clothed E in raynes and purple, and scarlet, and decked wyth golde, and precyous stones, and pearles: for at.i.houre so great ryches be come to nought

And euery shyppgouernour, and all they that occupyed shyppes, and shippmen whyche worke in the see, stode afarre of, and cryed, when they sawe the smoke of her burnynge, sayenge: what cytye is lyke vnto thys greate cytie? and they caste duste on theyr heedes, and cryed weppynge Jerem. li b and waylyng & sayde: *Alas, Alas, that great F cytie, wherin were made ryche all that had shippes in the see, by the reason of her costlynes, for at one houre is she made desolate. Reioyce ouer her thou heauen, and ye holy Apostels and Prophetes: for God hath gyuen your Judgemente on her. And a myghtye aungell toke vp a stone lyke a great mylstone, & cast it into the see, sayenge: wyth suche vyolence shall that greate G cytie Babylon be caste, & shalbe found nomore And the voyce of harpers, and musycyons, and of pipers, and trompeters shalbe herde nomore in the: and no craftesman, of whatsoeuer craft he be shalbe founde eny more in the. And ꝑ soūd of a myl shalbe herde nomore in the, * (and candel lyght shalbe burnning nomore in ꝑ) & ꝑ voyce of ꝑ bryd-grome and of the bryde, shalbe herde nomore in the, for thy marchaūtes were the great men of ꝑ erth. And with thyne inchauntemente were deceaued all nations: and in her was founde the bloude of the Prophetes, and of the saynctes, and of all that were slayne vpon the earth.

Prayse is gyuen vnto god for iudgynge the whore, and for auengynge the bloud of his seruauntes. The aungel wyll not be worshypped. The foules and bydes are called to the slaughter.

A AND after that I herde a greate voyce of moch people in heauen sayenge: Alleluya Saluation, and glory, & honour, & power be ascrybed to the Lord our God, for trewe and ryghteous are hys iudgementes, for he hath iudged the greate whore whyche dyd corrupte the erth with her fornycation, and hath auenged the bloude of hys seruauntes of her hande. And agayne they sayde: Alleluia. And smoke rose vp for euermore. And the.xxiiii.elders, and the.iiii beastes fel dowue & worshypped God that sate on the seate, sayenge Amen, Alleluya. And a voyce came oute of the seate sayeng: prayse our B Lorde God, all ye that are hys seruauntes and ye that feare hym both small and great. And I harde the voyce of moche people euen as the voyce of many waters, & as the voyce of strōge thunderynges sayenge: Alleluya, for the Lorde our God omnipotent raygneth. Let vs be glad and reioyce, and gyue honoure to hym, for the marryage of the lambe ys come, and hys wyfe made her selfe ready. And to her was graunted that she shulde be arayed wyth pure and goodly raynes. For the raynes is the ryghtewesnes of Mat.xxii.a Luke.xiii.a saynctes. And he sayd vnto me, wryte, *happy are they whyche are called vnto the supper of ꝑ lambes maryage: And he sayde vnto me: these ace ꝑ true saynctes of God. And I fel at his fete to worshyp him. And he sayd vnto me: se thou do it not. For I am thy felowe seruaunt, and one of

mony of Jesus. Worshyppe God. For the testy mony of Jesus is the spryte of prophecye. And ¶ I sawe heauen open, and beholde, a white horse and he that sat vpon hym was called faythfull and true, and in ryghtwesnes he doth iudge and make batayle. His eyes were as a flame of fyre, and on hys heade were manye crownes, and he had a name wrytten, that no man knewe but he hym selfe. * And he was clothed wyth a vesture Esa.lxiii.c. dyppte in bloude, & hys name is called the worde of God. And the warryars whiche were in heauen, folowed hym vpon whyte horses, clothed wyth whyte and pure raynes, and oute of hys mouth went a sharpe two edged swerde that w̄ it he shulde smyte the heathen. And he shall rule them with a rod of yron, and he trode the wyne
D fatt of fearsnes and wrath of almyghtye God.
And hath on his vesture & on hys thygh a name wrytten: Kynge of kynges, and Lorde of Lor-des. And I sawe an aungel stande in ỹ sonne and he cryed wyth a loude voyce, sayenge: to al the foules that flye by the myddes of Heauen:
come and gather youre selues together vnto ỹ supper of the greate God, that ye maye eate fesh of kynges, and the flesche of the hye captaynes, and the flesche of myghty men, and the flesche of horses, and of them that syt on them, & the flesche of all free men and bonde men and of small and greate. And I sawe the beaste, and the kynges of the earth, and theyr warriers gathered together to make batel agaynst him ỹ sat on ỹ horsse and agaynst his soudyars. And the beast was taken, & w̄ hym ỹ false prophete ỹ wrought myra-cles before hym, wyth whiche he deceaued them that receaued the beastes marke, and them that worshypped hys ymage. These both were cast quycke into a ponde of fyre burnyng wyth bryn stone: and the remnaunte were slayne wyth the swearde of hym that sat vpon the horse, whiche swearde proceded out of hys mouth, and all the foules were fulfylled wyth theyr flesche.

A AND I sawe an aungell come downe from heauen, haupnge the keye of the bottomlesse pyt, and a great chayne in hys hand.
And he toke the dragon that olde serpent, which is the deuel and Satan, & he bounde hym a thou sand yeres: and cast hym into a bottomlesse pyt and he shut hym vp, and set a seale on hym that he shulde deceaue the people nomore, til the thou B sande yeres were fulfylled. And after that he must be losed for a lytel season. And I sawe seates, and they sat vpon them, and iudgemēt was geuen vnto them: and I sawe the soules of thē ỹ were beheaded for the wytnes of Jesu, & for ỹ worde of God: and whych had not worshyp ped the beast nether hys ymage nether had taken hys marke vpon theyr forheades, or in their handes: and they lyued, & raygned wyth Christ
a. M. yere: but the other of the deed men lyued not agayne, vntyll the thousande yere were fynyshed. Thys is that fyrste resurreccyon. Blessed & holy is he, ỹ hath part in the fyrst resurrec-cyon. For on such shall the second death haue no power but they shalbe the Preastes of God & of Chryst, & shal raygne wyth hym a thousand yere
* And when the. M. yeares are expired, Sathā shalbe lowsed oute of hys pryson, & shal go oute to disceaue the people, which are in the. iiii. quarters of the earth, Gog & Magog, to gather them together to battel, whose nōbre is as the sand of the see: & they went in the playne of the erth: and compassed the tentes of the sayntes aboute, and the beloued cyty. And fyre came downe frō God out of heauen, & deuoured them: & the dyuel ỹ dyd ceaued them, was cast into a lake of fyre & brym stone, where the beaste & the false prophetes shal be tormented daye and nyghte for euermore.

¶ et. xxbiii. e and. xxiii. d

And I sawe a great whyte seate, & hym ỹ sat
on it, frō whose face fled away both ỹ erth & heauē & theyr place was nomore founde. And I sawe the dead, both great & small stande before God.
And the bokes were opened, & another boke was opened, whych is the booke of lyfe, and the dead were Judged of those thynges which were wryt ten in the bokes accordynge to theyr dedes, and the see gaue vp the dead which were in her, and death, & hell delyuerd vp the dead, whych were in them: and they were Judged euery man acco dyng to hys dedes. And death and hell were cast into the lake of fyre. Thys is the seconde death.
And whosoeuer was not founde wrytten in the booke of lyfe, was cast into the lake of fyre.

A AND I saw a newe heauen & a newe earth. For the fyrst heauen: and the fyrste earth were vanyshed awaye
& there was nomore See. ✝ And I John sawe the holye cytye, new Je rusalē come downe from God out of heauen pre pared as a bryde garnyshed for her husbonde.
And I hearde a greate voyce out of heauen saying: beholde the tabernacle of God is wyth mē and he wyll dwell wyth them. And they shalbe hys people, and God hym selfe shalbe wyth them and be theyr God. * And God shall wype away all teares from theyr eyes.
And ther shalbe nomore deeth, nether sorowe, nether criēg, nether shal ther be eny more pain, for the olde thynges are gone. And he that sate vpon the seate, sayde: * Beholde, I make all thinges newe. ✝ And he sayd vnto me: wryt, for these wordes are saythfull and true.

And he sayd vnto me: it is done, I am Alpha geue to hym that is a thyrst, of the well of the water of lyfe, fre. He ỹ ouercommeth shall enenherete all thynges, and I wyll be his God, ¶ and he shalbe my sonne. But the fearfull and vnbeleuing, & the abhominable, & murtherers, and whoremongers, & sorcerers, and ydolaters and all lyars shall haue theyr parte in the lake which burneth with fyre and brymstone, which is the seconde death.

And there

And there cam vnto me one of the seuen aungels which had the seuen vyalles full of the seuen laste plages: and talked with me sayenge: come hyther, I wyll shewe the the bryde, the lambes wyfe. And he caryed me awaye in the spyete to a greate and an hye mountayne, & he shewed me the great citie holy Jerusalem, descendyng out of heauen from God: hauyng the D bryghtenes of God. And her shyning was lyke vnto a stone most precious, euen lyke a Jasper cleare as Cristall: and had walles greate and hye, and had .xii. gates and at the gates. xii. aungels: and names written, which are the names of ỹ. xii. trybes of Israell: on the East part. iii. gates, and on ỹ Northpart. iii. gates, and towardes ỹ South. iii. gates, and frō the west. iii gates, & the wal of ỹ citie had. xii. fūdaciōs: and in thē ỹ. xii. names of the lambes. xii. E And he that talked with me, had a golden rede to measure the citie withall and ỹ gates therof and ỹ wall therof. And the citie was built. iiii. square, and ỹ lēgth was as large as the bredth, * and he measured ỹ citie with the *(golden) rede xii. M. furlonges, and ỹ length and the bredth, and the heygth of it, were equall. And he measured the wal therof: an. Cxlviii cubytes: the measure ỹ the aungell had, was after the measure that man vseth. And the buldyng, of the wall of it was Jasper. And the citie was pure golde lyke vnto clere glasse, and the foundacyons of the wall of the cytie were garnysshed wyth all
F maner of precyous stones. The fyrst foūdacion was Jaspis, the second Saphyre, the thyrde a Calcedony, the fourth an Emeralde, the fyfte Sardonix, the syxt Sardeos, the seuēth Chrisolyte, the eyght Berall, the. ix. a Topas, the tenth a Crusoprasos, the eleuēth a Jacynte, the twelueth an Amatist. The twelue gates were twelue pearles, euery gate was of one pearle, and the strete of the citie was pure gold as thorowe shynyng glasse. And I sawe no temple
G therin. For the Lorde God almyghty and the lābe are ỹ temple of it. * And the citie hath no nede of the sonne, nether of ỹ mone to lighten it. For the bryghtnes of God dyd light it, and the lābe was the lyght of it. And the people which are saued shall walke in the lyght of it. And the kynges of the earth shall bryng theyr glorye
* *(And honour) vnto it. * And the gates of it are not shut by day. For ther shalbe no nyght ther.
* *(And into it shall they bryng the glory and honoure of the nacions) And there shall enter into it none vncleane thing, nether whatsoeuer worketh abhominacion or maketh lyes: but they onelye whiche are written in the lambes boke of lyfe.
